Saddam Hussein's announced plan yesterday to withdraw from Kuwait after three days of a mas-sive ground war could be an at-tempt to retain his political power, according to several UK profes-

But it probably would not deter the U.S. plan to continue its military offensive and remove him from power, some said.

Speaking about alternatives to war in the Persian Gulf, about 50 activists gathered last night in Lexington's Central Public Library to express their feelings toward U.S. involvement in the Middle East.

"Those who have reservations about the Gulf War have a dilema," said Richard Mitchell, cochair of the Council for Peace & Justice, who co-sponsored the event. # Wimp brings rising Tide to Rupp

It's late February, and anyone who follows Southeastern Conference basketball knows what that means — Alabama is making its annual run at the league title. Coaches preach about "peaking at the right time," but Alabama coach wimp Sanderson seems to have a solid grasp on what it takes. The Crimson Tide has been in the championship game of the SEC Tournament seven of the last nine years and has won the last two. "It hink they've come together at the right time — when you want to come together," UK coach Rick Pitino said. "And they're going to be a good NCAA team.

ino said. "And they're going to be a good NCAA team."

Alabama enters tonight's 9:30 pm. game against UK at Rupp Arena having won seven of its last nine games, including a 97-72 whipping of Mississippi State last Saturday. But that is no accident.

"We work very hard at getting outeam to play hard all year," Sanderson said yesterday on the SEC Teleonference. "We particularly stress playing well at the end, though, when it means the most."

The Crimson Tide (17-8, 11-5 SEC) finds itself one game behind conference front-runners UK and LSU, both 12-4 with two games remaining.

"If we win the last two games, I think they could be part of that — a tainly something the Wildcats have strived for.

"I've seen a lot of players and a lot of great teams here," UK forward John Pelphrey said, "I've always wanted to be part of this... When you come to Kentucky, that's what you want. You want to be part of it."

"It's something you have to realize because we're on probation and to win the (SEC) championship will make us remembered," UK center Reggie Hanson said.
Yes, being on NCAA probation, few expected the Cats to win 20 games and still be in the hunt for the regular-season title with only a week left.

"I think none of us expected this," Pitins said. "Let's be honest. None of us did except for a couple of people who don't ever see Kentucky losing one game.

play, UK still being in the conter-ence title hunt has helped the Cas-stay focused on winning games.

"Being on probation the last two years, sometimes you're wondering what you're playing for," said Han-son, who will be playing in his sec-ond-to-last game at UK tonight."... But (winning the SEC title) would make it special."

Tonight's game does not onlight. "... But (winning the SEC title) would make it special."

Tonight's game does not only have conference title ramifications. Also at stake is the Cats' 19-game win streak at Rupp Arena, where UK is 199-26 (88.4 percent) since it opened in 1976. The Cast sats lost at Rupp on Dec. 30, 1989 against Louisville.
"Nobody has gone to Kentucky and won yet," Sanderson said, "so it's certainly going to be a difficult task."

The last time UK and Alabama

it's certainty going to be a difficult task."

The last time UK and Alabama played, the Crimson Tide snapped the Cats' 10-game win streak with an 88-83 defeat in Tuscaloosa, Ala. In that game, though, Alabama had a 14-point lead with 6:57 remaining, but UK made a late surge via full-court pressure and cut the deficit to two before the Tide hit nine of 10 free throws in the final 1:33 to secure the win.

1:33 to secure the win.
"I think we did a great job execut I think we did a great job executing against the press for the most part, but that was here," Sanderson said. "Up there, of course, you have to not let the crowd get to you, which it will do at some point, of course."

Despite poor finish, Katfish improving

Overall, I think we had a good meet."

UK's men finished last out of seven, and the women finished seventh out of eight. But some Katfish performers stood out among the elite.

UK senior Kellie Moran, the school's first female All-American, added a bright spot. She qualified for the NCAA championships in three areas: the 50-meter, 100-meter, and 200-meter freestyle events.

