EXHIBITION WILL BE GIVEN WEEK OF JANUARY 16

Advertising Display Will Be of Interest to Business Men and Students

Harvard Awards Under Edward Bok Foundation Will Also Be Exhibited

An advertising exhibition collected by Dr. J. B. Miner, head of the psychology department, will be exhibited during the week of January 16 in Room 204, Neville Hall from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

The exhibit will be of interest not only to students but to advertising and business men from Lexington and this vicinity. Students of advertising, marketing, art and business correspondence should find this exhibit of special value.

Much of the material was gathered from more than 200 exhibitors at the meeting of the International Direct Mail Advertising Association in Chicago. The collection also includes material on advertising which has been collected from time to time by the National Association of Teachers of Advertising of which Doctor Miner is a member.

Work done by classes in advertising in recent years will be exhibited. These include advertisements which have been prepared by students. There will also be exhibited a collection of the standard books on advertising which includes a system of business letter writing developed by the Palmer Institute of Autograph at Los Angeles.

One feature to be displayed is the Harvard awards under the W. Edward Bok foundation for distinguished services in advertising, planning and executing of campaigns, scientific research in advertising and distinguished services in advertising. In the contest more than 5,000 advertisements were submitted each year and 175 organizations and individuals completed. One research study in the first year's award comprised eight volumes. The Saturday Evening Post's plan for marketing and following through an advertisement will be displayed.

Not only newspaper advertising but all forms of block ads and direct mail advertising, broadside and outdoor advertising will be shown. Material on several important campaigns including direct mail order advertising which is being fostered by the large paper companies will be part of the display. These include mail cards, booklets, illustrative letters, novelties, envelope inclosures, house organs, etc.

The department has been especially interested in advertising research and has assembled the results of a number of extensive research studies made by advertising associations.

The first of the series of Cad's hops sponsored by the military department will be given tomorrow at the Men's gymnasium. Season tickets may be purchased at the door, the tickets being $1.50 for the series of five dances, or 50 cents for a single admission. Music will be furnished by the Masquerade orchestra.

Theta Sigs Invaade Newspaper Office; Hold Forth in Great Glee in Executive Positions

The mildewed bromide runs something to the effect that "woman's place is in the home." But not so with Theta Sigs. These industrious maidens, believing that their place is in the newspaper office, have invaded the last stronghold of the male students on the campus, and for a week have held forth in great glee in the executive positions of The Kernel staff. For the benefit of a possible few non-organizers, it is said that Theta Sigs Phi is an organization composed of members of the weaker sex who aspire to journalistic fame, and annually go on a spree in publishing an edition of The Kernel.

With the lure of a red held up before the bona-fide editor and managing editor of the paper, the members of the organization induced the said editors to relinquish for a week into the keeping of their own eager hands the reins of The Kernel, and since that time have indulged in a perfect orgy of writing, headlining, copywriting, and all the other tricks of the trade. And with what a changed aspect did

Dr. J. W. Pryor head of the department of anatomy and physiology, who with Mrs. Pryor, left for Europe June 1, 1927 on an extended leave return here Saturday night, January 7, and will resume instruction of his classes at the beginning of the forthcoming semester.

While in London, Doctor Pryor called on Sir Arthur Keith who knew him by reputation who arranged with him to make an address on his specialty, osteology.

On November 25, Doctor Pryor addressed the Association of Anatomists, 1927 on osteology. He was invited to give a paper and agreed with his utterances on the great subject which has occupied his time in research for many years. Doctor Pryor also gave a similar lecture to the Ecole de Medicine in Paris.

Doctor and Mrs. Pryor sailed from New York to Paris on the Majestic. They spent a week in Paris, visiting the battlefields, Versailles, and Fontenay-le-Comte. From there they went to Avignon in southern France and then to Nice and Monte Carlo where they viewed the famous Casino. They went to Edinburgh and later visited the lake country of England, whence they went to Carlisle, then via Furnace Abbey to London where they visited Windsor, Hampton Court, Kenilworth Castle and the city generally.

After spending two weeks in London, they went to Paris, where they stayed four months. Mrs. Pryor studied art at Colours School of Art, copying in the Louvre. "Mon Lisa and Raphael's 'Holy Family'."

Doctor and Mrs. Pryor sailed for home December 15, and reached New York on the "Man Lisa" on December 24. Where formerly they had been in New York they attended the wedding of Doctor Pryor's niece. They came back to Lexington with two beautiful spent weeks in New York.

MR. GORDON WILL BE HONOR GUEST

International Relations Study Group Will Entertain Extension Secretary of World Alliance at Dinner, January 19.

The International Relations Study Group of the university is to host Mr. Linley V. Gordon, guest of honor at an international relations dinner on January 19. Mr. Gordon is extension secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches.

This World Alliance is perhaps the largest of its kind in the world, and is actively engaged in promoting a thorough understanding between the nations of the world by means of branches in twenty-nine different countries.

In a great many instances, after his lectures the audience could not break up in any regular way, but remained for a long while after the address was over, asking questions and enjoying the wide-world outlook of their guest.

Mr. Gordon believes that the most important department of the present time is the new conception of our international responsibilities. He says: "One thing that impresses me as I go about the world is the increasing interest I find everywhere in the international questions. There is a great desire to know the answers to questions of international politics."

"The newspapers have sensed this demand and are devoting far more space to these questions than ever before. An official of one of the great news associations told me that news abroad now occupies at least four times as much as it did before the war. All the press associations and nearly all the leading American newspapers now have special correspondents stationed at Geneva to send out news about the League of Nations."

Mr. Gordon recently returned from a trip to the Mediterranean countries during which he visited councils of World Alliance for International Friendship. He speaks from first-hand information of conditions among the people of European countries.

'DULCY' IS LATEST STROLLER PLAY

Louis McDonald Is Chosen for Leading Male Part in Annual Production to Be Presented in March.

Louis McDonald has been selected to take the leading male part in "Dulcy," the annual production of the Strollers. The part of "Dulcy" has not been definitely decided upon, but it is thought that Miss Mary Virginia Halley and Miss Alice Spaulding will alternate in the role.

