

Annual Woman's Banquet To Feature 'Futuristic Symbols' In Union This Thursday

Program To Show How UK Will Look In Sixty Years

By PATRICIA SNIDER Mirrors, squares, triangles, colored lights, and futuristic symbols will form the background of the 'Futuristic Symbols' of the Year 2002 which will be presented at the annual Women's banquet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, in the Bluegrass room of the Union building.

The program, which is being swathed in deepest secrecy, will portray the life of the University 60 years hence. It is rumored that one or two campus characters will still be around the place, and that dancing will not be the same as it is today.

Tickets, costing 75 cents, may be purchased until noon Wednesday in the office of the dean of women and the information desk of the Union building. No tickets can be purchased after that time. Martha Thompson, ticket sales chairman, announced.

Table decorations will include spring flowers, especially tulips and pansies. Futuristic symbols and cards for the speakers take will follow the same design.

UK Students Hit High Mark On 'War Effort Quiz'

By TONI STABLE UK's student body is 36.1 per cent all-outers in personal effort to aid the war program according to a test designed to enable civilians to rate themselves in this capacity.

The quiz, originally authored by two Stanford University faculty members and revised to meet student standards, was tested by a representative group of UK campuses on the campus.

Results averaged 86.1 out of the perfect 100 score, which was lower than any of the averages scored by the institutions tested by the original committee. Groups quizzed included a women's organization averaging 75, a group of workmen 72, high school students 70, and business men 69.

UK coeds outclassed the men students by proving to be 64.7 percent all-outers to a masculine 59.2 percent. Advanced military students rated 90 while boys not taking military courses scored 41.6.

It is the general belief that the student all-out average will rise as more defense units and classes are formed on the campus.

Rate yourself from 0 to 10 according to how well you think you are—

- 1. Avoiding waste of all kinds in the classroom, dormitory, etc.
- 2. Buying war stamps with your spending money.
- 3. Taking part in civilian defense, Red Cross, or other voluntary war work on the campus or off.
- 4. Serving in civilian, guarding potential military information and refraining from passing on wild rumors.
- 5. Extending assistance and hospitality to our armed forces, cheering services men at the front, and raising our workers for jobs well done.
- 6. Doing your particular work to the best of your ability while keeping physically fit.
- 7. Maintaining a cheerful attitude despite unfavorable news of war and labor.
- 8. Willingly contributing to worthwhile organizations such as Red Cross, U. S. O., and Navy Relief.
- 9. Maintaining a cooperative attitude toward wartime regulations even when they mean sacrifices on your part.
- 10. Utilizing as well as you can other opportunity for war activity. The perfect all-outer would score 100.

Joe Bohnak Injured By Bayonet Thrust

Joe Bohnak, Northampton, Mass., the only Yankee in the Confederate squad, was accidentally injured on the parade ground during bayonet drill last Thursday, receiving a bayonet cut extending from the left cheek bone to the mouth.

Bohnak was taken to the Good Samaritan hospital where three stitches were required to close the wound.

The accident occurred when Bohnak, who had been resting, approached the drill line from the rear to resume his place. He was cut when a member of the team executed a butt thrust as Bohnak passed behind him.

MEN'S DORMS' EFFICIENCY BILL PASSED BY SGA

Monitor's Powers To Be Increased; Study Hours Made

A bill to establish order and efficiency in the men's dormitories was unanimously passed by the SGA at a meeting last Thursday, to go into effect at the discretion of the new legislative body.

Study hours will be established in the halls and monitors shall report students disobeying the new rules to the SGA officer charged with prosecuting infractions.

The regulations came as an outgrowth of the investigation of the welfare committee last fall which reported disorder and inefficiency in the dormitories.

The committee at that time blamed the misconduct found in the halls on the lack of severity of the monitors rather than their efficiency.

Although the incoming legislature may put the bill into effect this fall, it will probably not be enforced until next fall.

The context of the bill, which was introduced by Stanley Penna, men's vice-president, follows.

Be it enacted by the Student Legislature of the University of Kentucky:

Section One: Study hours shall be from 7:30 to 11:00 p.m. Sundays through Fridays. Monitors shall report students causing noise or other disturbance during study hours or excessive disturbance at any time.

Section Two: Monitors shall report students causing breakage of furniture or equipment belonging to other persons on the University.

Section Three: Monitors shall report students having keys in the rooms for improper purposes.

Section Four: All infractions shall be reported to the officer charged with prosecuting infractions of SGA rules, who shall bring charges against such students before the Judiciary Committee.

Section Five: The Judiciary Committee shall recommend appropriate action against students guilty of misconduct in the dormitories to the proper University authorities.

Section Six: Whereas, though the foregoing laws are a requirement of law, the existence of a problem, as logical necessities will, are the ability of S. G. A. to draft moral, conduct, and other laws, and the legislature hereby demonstrated.

Section Seven: This bill shall go into effect at the discretion of the incoming legislature, May, 1942.

MONTONDO GETS DEGREE UNDER UK WAR PLAN

Education Senior Called To Army Before Graduation

Robert Douglas Montondo, instructor in the physical education department, is the first student in the education college who will receive a degree under the University's twelve-week plan. Montondo left yesterday for temporary duty at Ft. Niagara, New York.

Montondo will be the sixth student to be granted a degree through credit given on this plan, according to the registrar's office.