She placed sixth Thursday night in the 50 freestyle with a time of 23.67. Her 1:49.18 time was good for a third-place finish Friday in the 200-meter freestyle friday in the 200-meter freestyle might in the 100 freestyle with a time of 51.07.

"I was real happy about it (the performance)." Moran said.
"One of my goals was to make Top 5, and I made Top 5 in the 100 (freestyle) tonight... I expected to do a little bit better but on a four-day top taper you can't cally tell what you're going to do."

The University of Florida, how-ever, dominated the champion-ships. It won both the men's (831 points) and women's (744 points) stips. It won both mem's (634 points) competitions. In the men's, Tennessee finished second (600 points), Alabama third (507 points), Coorgia fithe (415 points), Auburn sixth (364 points) and UK seventh (235 points), Georgia placed second in the women's competition with 630 points, Tennessee came in third (480 points), Alabama fourth (421 points), Auburn fith (404 points), LSU sixth (385 points), UK seventh (277 points) and Vanderbilt eighth (197 points). Although UK placed at the bottom of the list, 15 swimmers placed in the Top 16 in all categories and two women divers in the Top 8 on the final day of competition.

Presentations fueled with hate, not solutions

Last Thursday an unusually large crowd showed up at the Stu-dent Center Ballroom to hear speeches by long-time civil rights ac-tivist Dr. Kwame Toure (formerly Stokely Carmichael) and rap art-ist Kris Parker (KRS-ONE).

Few events on campus will draw more than 1,000 people from ist Kris Parker (KRS-ONE).

Few events on campus will draw more than 1,000 people from campus and the local community, young and old, black and white, for an almost three-hour presentation. But these two dynamic speakers had the crowd cheering, clapping, even laughing.

Unfortunately, though, this was in response at times to harsh, hateful and violent appeals by the two men. They seemed to draw more on one-sided emotion than the very intellectual facilities they implored the audience to use.

Both Toure and Parker are leading figures among many black Americans. According to a press release for their talks, Parker has used rap music, talks and the formation of organizations such as Stop the Violence Movement "to teach the lesson of black self-empowerment and more broadly, the uplif of humanity."

Dr. Kwame Toure has been a leader in the civil rights, black power and Pan-African movements for more than 20 years, creating such political organizations as the Black Panther Party and the All-African People's Revolutionary Parry.

It is particularly important in a month specially designated to educate people on the history of and issues concerning black Americans to hear what leading individuals have to say about black American concerns. However, the content of the message they presented on campus — and the favorable reaction by most in the audience — present still other troubling concerns.

Parker quite rightly criticized the "consciousness of the masses" of American people. He said that we too often are caught napping due to the "sleep techniques" of educational and religious systems that do not promy tust o question our society and circumstances. He said we are taught by "barbarians" and "this is why we have to that do not prompt us to question our society and circumstances. He said we are taught by "barbarians" and "this is why we have to question every single bit of information we get." In that spirit, we would hope people certainly would question some of the informa ed by Parker and Toure

Parker said that the educational system ignores many of the contributions that African-Americans have made to the world, which probably is true in many senses. But, in saying that, he added that Aristotle was "no more than a petty thief and a liar" and Greece should be considered equivalent with theft, because the Greeks' ideas came out of Africa, not Greece.

He compared the treatment of black Americans in America with the feet of the incompared the treatment of the compared the compared the compared the treatment of the compared the

He compared the treatment of black Americans in America with that of Jews in Germany during the Holocaust, claiming that the Jews had one Hitler, but "we have a president every four years.— we have a Hitler every four years.— "The American flag ultimately is worse than the swastika.... You are African. America hands you death. Africa hands you life," he said.

Does that kind of rhetoric really teach the "uplift of humanity"? In trying to espouse black pride and power, it seems these kinds of remarks do more to breed alienation and hatred.