Mr. McDonald took an important part in the last Roman play, "Out-and-About," and was in the cast of the play selected as the best one given on Amateur Night. Miss Halley is a member of Strollers and took part in the young girl in the play. The organization, Miss Spaulding made a debut in dramatics at the university in the first play given this year by the Roman theater.

Henrietta Blackburn, who is a member of Strollers, has taken part in the last two productions portraying the part of the young girl in the play. Others who will have important parts are Frank Davidson, Charles Blaine and Leonard Washburn. It has not been definitely decided who will take the other four male parts and the remaining feminine role is between two girls.

The play will be produced under the direction of Addison Yeaman who is prominent dramatics at university. Those in charge hope to present the play sometime in March at the Opera House and then take it on the road for its spring tour.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL MAKES REPORT

Football Season for 1927 Is Financial Success; Contract for Next Fall Will Wipe Out Entire Debt.

The 1927 football season at the University of Kentucky was a financial success and the debt was reduced to a point where a contract for a certain number of years will wipe out the entire debt, on the sixth section of the stadium, that the council had assumed, according to a report made at the meeting of the athletic council of the university in the offices of Pres. Frank L. McVey.

The athletic council suffered by the Kentucky team, the 1927 season saw larger crowds than have ever before attended the home games and like crowds in attendance at games away from Lexington.

One of the athletic members, in giving the financial report, made tribute to the efficient financial statement of S. A. "Daddy" Boles, athletic director of the university. Expenses have been kept down to a minimum and with the sixth section of the stadium paid for by next fall, athletics at the University of Kentucky will be in a position to look so far as the athletic council's responsibility is concerned.

It was decided at the meeting to let contract for the setting out of hardy shrubs along the athletic field fence on Ross street and extending down the north side of the field to the north stadium on Euclid avenue. University authorities have been asked to have "tree holes" open for the last two years, and within the next year or two they hope the shrubbery will grow to such extent that it will serve as a barrier against peeping eyes when the Wildcats play football games or practice.

Those present at the meeting were President McVey, Dr. W. D. Funkhauser, Prof. Enoch Grehan, Prof. E. A. Bureau, John Stoll, Louis Hillemeier and S. A. Boles.

Alma Mater Club Is New Organization

The Alma Mater Club has been organized with Dulaney O'Rourke as president, and recognized as a campus organization by the senate and the faculty. The club is composed of sons and daughters of old students of the University of Kentucky. Mrs. McVey is sponsoring the organization which is formed for the purpose of bringing this group of students together in a closer bond and forming another link in the chain of Kentucky tradition. At present there are only a few members, but it is hoped that the organization will grow when once known to all students. Anyone is invited to join who has had a parent matriculated at the university. All those interested are requested to write Box 909 of the University Postoffice.

TO THE STUDENTS

The attention of all students is called to the following notice, which will be strictly enforced: "At the close of each semester and of each term of the summer session, those in charge of any department shall post lists of students who are delinquent in the financial obligations to the university and shall notify these delinquents, and shall send the lists to the registrar. No student will be allowed credit for his semester's or term's work, nor to register for the next semester or term, nor to graduate until all such obligations have been satisfactorily met."

RADIO PROBLEMS WILL BE STUDIED

Physics Department to Study Problems of Transmission and Reception by Issuing Questionnaire to Radio Owners.

The department of physics has planned to study some of the problems of transmission and reception as experienced by broadcasting stations. The department has asked the radio owners public to supply certain information concerning radio reception within an area of 500 to 1,000 miles of Lexington by means of the following questionnaire. Anyone who owns or has access to a radio is asked to fill in the slip according to the directions and mail it to the department of physics.

1. Underscore once the call letters of the station which fades more than any other station on the list; underscore twice the call letters of the station which fades more than any station except the first; underscore three the call letters of the station which fades more than any except the above mentioned.

2. Draw a wavy line under the call letters of those stations which, as a general rule, never fade appreciably.

3. Make a cross after each station to which you most frequently listen. Overcross once the call letters of the station which comes in strongest; overcross twice the station coming in next strongest; and thrice the station coming in third strongest. Do not consider whether the station in question fades or not.

4. Although the name is not necessary, please give your full address, including city, county and state.

Mischievous Monkeys Inhabit Kentucky University Campus; Will Be Used for Experiments

"Cheek! Cheek! Cheek!" Frank chatters, unaware of the contribution he is making toward man's civilized culture. One evening when a small creature of human beings who seem to lead such foolish existences. They have become very much at home over in the engineering building—these small creatures whose fathers hung by their tails from jungle trees and frisked among luxuriant tropical foliage.

Perhaps it seems strange that monkeys should be found on a university campus, particularly in a college where students learn about erecting skyscrapers, bridges, huge tanks, and the like. Dean F. P. Anderson, head of the engineering school, readily explains his motive. "It is our intention, in connection with our work in heating and ventilating, to tie in a series of experiments which we are conducting with the monkeys in order to determine the comfort zone in which man can live. Most people do not get the benefit of sunshine, unless they are continually out of doors. That is because ordinary window glass

BLUE AND WHITE QUINTET TO MEET COMMODORES HERE

Mauer's Charges. Prepared by Week's Workout. Ready to Face Tennesseans

Vanderbilt Hurt by Loss of Three Men Jenkins, McGinnis, McBrayer, Combs and Owens Are Slated to Start

The first real Southern Conference to be given the Wildcat name tomorrow night when the Vanderbilt Commodores arrive in Lexington for the week's basketball entrapment. This will be the fifth game on the Blue and White schedule, and will start at 8 o'clock.

Coach Johnny Mauer has touched the Wildcat charge off with a light workout all week and has pronounced them ready to face the Tennesseans in an effort to chalk up their second conference victory. Not much can be said of the Blue and White showing against Centre earlier in the week, but when turned loose on the local floor the Wildcat five can make it hard for any quintet.