Toure was even more blatant about the need for violence to liberate black Americans in this "barbaric" country and to overthrow reate black Americans in this "barbario" country and to overthrow the "stupid, vicious system" of capitalism — which, incidentally, gave him the freedom and the speaker's fee to lecture against them. "Non-violence cannot be a weapon in a violent world," he said. Although he said individuals should think for themselves, there was some degree of pressure on the audience to join his revolutionary group.

Most in the audience seemed to think both speakers were absolutely correct in their assertions — and that's cause for some concern. One student from Kentucky State University said Parker was "right on the money. He's very right."

Some may think this advocation of hatred and violence is justified by social conditions, but one has to question its ability to affect by social conditions, but one has to question its admity to affect good changes.

One also has to question the degree to which the sponsors of this duel presentation agree with what was said. The event was jointly sponsored by the Student Activities Board, Chancellor's Office, Student Government Association, Office of Minority Affairs and Black Student Union.

Certainly it is important to bring speakers to campus who will expose us to new ideas and challenge previous assumptions, and perhaps their message "needed to be said on this campus," as one organizer of the event said. But the troubling content of this particular presentation should not be casually overlooked.

nuzer or me event said. But the troubling content of this particular presentation should not be casually overlooked.

Perhaps these groups would consider bringing to campus other speakers who see other alternatives to changing the conditions of many black Americans. This would go beyond a malicious tirade and ensure more of an intelligent dialogue on a very important subject. Only then can we truly "raise our consciousness," as Parker himself would say.

often following fairly predictable stages.

First, let's look at the particular circumstances that you describe in which very sudden and unexpected death occurs.

There is no advanced warning, so there are no good-byes or initiation into the grieving process. Often after the initial disbelief and/or denial anger sets in. The anger can be directed at the deceased for taking her/his own life, in the case of suicide, or for leaving the grieving person behind.

There is often anger at God or fate because the tragedy was allowed to happen. Often there is anger at oneself for not being more

We often get mad because we

We often get mad because we hurt.

The next person usually experiences the hurt and sadness due to the loss of someone important or dear. There is the loss of the good things that came from relating to the deceased and the disappointment and sadness over the loss of the good things that could have been.

the good things that could have been.

This hurt and sadness can last a long time, as long as it takes to accept and deal with the empty place created by the death. This sense of loss is generally in proportion to the significance of the deceased of the grieving person.

The more important, cherished and esteemed the person was to the grieving person, the longer the grieving will last.

Often, the whole first year is difficult because it marks the first time certain holidays or special occasions occur without the deceased.

The occasion itself then becomes a reminder of the loss. Therefore, mourning can last for a while, so be patient with your girlfriend.

You seem to imply that you think the girl who committed suicide wasn't that important to your girlfriend anymore. I encourage you to have your girlfriend talk about her old friend and try to learn the significance of the relationship for your girlfriend.

Don't be afraid to bring up this situation for fear that you will make your girlfriend. Situation for fear that you will make your girlfriend sad; she needs to girlfriend sad; she needs

Having someone acknowledge that something important has happened is very comforting to the grieving person.

You mention that your girlfriend seems more serious than she was before the death. Facing death brings up the issue (readily denied and forgotten by all of us) that there is nothing permanent about our lives, including our own mortality.

Facing death and our own even all death certainly can provoke a period of introspection. Meaning has to be made of life with death as 301 Frazee Hall or call, 257-8701.

Military officials said American units were having "tremendous success" in their first battle with the tough Republican Guard.

The forwardmost American troops were 75 to 90 miles into Iraq, said informed sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

offensive to free Kuwatt of Iraq so control.

Marines and U.S. paratroopers inghtened their grip around Kuwait City, But one U.S. official said "it's soing to be while" before the Amer-icans or allied Arab troops fight house to house to retake the capital. Saudi commander Lt. Gen. Khalid bin Sultan said the Iraqis continued a reported terror campaign of "rape, murder and torture" in the city, and wamed they would be "held respon-sible before an international court." In Washington, Bush, continuous-ly updated by his generals on the progress of the war, told a White House audience the campaign was "on course and on schedule."