Vanderbilt has been hit hard by the loss of three regulars and it should not be difficult opposition for the Blue and White. The Commodores, when turned loose on the local floor, will entrain for its eastward trip, playing Virginia, Navy, and Maryland on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Restaurant Rat Dines On Choice Snake Meat

Joe, Ted, Paul and Herman Are Victims of Ferocious Appetite

While carefree students were enjoying the Christmas holidays their snake friends, Mike, Joe, Ted, Paul and Herman were victims of a restaurant rat which had been placed in their cage for food.

All the snakes were buried with proper ceremonies with the exception of the one which was buried and hung on a bush outside of the Science building on the campus for several days.

Ray Stadelman, keeper of the snakes, is majoring in zoology at the university. Some time ago he began feeding all rats to his snakes and as these ferocious animals did no harm to the victims of Oscar's kingdom he thought they were invaluable.

Ray says he has learned his lesson and advises snake keepers to beware of restaurant rats as they are more likely to be poisonous than the rattles are to them.

NOTE!

Any organization on the campus which has a "tree hole" open for the next semester must file its application in the office of the dean of men before January 21, according to the surmise made by the Men's Student Council.

However, scientific investigation does not bother the small brains of Dean Anderson's pet monkeys. They would much rather eat peanuts or chat—in monkey fashion. The oldest member of the university menagerie is a sacred monkey of India, which once belonged to a vaudeville actor who played on the Keith circuit. One evening after his performance, the actor was approached by a ragged Italian, who spoke haltingly. "Flees mister, I want sell me some of those monkey my life. My monka. I no sell her — but I

THE UNIVERSITY AND THE LEGISLATURE—AN OPPORTUNITY

NOTE: The following editorial appeared in The Lexington Herald Sunday morning, January 8, 1928: With the outlook bright for a session of the general assembly...

This week the report of the board of trustees and President McVey will be in the hands of the lawmakers. In this report will be contained the requests of the administrative heads...

In addition to the usual appropriations for maintenance, the university will seek appropriations for new buildings to accommodate adequately growing needs and new conditions.

In drawing the budget for maintenance and advancement of education in Kentucky there are many things to be considered and in appropriating funds for educational purposes the matter of geography should be but a slight influence.

Legislators who study the organization of the university, familiarize themselves with its scope, will understand its activities and purposes and inform themselves as to its problems.

Another factor which will not furnish the opposition now that it has in the past, yet which may have its influence, is the false propaganda of student activities and social atmosphere on the campus of the university.

The opportunity to forward the cause of education in Kentucky will be presented and interested citizens, realizing the necessity of the adoption of the university's program, are confident that the legislature will not fail.

ALUMNUS SERVES FIRM FOR 25 YEARS

Chester M. Smith, 1902, Completes Quarter Century of Service With Western Electric Co.; Has Picture in Magazine.

The September issue of "Western Electric News," a monthly magazine published by the Western Electric Company, which has just reached our desk, contains the picture of an alumnus of the University of Kentucky who is rounding out 25 years of service with that company.

The alumnus who has served the Western Electric Company for 25 years is Chester Martin Smith, who was graduated from the College of Engineering with the class of 1902.

Mr. Smith went with the Western Electric Company immediately after his graduation and has served in various capacities during the years with them. He now is a sales engineer with the Merchandising department.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL TO INDORSE X-RAY DEVICE

At a meeting of the athletic council last Friday night, that body decided to present to the department of hygiene and public health a Buckley diaphragm from the point of view of being able to take pictures of the spinal column.
This is a rather expensive piece of apparatus but is very necessary in determining the nature of injuries to the spine.

It was stated at this meeting that the department of hygiene and public health had taken 100 X-Ray pictures of injuries to athletes during the football season.

REVELLE—TAPS

Attention!
Again the staff officers of The Kernel have surrendered their posts to the rank and file of the Th to Sig.
Again the regulars have taken a furlough without fear and trembling. They realize that the invaders are not raw recruits. They know that grueling hours of sentry duty they have put in through six semesters' hard campaigning; they appreciate the untiring manuevers over a seamless campaign and the fight-to-a-finish with a captured story that will not headline.

Yet it is disturbing to see the post overrun with new uniforms and strange war paint. Strange that the commander-in-chief regards not dimples and smiles and that even the glint of golden hair distracts not the stern brigadier-general.
We are making no report of skirmishes along the line, of short rations, of long assignments. Fortunately, there are no casualties and few A. W. O. L.'s. The flag over the post bearing the insignia, "The Kernel As Usual," has not been lowered during the engagement.
We thank the personnel of The Kernel for permitting us to use their parade grounds to try out our military tactics, and doubly thank the veteran officers of the department for their silent support.

Our official dispatch is:
General Public:
Maintaining position. Details in enclosed report. "The K reel."
Gen. Theta Sigma Phi, Chi Division.

WELCOME HOME!

Dr. J. W. Pryor, head of the department of anatomy and physiology at the University of Kentucky, returned last week from a six months' vacation in Europe, bearing with him honors and recognition from various renowned institutions on the continent and in England.
Doctor Pryor has been on the faculty of the university for more than twenty years. He was at one time head of the hygiene department in which capacity he served for many years. He has always been deeply interested in the study of osteology and has done extensive research work in that field. In fact, he took advantage of an opportunity offered him for further study along this line when he accepted the position as head of the department of anatomy and physiology.

While Doctor Pryor was in London, Sir Arthur Keith, who was familiar with his work and his reputation, arranged for him to make an address on osteology before the Association of Anatomists of Great Britain, Scotland, and Ireland. The members of the association are also members of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons. They listened to and discussed Doctor Pryor's paper on osteology, and were greatly impressed with his research work, which marks him as one of the foremost osteologists of his time.

While in Paris Doctor Pryor made a similar address to the Ecole de Medicine where he was laudably received by eminent French anatomists. His work in the field of science has won for him distinction both at home and abroad, and it is with pride that the university welcomes Doctor Pryor back into her midst.

WAILS OF THE WEAK

"Absene makes the heart grow fonder" is a delightful little maxim, but it doesn't work with professors.
Correct this sentence: "Women are too dumb for words."

The library complains of stealing. Our suggestion is to change book titles from "His Moment" to "Dictionary of Statistics," "Hungry Hearts" to "History of Medieval Central Africa," "Knee Plus Ultra" to "Latin Version of Sartor Resartus."

To flunk or not to flunk—that is the question. As if we had anything to do with it.

Fable: Two large boys walked through the campus in big, black fur coats. Nobody saw them.

Derivation of word "grip": "gr"—a sound, usually attributed to animals, denoting extreme displeasure; plus "ipe," cuss word of an extinct Siberian tribe.

VENICE

Cool silver moonlight . . .
Gleaming a sleek sheen . . .
On smooth, slimy . . .
Water . . .
Deep, dusky quiet . . .
Broken only
By the noise at intervals
Of Venetian housewives . . .
Emptying the evening garbage
Into the canal . . . —Gargoyle.

Heaven! What is the smell in the library?
Oh, that's just the dead silence they keep in there.

Both beautiful and dumb
My own true love must be;
Beautiful, so I'll love her,
And dumb, so she'll love me.

Who wrote this piece?
The program says "Aindante."
Who's that?
Don't display your dumbness—she's the daughter of the famous poet.

As the professor gazed at the freshman he sighed softly, "Many things have come to pass."

THE PROSPECTOR

By Le ROY SMITH
I have an idea that the Prospector's perverted sense of humor is going to get him in Dutch. He has, however, as the temerity to suggest a column of comment on women for the Theta Sigma Phi edition. I have discouraged him with no success. He has pointed out the probable consequence of such reckless action; I have inquired if he has considered that at present his hide is intact, whereas after the edition came out, he would be a poor risk for life insurance, accident insurance, fire insurance, or any old kind of insurance. He would just naturally be a poor risk.

But you know how prospectors are—backdoors, of course, and you know how backdoors are. You're read about prospectors and bachelors. Well, the prospector is such a determined breed of bachelor that he goes out and lives comfortably in a shack among his rocks on the pretext of hunting for gold when his actual purpose is to escape some female who has or has had matrimonial designs on him. Well, he knows how matrimony is read about matrimony. Maybe he had a friend that was married. So he goes out to live in the rocks, taking a pick and shovel along for the sake of appearances, and bar soap for the sake of old times.

Of course, there is another angle, perhaps he has the lady's word for it that his charms are magnified by the absence of a woman. He has ideas on women may be construed as having been brought about by an overdose of soap suds. Every time he absent-mindedly drops the pick on his foot instead of the place he was aiming at, he becomes a trifle more grouchy, and while the observations he makes on these occasions may not express his exact opinion of the charming lady who sent him out to that heathen country, still a pick in his foot, they come darn close to it.

So I concluded it would be little short of suicide to publish the Prospector's views on matrimony. I have a very fond of the old boy, and hope that he will die comfortably in his bed, instead of passing out with his boot on, somewhere over the campus. However, he doesn't reserve all his adverse comment for the ladies. The other night, after getting of some crack to the effect that the only difference between a cow chewing her cud and a flapper chewing her gum was that the cow looked like she might be thinking, some violet-scented suds passed us on his way to the sorority house.

From the recent expression he sported, along with the powder and hair tonic, and the skirt wrapped around each leg, it was evident that the only thought between his ears was whether the light of his life had gone out, or might be at home. I heard the Prospector remark that if the men and women continued to imitate each other, it would be a mean trick on the next generation. So you can see what a sour-natured old fossil he is. He went on: "I met a girl today who seemed to be a very nice girl. But that's just the trouble with girls—they seem to be, but usually aren't. They are the most artificial quantity on earth." I was about to protest that therein lies their

By Jesse Conrad, Doubleday, Page and Company, 1926.

Joseph Teodor Konrad Karenwolski was a native of Poland. Concerning his early life we are assured of two things: first, that he was quite poor; second, his life was anything but a happy one. These conditions, together with his wild desire for adventure, no doubt, account for his early novels.
In 1896, Conrad married an English girl of a prominent family. Financial matters were not so good as they might have been, and for this reason, he and his bride took possession of a small cottage at Ile Grande. It was at this time that he finished his first story, "An Outpost of Progress," and wrote "The Idiots." Conrad's outlook on life during his stay at Ile Grande was one of utter disgust and, in all probability, encouraged him to write "The Idiots."

BOOK REVIEWS

"Red Sky at Morning," by Margaret Kennedy. Published by Doubleday, Page and Company, 1927. Price $2.50.

"Red Sky at Morning" opens with a situation which is not at all out of tune with the name of the book, namely the awaiting a decision in the murder trial of Norman Crowne. In the early part of the story Miss Kennedy displays her ability to depict characters accurately and to be able to unfold and lay vividly before erstwhile readers the plot of her story.

The twins, who are the children of Norman Crowne, purchase Mank's Hall which they prepare to use as a means of dispensing charity to a few of their needy friends. Their cousin, after thinking the matter over, decides to take over the place, himself, and to convert it into a place in which he might make some biological experiments.

Miss Kennedy could not have chosen a better theme around which to weave her story. The tragedies of the twins, one of whom was married to Philip Luttrell despite her reluctance and after much discussion; the other, who was prone to follow in the wicked way of his father's foot-steps, are the main points around which the story is wound. Other characters, equally as good as these are introduced in a unique way to make the counter plot blossom through the excellence of the main plot.

"Red Sky at Morning" is a book which is well worth any one's time to read. It is thoroughly English in style, and at times meanders back to the Britain of old. Ample imagination is absent-mindedly dropped the pick on his foot instead of the place he was aiming at, he becomes a trifle more grouchy, and while the observations he makes on these occasions may not express his exact opinion of the charming lady who sent him out to that heathen country, still a pick in his foot, they come darn close to it.