In homb-battered Baghdad, meanwhile, where residents were shaken from their sleep by thunderous explosions overnight, military communiques claimed unbroken triumphs for Iraq's troops.

The ruling party's newspaper urged Iraq's soldiers and all your force to salvage the nation from the abyss of slavery."

The Desert Storm offensive was launched early Sunday along a 300-mile front stretching from the Persian Gulf coast deep into the western desert.

Under cover of fighter-bombers, columns of tanks and troops from the United States, Saudi Arabia, France, Britain and seven other nations rumbled across the Saudi border, kicking up billowing clouds of dust as they rolled up mile after mile of Iraq's-held territory.

The unfolding strategy appeared aimed at pinning down the Iraqis in Kuwait City with Marines and Saudi and Kuwaiti forces, while sending along its northern frontier.

As part of the western push, U.S. airborne troops leapfrogged by helicopter at least 50 miles into Iraq on Sunday to establish a forward support base.

A U.S. command spokesman, Marine Brig, Gen, Richard Neal, characterized Iraqi resistance yesterday as light to moderate.

The picture of battlefront activity remained sketchy.

The command was issuing only limited operational information, and dispatches from reporters in news pools at the front were slow in reaching rear areas.

Neal said 270 Iraqi tanks had been destroyed in the operation's first two days, including 35 of the top-line 17-72s, the Republican Chard's main battle weapon.

The Marines engaged an Iraqi armored and mechanized-infantry force in Kuwait late yesterday morning, and destroyed 50 to 60 tanks, Neal said.

In a later action, Army tanks operating with Marines battled more than 150 Iraq tanks and personnel carriers and "initial reports indicate again tremendous success," he said.

Another senior U.S. military official said the second clash involved a unit of Republican Guard tanks.

Dut it was not known whether they were being knocked out by U.S. waplanes or tanks.

Said Neal: "We're running into a substantial number of tanks and defeating them. We're enjoying success. They're being beaten."

But Iraq retained powerful weapons, Scud missilemen fired off one of their ballistic weapons yesterday evening at this Saudi city and military center 200 miles south of the border, and is struck a U.S. military barracks, demolishing the building.

uncover enemy positions and tear gas to control POWs in Vietnam, and the reciprocal bombings of Al-lied and Axis controlled cities in World War II. In addition, Almond said he felt numerous violations were committed lied and Axis controlled cities in World War II. In addition, Almond said he felt numerous violations were committed against the U.S. during World War II and in the Korean and Vietnam conflicts in which the U.S. did not take action against the violators.

"The Iraqis have had plenty of precedent for doing what they have done," Almond said. He said that precedent of U.S. inaction could work to the disadvantage of any human rights abuse case, which might be brought against Iraq.

"By failing to bring war crimes cases against (other violators)," Almond said, "the war crimes route for dealing with these crimes might very well be in jeopardy."

Almond said, "the war crimes myth very well be in jeopardy."

Almond said some alternatives to a war crimes trial in a United Nations setting would include a trial by a court with "territorial jurisdiction" or to "create a court from scratch like the Nuremberg trials."

Prosecution of violators of environmental protection laws is an area of international law that Almond said he feels will be difficult to deal

Almond said policy in this area probably would be determined by what he called customary international law. "Customary international law is the law which evolves with between states through what they will tolerate with respect to the behavior of each other," Almond said. "This is similar to the process of development of common law. This customary international law among so-called civilized states becomes a law which they respect."

Almond said the problem with dealing in customary international law is that it exists mainly through treaties and agreements, which many times is unclear.

vareid covered the fall of France to Hitler's hores. He did it live, on radio.