Music, Stage and Screen

"Beau Sabreur" the sequel to "Beau Geste" is the feature attraction coming to the Kentucky next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. An all-star cast composed of Gary Cooper, Evelyn Brent, Noah Bery, William Powell and others, will essay the leading roles. While the production is replete with melodramatic, heart-stirring moments, the comedy touch is present in capable hands. "Beau Sabreur" promises to be an excellent photodrama.

Buck Jones is the star in a Western romance of adventure, "Black Jack," to be shown at the Ben All Sunday. The picture is a whirlwind romance of lawless days of old Nevada, and is replete with rare thrills. Barbara Bennett is the beautiful heroine of this production and a cast of unusual merit gives its support in one of the best westerns in many months.

The Metro-Goldwyn-May picture, "In Old Kentucky," will be shown at the Strand Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, with Helene Costello and James Murray playing the leads. The picture marks the return to the screen of Wesley Barry after an absence of two years. The production is a thrilling drama of beautiful women and fast horses, with the racing scene filmed at Churchill Downs, Latonia, the famous farms near Lexington.

"The Chinese Parrot," the feature attraction going to the Ben All next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, features Hobart Bosworth, Marian Nixon and Edmund Burns. It is a "Universal-Jewel" production, replete with thrills, adventure, gripping suspense, and a love theme that is intensely appealing.

Looking Over The Magazines

J. CLARK GRAVES
Mr. Sherwood Anderson, the author of "Winesburg Ohio" and many other well known books, has an interesting article, "Nearer the Grass Roots," in the January 4th issue of "The Outlook."

Another magazine very much like "The Outlook" is "Time." I have a decided aversion to the policy of the editors of this ultra-modern magazine. It seems to me that the modern reader is far too hurried if he has to have his news condensed and mutilated to the extent that the editors of "Time" see fit to condense and assimilate it for him. Much better, that Mr. More writes far better than the usual contributor to our intelligent magazines.

Love that worships in silence;

LOOK WHO'S BACK!

Howdy, folks! Look who's here! Santa Claus? Nope, he's gone back to the North Pole where such things as "I do not choose to run" and crack and better Ford's don't even crack the ice. Lindbergh, then? Naw, he learned about Kentucky from Camp Knox. Says flyin' across the Atlantic wasn't nothing compared with "vacationing" a few months at Camp Knox. Well, eggs-nogs, don't you know yet? It's me! Me and Akkie! We all the time said this institution couldn't get along without us and we wuz right, we wuz.

(Marriage hasn't lessened Akkie's ego any, nothing ever could).

"Course I hope you all feel like Akkie thinks you do, but I have my suspicions and I got my rights to 'em. When Akkie and I walked up in front of the Administration Building, I heard this stage-whisper: "Ye gods, I thought we were rid of 'em." Well, ain't it tough? You aren't entirely, but—a moment here, there—only thither, such is the life of great geniuses. Anyway, we're the bad pen-nises. (Quite subtle, that last).

Akkie sez she just knows you all are so glad we come back for a visit you'd even laugh at a joke about a Scotchman and, she added, "They can study for their exams so much better, poor darlings, after having seen me."

Lots of folks knew I was back by the bad English which appeared in the Kernel, so I was informed. That's all right. Whata matter with my English? George Washington had the same trouble and he couldn't spell well, either. (How'd you like that "spell well"? Pretty hot, eh?) and he was the Father of our country. Oh, me!

I tell you I hardly recognized the old place. There are entire too many of these new-fangled improvements. One thing your feet don't get quite as muddy as they did last year. There's so much pavement around you can't tell where the campus is, unless, of course, you're an old timer like me and Akkie or Uncle Enoch and Miss Margie. And then these strange children running around! Miss Turner sez they thinkriculated as freshmen but I think she's got it all wrong. She must have meant matriculated for kindergarten. This younger generation. I don't know what the world's coming to!

"I s'pose you upper classmen want to know how Akkie's marriage is progressing". Well, just fine, the Tunney-Dempsey fight has got nothing on them. No sir, that only lasted about an hour while their's is still going on, sorta like perpetual motion. Of course the stuff Akkie calls coffee wouldn't be exactly soothing to any man at 7 in the morning and then when you know what that does to a woman 'Nuff said.

Sure is, 'nuff said. Akkie's had 'uch a good time visiting that she's afraid she will forget how to fight 'fought over that, he'll strike a match on the next train with the determination to black her husband's cher eye as soon as she sees him. As for yours truly, I promised O. O. McIntyre I'd get back to ill old New York as soon as possible and tell him herein his column isn't as good as mine. Time's up. EDITOR PROPOSES CONTEST FOR IDEAS

Believes Universities Should Take More Prominent Part in Questions Which Involve Society.

Dr. Harold de Wolf Fuller, editor of New York, a magazine of ideas for the general reader, sponsored by New York University, quotes the late Professor Royce of Harvard, saying that the only immoral element at an intercollegiate football match is the audience. Commenting that the shrewdness of this remark comes home to alumni, Director Fuller says:

"Partisanship by alumni is understandable. It is human and, in spite of a modicum of the immoral, is wholesome. And now it has been augmented by the general public, which calls under the spell of vivid and excellent newspaper accounts of contests and forms emphatic judgments. It is a phenomenon upon which college authorities might build. Suppose that institutions of higher learning could get alumni and the general public as wrought up over ideas as they become over football games! This is not an impossible goal. An idea is the most exciting thing in life. Witness the wars and the peace which ideas have made. Witness the contrasting colossuses, Lenin and Mussolini, who mounted up to eminence on a dais. But to come nearer to the subject in hand, university professors and literati could lead the devoted following which football coaches and college teams have today. When Erasmus made the tour of great European cities, it was ideas, not football, which stirred the world.

"Our civilization since the war offers similar opportunities. Religion is in a state of flux. Moral values are waiting for revaluation. Modern problems of government turn up anew the whole question of political philosophy. Society is looking for a guide. The chance for a university to gain violent adherents in all these spheres is inviting. A national 'championship' in ideas would be something new and something to be envied."

Book Reviews

born into the Conrad family but their lack of appreciation for literature discouraged his father greatly. Borys was drafted into the war in 1916. This was a great shock to Conrad, not because his son must go to war, but because it made him realize that he was getting old. Borys' death added to the grief of his father and mother, but they realized that they must carry on their work. It was during this period that Conrad wrote "The Shadow Line."

"Chance," "Victory," and "Success" were some of the more important stories of Conrad's later life. They were written at a more mature age, and show corresponding difference in outlook. "Victory" was the last novel he wrote before the war.

It can be clearly seen from reading this biography that Conrad was a man physically weak, but mentally strong. He was prone to have frequent spells of grief which caused him no little anxiety. Mentally, he was stout and capable of producing great works. He was not of a happy nature, but was easily irritated and his opinion on all subjects, but disregarded the opinion of anyone else.

The story of Conrad's life, as written by Mrs. Conrad, makes most interesting reading. She does not go deeply into the details of his works, but does strictly with his life and the instances which served to make it an unusual one. The book is well worth reading both for information and for pleasure.

"The Roads of Melody," By Carrie Jacobs Bond. Published 1927.

A melodious journey with enough discords of life to make the end sweeter is typical of the life of Carrie Jacobs Bond. Everyone is familiar with the song "The End of a Perfect Day," but few realize how many heart-breaking days faded into tomorrow before the perfect day came. Mrs. Bond, the internationally known writer of songs has incorporated in her book all the kindness of humanity and bound it together with a class of tears. She reveals the understanding of true friends.

Her revelation is as subtle as music, for she emphasizes the loyalty of her friends and the few remarkable makes of those who proved false only serve to beautify a plaintive melody in her song of life. She has an indomitable will to succeed in song writing and she did. More than once the "March Slav" might be said to typify her existence as she tramped from office to office seeking recognition. But after it all came "The Perfect Day" and success.

NEW ONE HOUR COURSE OFFERED SECOND TERM

The departments of Psychology and English are announcing a new course to be offered the second semester—"Conference On Life Interests." The work of the class will be unique in that the instructors will take little or no part in the discussion. The class will be divided into groups of ten or twelve students each. The groups will meet various instructors in rotation and discuss the following topics:

- The Influence of the Automobile on American Life.
- The Athletic Situation in American Universities.
- Higher Education in a Democracy Is One Justified in Taking Law into One's Own Hands.
- Revolt Against Social Customs.
- The Next Presidential Election.
- Inter-racial Relationships.
- Over-population.
- Installment Purchasing.
- The Successful Man.
- Racing and Betting.

The teachers will be Professor Salsfield, Horton, Brady, E. P. Davis, Knapp, Vandenschick.

The course will be one hour a week in credit.

No less great than Mrs. Bond's son, Jacobs Bond, who left school at 13 to help support his mother and never during all his struggle had been able to her his great desire to be a physician. That a son would struggle for his mother as her son did, and subordinate his life to her because he desired to do so is indeed a tribute.

Mrs. Bond does not pretend to be a long writer of note, but rather one who reaches the heart of her public. Her autobiography is as unassuming and inspirational as her son "The End of a Perfect Day."

charm, reasoning that there ought to be some charm about them, but you can't argue with these old fellows who interrupt you, just as you are sized with a bright idea.

Sometimes, alas, I find a girl that the Prospector seems to take quite a fancy to, and he voices his approval something like this: "Observe, you fanned. She dresses her hair to suit her type. Most of them try to adopt their type to the way the barber cuts their hair."

Oh, well, what can you do with a man like that. Personally, we feel assured that there is comparative safety in numbers. Comparative is an excellent word. Actually, we must accord to the ladies some very intriguing qualities, and in the light of such concession, fit the age of discretion in the average man at approximately 77, at which time he may die peacefully and make his escape.

P. S. The ladies will kindly recall that the Prospector wears a long 'nay beard, and refrain from shooting at anyone not answering this description.

The Cream of the Tobacco Crop

"The growth of LUCKY STRIKE Cigarettes is a wonderful thing but there is a reason. I know, because I buy the Tobacco for LUCKY STRIKE. I buy 'The Cream of the Crop,' that mellow, sweet smoking Tobacco that the Farmer justly describes as I have described it above. The quality of LUCKY STRIKE Cigarettes is telling. WILDCATS WILL LEAVE FOR EAST SUNDAY

BLUE AND WHITE NETMEN TO GO EAST FOR VICTIMS

Squad Leaves Sunday For Virginia Where First Game Will Be Played

DIFFICULT SCHEDULE INCLUDES NAVY FIVE
Captain Jenkins, McGinnis, McBrayer, Combs, Milward to Be in Starting Line-Up

Kentucky's Wildcat basketball quintet, which is striving for premier honors in the south this season, will leave Sunday at 8:40 p. m., on an eastern trip. This trip will extend until the following Friday, when the Cats are expected to return victorious, with their foes' scalps. The first team to be encountered on this circuit will be the University of Virginia. Virginia will be played on Monday night. The team is then allowed a rest interval of one day before tackling what will be, probably, the hardest game of the entire schedule. On Wednesday, the quintet representing the U. S. Naval Academy, at Annapolis, will clash with the Blue and White Kentucky five.

Starting the return trip on the next day, the University of Maryland hoopers will furnish entertainment for Kentucky Thursday night. Although "Daddy" Boles has arranged a trio of the hardest sort of games in these encounters, yet they will furnish our team a real test of its ability. Kentucky has shown up very well under the tutelage of Coach Mauer, and the recent games have been extremely palatable for the rabid basketball fans. These clashes with eastern teams should give both the fans and Coach Mauer a line on the Wildcat under heavy fire, as well as being excellent conditioners for future southern conference bouts.

Besides Coach Mauer and trainer Mann, about ten men will make the trip. These will be chosen from the following: Jenkins, Combs, Milward, Lyons, Gib, Dees, Owens, McBrayer, McGinnis, Tork, Miller and McLane. The starting line-up will probably be Combs and McBrayer, forwards; Milward, center; and McGinnis and Captain Jenkins, guards.