His method basically was the same way Americans got the news from Baghdad that the Persian Gulf war had begun. Sure, the war was on TV. But all you saw were maps and photographs of the reporters calling in the story,

"So far, it's been all right, it seems to me." Sevareid said of the new old-fashioned way of instant war news, in which satellite technology has made possible a first—live shots of missles in Saudi Arabia.

"It's a scramble," he said of the pressure going live puts on TV reporters covering the war. "They're going to get some things wrong. But that's the way it's. It's not like composing a weekly essay on war and peace."

But it was as much a scramble in the early days of World War II, perhaps more so, even though Sevareid said. "I had some pretty good scoops simply because of radio" and its swift transmission of breaking news, he said.

and its swift transmission of breaking news, he said.

Be it print or broadcast news, half the battle is getting the story out.
For TV correspondents at the Gulf War, that means a satellite uplink.
For Sevareid at the fall of France in 1940, it meant shortwave radio.
He'd make contact with CBS in New York and "we'd talk over the shortwave radio. Generally, you'd have time to talk ahead of the broadcast."

for the calls. Sometimes, as when covering the exodus of French civilians, soldiers and politicians from Paris in 1940, he would look for a transmitter, begin reporting and hope it got through.

"Sometimes, we had to go blind, "Sevareid said. He located a portable transmitter in southern France, got an engineer and began his radio report without advance warning.

"I had no two-way communication with New York. I'd just go on a French short-wave transmission, 'Calling New York, calling New York, calling New York, and hope they'd plug in the network. ... They did get it."

Good thing they did. He was the first to report that France was about to capitulate to Hitler and sue for an armistice.

After that, he joined Edward R.

Murrow in Inondon helping cover.

Sevareid, 78, retired from CBs
News in 1977 after a honored career as a correspondent and commentator. How would he, had he the desire, go about reporting the gulf war in this age of satellites and flashpoint immediacy?

"But it's tough. And I suppose going to get killed before this is over."

He laughed.
"I really don't know," he said by phone from his Washington, D.C., home. "They really don't seem to have much time to compose a piece on their typewriters. I'm not there, and I don't know what the scramble is.
"But it's tough And I suppose.

Mozart's 'Cosi' a fine wine

Cosi, fan tutte, Mozart (Phil-ipa) — With sopramos Karita Mattila and Elzhieta Szmytka, mezzo Anne Sofie von Otter, tenor Francisco Araiza, bari-tone Thomas Allen, base Jose van Dam. Academy of St Marin in the Fields, conducted by Sir Neville Marriner. Mozart's most modern, and most problematical, opera spar-kles like a glass of fine cham-pagne on this new release. Cosi, held in low esteem by critics during much of the 19th and early 20th centuries, has made a major comeback in recent years.

Audiences nowadays seem altuned to the moral ambiguities of Lorenzo da Ponte's libretto, in which two men, on a dare, pretend to go off to war, then return indisguise and pay court to each other's sweethearts. The women, who are sisters, succumb all too readily to the charms of the strangers.

Ultimately, the sisters are forced to acknowledge their betrayal and are reunited with their "proper" suitors. But the conventional happy ending leaves a bitter taste.

ry to some of his most sublime music.

There's no more beautiful ensemble in opera than "Scawe sia it vento," the trio in which the sisters and Don Alfonso, who is masterminding the deception, bid-farewell to the men.

Yet this number, like much of the score, has no edge to it, since the sincerity of emotion is called into question by the maneuverings of the plot.

This is especially true of the elder sister Fiordtligi's two showcase arias.

"Come scoglio," her declaration of eternal fidelity, is full of leaps and swoops that parody the operatic conventions of Mozart's day.

leaps and swoops that parody the operatic conventions of Mozart's day.

"Per pieta," sung as she is on the point of succumbing, is an almost ragic admission of frallty, yet Mozart gives it an ironic tinge by introducing horns that remind us her fiance is about to be cuck-olded.

Mattila does a superb job of bringing Fiordiligit to life. Her soprano is not flawless, but more vivid and interesting than most.