WILDCATS DEFEAT CENTRE FIVE 36-23

Playing a game that was marked with decided improvement over last week, the Wildcats forced the Centre Colonnels to take the short end of a 36 to 23 score in the game played at Danville Monday night.

Although the Cats were playing at a great disadvantage because of the small court of the Colonnels, they managed to slip through the Colonnels' defense for 23 points during the first half, and held the opposition in check for only nine points.

Kentucky was the first to score when Owens slipped beneath the basket for a beautiful trip shot. Centre followed this with a free throw and a goal by Stanley, making the score 3 to 2 in their favor. This was the first and last time during the game that Centre ever held the lead and this was not held long.

Soon after this Combs and Owens found the range of the basket and a deadly assault followed which pushed the Cats into the comfortable lead which they held throughout the game.

When the second half started the Colonnels seemed to be inspired by some unknown force or power. It might have been the thought of the gridiron encounter earlier in the fall; at any rate they played the Blue and White on even terms and once or twice threatened to even the score.

Combs, Owens and McBrayer led the attack for the Blue and White, performing in a manner that was characteristic of their work of last year when playing on the Kitten team. Captain Jenkins handled the team in his usual calm and smooth way, and with the help of McGinnis broke up the Centre offensive many times, thus preventing the Colonnels from scoring more points than they did.

The game was fast at all times, with both teams fighting hard to score and trying to prevent the other from scoring. It was rough at times and referee Arnston had a real job on his hands to prevent fouling.

Lineup and summary:
Kentucky (36) Pos. (23) Centre
Owens (8) F. (3) Maggard
Combs (15) F. (3) Denton
McBrayer (6) C. (6) Stanley
Jenkins (3) G. (5) O'Neil

WRESTLING AND BOXING CHAMPS TO BE DECIDED

Finals of Intra-Mural Tournament to Be Held the Week of February 5

WINNERS BE GIVEN CUPS
Under Direction of M. E. Potter and Assistant Coach Bernie Shively

Since boxing and wrestling have met with such great popularity among the University of Kentucky students, tournaments are being sponsored by the university this week and next in order that the intra-mural championship may be decided.

The tournament began with the holding of the first preliminaries of each sport on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Men's gymnasium. The contestants were weighed in Tuesday afternoon at which time all who had not previously undergone a physical examination were examined by doctors on the university medical staff.

It is thought that about 10 days will be required for the completion of the preliminaries, as approximately 50 men are expected to compete in the two tournaments.

The finals, which will be open to the public, are scheduled to take place one night during the week of February 5. A nominal fee for admission will be charged so that cups and trophies may be presented the winners and runners-up.

The women's tumbling team of the Woman's Athletic Association of the university will stage an act during intermission between championship bouts.

The tournaments, under the direction of M. E. Potter and Assistant Coach Bernie Shively, are the first of this kind to be held at the university, and they have been received with such enthusiasm that it is predicted that boxing and wrestling will have a great future at the university.

Because of this response, it is believed by S. A. Bowles, athletic director, that this sport will become so popular among students that there will be a demand for varsity teams to meet other colleges and universities in boxing and wrestling.

The eight classes arranged for the tournaments, all depending upon the weight of the contestants, include 115 pounds, 128 pounds, 137 pounds, 145 pounds, 153 pounds, 157 pounds, 175 pounds, and 185 pounds.

The winner and runner-up in each class will be given trophies, and the fraternity winning the most points in both boxing and wrestling will be given a trophy also.

All bouts in the boxing tournament will be conducted under regular amateur rules, with three judges to name the winner in the event of no knockout. The judges include "Daddy" Bowles, athletic director; R. M. Githrie, member of the American Legion boxing committee, and Neville Dunn, sports editor of the Lexington Leader. The wrestling bouts will be judged and refereed by Coach Shively and W. H. Hanson, boxing instructor and physical education leader at the University of Kentucky.

Sixteen ounce gloves, the largest and softest made, will be worn by the contestants. These mitts are not so soft that, if properly used, they will not mete out punishment for

FROSH TRIM KAVANAUGH

The University of Kentucky Kittens triumphed over the Kavanaugh High School at Lawrenceburg Tuesday night with a final score of 25 to 18. Spicer was the star of the game for Kentucky, and Forest Sale was the high point man of Kavanaugh, accounting for seven points. Spicer made 10, and Trout came next with a total of 9 points.

The line-up was as follows:
Kittens (25) Pos. (19) Kavanaugh
Trout (9) F. (6) Polsgrove
Spicer (10) C. (2) J. W. Sale
Hayne (2) G. (2) F. Sale
Bronston (2) G. (2) Goff
Substitutions: Kittens—Bolander, Kavanaugh—Hawthorne.
Referee: Snyder, of Frankfort.

which the audience pays its admission.

Because of a great number of preliminaries, matches will be held every afternoon at 4 o'clock. Two rings have been prepared for the boxing and wrestling matches which are to be held simultaneously.

The finals will be carried out under the same procedure; the final program includes eight boxing bouts and eight wrestling bouts, the tumbling act coming between bouts at intermission.

Boxing matches will be three two-minute rounds, and the wrestling bouts will last eight minutes each.

Returns to His Favorite Tobacco. Boerne, Texas Oct. 14, 1926. I began pipe-smoking with Edgeworth. But after a while I began to wander, trying other tobaccos, experimenting to see if there were any better tobacco for the pipe. I have tried most of the best known brands and a number of the more obscure, both imported and domestic, but they didn't suit. So now I have returned—I am using Edgeworth again, satisfied that no better tobacco is made. "And the prodigal son partook of the fattened calf": I bought a new pipe when I returned to Edgeworth. With many thanks for my cool, mellow, sweet smokes, I am, Very truly yours, "H. D."

What lies beyond the mountains? MOUNTAINS blocked the trail of the pioneers who opened up the far west. But that impelling urge of the true pioneer—to explore and know the country beyond—spurred them to surmount these barriers. In office and laboratory, mountainous problems in management, in methods and in scientific research confront the men of the Bell Telephone System. Yet that pioneering instinct—the urge to better the known and attain the unknown—will carry them through. Just as it has brought them through the difficulties in achieving nation-wide uniform service, efficiently engineered and wisely administered. To the modern frontiersmen who carry on this work to still greater developments will be given the thrill of adventure that lies in discovery.

starve and no care for her. Pieces, mister!" Unable to resist the pathetic appeal, the actor purchased the little creature and soon became very fond of her. Miss M. E. however, vindicated a great fondness for hotel furniture and left torn curtains, broken furniture, and tattered hotel linen along her master's trail. Finding it impossible to keep his entertaining though annoying little friend, the actor gave her to Dean Anderson. He promptly proceeded to name her "Tea Tab" which is the Persian word for happiness. At first Tea Tab reflected all the dean's offers of friendship, but no one could for long resist the kindly, good-natured head of the engineering school, and Tea Tab, though not human, is mortal. Now she chatters with joy at his approach and jumps upon his shoulder at his command. To other humans, Tea Tab is not very friendly. Her sharp little teeth have several times rewarded unsuspecting victims, who have attempted to pet her.

From across the street "Benny," the second addition to the university "zoo." Benny, like Tea Tab, is a sacred monkey of India, the property of a sailor who gave him to the dean, when Benny was a baby. The dean wisely put Benny in Tea Tab's care. That was four years ago. Now Benny is much larger, yet Tea Tab

Doctor Funkhouser Gives Suggestions On Thesis Writing

Dr. W. D. Funkhouser has published a bulletin entitled "Suggestions for Thesis Writing" for use of graduate students at the University of Kentucky.

The bulletin discusses such topics as the purpose of a thesis, "Preparation of Manuscript," "Style Suggestions," and "Mechanical Details," and includes an appendix giving sample pages of bibliography, title page, table of contents, acknowledgments and personal sketches, with the university rules relating to the preparation of these parts of a thesis. Graduate students will be expected to make their theses conform to the regulations set forth in this bulletin. The bulletin is available for free distribution at the Graduate School office.

is the boss. If Tea Tab wants the choicest bits of food, Benny dares not touch a morsel until his foster-mother's through. He is strong enough to little teeth have several times rewarded unsuspecting victims, who have attempted to pet her.

Benny and Tea Tab are very fond of leaping from branches of trees and have never missed a jump. To fall from a tree is a disgrace, and the story of a sailor who gave him to the dean, when Benny was a baby. The dean wisely put Benny in Tea Tab's care. That was four years ago. The handsomest monkey of the Caruso because of his musical cries Caruso comes from a New York animal shop. He shows evidence of having at one time followed a hand organ, since he turns somersaults and does other tricks. Bill, his comrade was presented to the dean by the senior class of 1925. He lacks the vitality of the other monkeys, and his keeper says he is "feeble-minded."

The handsomest monkey of the Caruso because of his musical cries Caruso comes from a New York animal shop. He shows evidence of having at one time followed a hand organ, since he turns somersaults and does other tricks. Bill, his comrade was presented to the dean by the senior class of 1925. He lacks the vitality of the other monkeys, and his keeper says he is "feeble-minded."

"Smart? Say, he can walk a wire by balancing with his tail!" In warm weather the monkeys are permitted to play outside in the grove near Dicker Hall. One day a little boy passed by the grove on his way home from the grocery. He carried a sackful of eggs and two precious half-dollars securely hidden in the bottom of the bag. Frank approached him playfully. "Shoo!" said the little fellow, waving his sack of eggs. Frank thought this was a new game, so he set the eggs swinging up to the highest branch of a tree and proceeded to devour them one by one. The boy ran to Mr. Rice who arrived just as Frank was finishing the last egg. Whether or not he swallowed the money is not known, but it was never found.

Another pastime of monkeydom is swimming. In summertime, the dean takes his pets to Clifton pond. Here they swim and splash and duck—that is, all but Frank. He sits on the shore and watches disinterestedly. He hates water and when the others mischievously wet him, he howls in anger.

In the near future Ben and Frank and all the rest are going to romp and leap in a special laboratory, which the College of Engineering will build for them. They will be the rulers of a varied throng of birds and animals—mice, guinea pigs, rats—which Dean Anderson will add to his collection. Will the plans of human beings do not disturb the carefree existence of the dean's pets. "Cheek! Eeow!" chatters Caruso, their spokesman, as if to say, "What do we care?" and catching hold of a distant limb with his tail, he unconcernedly turns a somersault.

ble disastrous effects of the feminine contingent. His peace of mind was disturbed with wondering just how he would restore to its usual tranquil state of equilibrium, the paper whose fate and same policy the captivating co-eds would surely disrupt.

And how we have revealed in the opportunity to express ourselves as we have never before been expressed. With no restraining admonitions to hinder us, we have held sway for a week and have indulged all our wildest tendencies, heretofore suppressed by some cautious higher-up. Our diminutive editor exercised at will the prerogatives of a full-fledged executive to be "hard-boiled," while we lesser lights ut copy unrestrainedly, wrestled with protesting typewriters to our hearts content, and altogether had the time of our lives.

Undismayed by the fact that the product of our efforts was to make its much heralded debut on Friday 13, we have ignored the warnings of some more superstitious brethren that our project was doomed to disaster because of the unlikelihood of the day, and with confidence unabated, have succeeded in assembling a mass of copy which we now present to you for your inspection—this too, in spite of the common belief that no paper it all would be published.

In one short week we have been included into the intricate workings of a newspaper office, and though our reign is over, we enjoyed ourselves immensely while it lasted; and it is with reluctance that we relinquish our command so that The Kernel may return to its normal state and have a period of rest for another year.

Awkward Moments Goodness! One day as I was walking through the campus on my way to a class, I noticed that people looked at me and snickered. I did not mind it at first, but finally their snickering became so irritatingly conspicuous that I realized that something was wrong. I became horribly embarrassed and looked about me to find the cause of the riot. There, in front of everyone, I had come to school without my books. MARY FITZ, 100 Album Avenue.