Montondo, who received his commission from the University military department in January, will be given half-credit for the courses he is carrying, according to Miss Susan Clay of the College of Education. The amount of credit received will give him a sufficient number for graduation, she said.

HALF-CREDIT GIVEN Under the twelve week plan, students leaving for military service between the weeks of March 29 and April 25 receive half-credit on all courses carried at the time of departure; students leaving after the week of April 25 will receive full credit.

Montondo, who is majoring in physical education and mathematics, is a member of the ROTC unit, a member of Scabbard and Blade, senior military honor, and a member of the first graduating Civilian Pilot Training class. He is vice-president of the UK aviation club.

He is a member of Sigma Chi, social fraternity, and has held the positions of treasurer, house manager, and house president of the organization. He is also a member of Keys, sophomore men's honorary.

Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi and the three campus societies working in connection with the arts and sciences committee on scholastic opportunities to sponsor the series. The University of Kentucky library has a special committee, who termed their selections as "the best speakers on the campus."

W. F. GALLOWAY WILL DELIVER THIRD LECTURE

Charm Of Boswell Selected As Subject By Arts Professor

Dr. W. F. Galloway, associate professor of English, will speak on the "Charm of Boswell" at 8 o'clock tonight in Memorial hall in the third of four lectures arranged by the College of Arts and Sciences to promote scholarship.

Dr. Galloway will attempt to show that Lord Macaulay's famous essay on Boswell was extremely unjust. Macaulay pictured Boswell as a fool and buffoon, while, in reality, he was a man of great personal charm, good humor and high intelligence, according to Dr. Galloway. Boswell was a popular member of numerous clubs and the intimate friend of most of the outstanding men of his day, Dr. Galloway points out.

"I will try to show that Macaulay was prejudiced and did not make a fair examination of the material available," declares Dr. Galloway. "I am relying on new evidence in letters and journals not available when Macaulay wrote."

Most important of the journals which Dr. Galloway hopes to discuss are the "Mala-hide diary," purchased in 1928 by Col. Ralph Isham, and published in a privately printed edition which is in the UK library.

The fourth and last speaker, Dr. J. Runtley Dupre, history professor and representative of the social sciences division, will speak April 28 on "Thomas G. Masaryk; Philosopher and Statesman."

This is election day! Student statesmen, true politicians all, are today at their peak. Today the most important student issue of the year is being decided. To six polls strategically located about the campus, will go members of the student body to proclaim who shall represent them as the president and vice-presidents of the Student Government Association.

Candidates for the office are: President, Givens Dixon, Independents; and James Collier, Constitutionalists.

Men's vice-president, Marvin Akers, Independents, and James Crowley, Constitutionalists.

Women's vice-president, Jane Birk, Independents, and Marcia Willing, Constitutionalists.

Thursday night the Independent Association decided to back Dixon for president. Akers for men's vice-president, and Birk for women's vice-president.

Collier became the official Constitutionalists candidate for the presidency at a meeting of the party leaders last Thursday. Place on the ticket with him are Crowley and Willing, vice-presidential candidates.

Independents Dixon, Akers, and Birk issued a platform advocating freedom of the press for campus publications, cooperation of the legislature and the Board of Trustees, system of communication in the men's dormitories, more name bands for football games, lower expenses for the SGA, and cooperation with the University administration. Constitutionalists Collier, Crowley and Willing refused to issue formal platform. However they did release a statement reviewing their activities and promising to "cope with situations as they arise."

Both statements appear in full on page 3 of today's Kernel.

All resident students may vote for presidential candidates. All men residents may vote for men's vice-president, and all women residents for women's vice-president.

Polling places have been located conveniently in each college and students are warned by the election board that they will not be allowed to vote at any place other than that designated for their college.

Any student whose name does not appear in the Student Directory must present a signed statement from his dean certifying that he is enrolled at the college at which he desires to vote, according to a statement from the election board.

Another One For The Graveyard

By Bob Baker

HEROES: A DEFINITION

He was bitter, cynical. "Heroes, hell—Look at this thing here about heroes and medals. Sure, they always give heroes medals. Why? Not for going out and getting their guts shot out. Oh, no! They give them medals for being damn stupid enough to believe all the Hallucination about dying for Lib-ber-tee."

had to be done. There was no one else around to do it but himself so he did the best he could without thinking about whether he would be killed or not in the process. He didn't want to die and he realized that he was placing his life in jeopardy but he placed the job above everything else and the company he was working for thinks enough of his sacrifice to attempt to do something to show their gratitude but they realize even before they try that they are attempting the impossible since they can't repay him, except perhaps in one way—by giving him a place in the minds of the people for whom he was doing the job.

"There's no such thing as a hero. Just because they happened to get in the way of a bank of lead when somebody made them get out there and get hell shot out of them in the first place is no reason for gettin' sticky with patriotism. Heroes, hell, there's no such thing."

We made some stupid reply and then after he had gone we thought, too late, of the things we should have told him. We remembered what we had read the day before.

One was named Fuller Patterson. He was from somewhere in Virginia. Just before he took off on a one-way flight over Germany, he wrote: "If I get mine up there, there musn't be any regrets. I don't want it that way. It's unfortunate that those of us who love life the most, the very ones who so keenly seek to live the fullest life possible, must take the long chance that a great part of the time cut it short."

No fool wrote this. He didn't just happen to get in the way of a slug, and it wasn't forced into the R. A. F. We should have told him about this and we should have told him only those who are fit to live who do not fear to die, and nobody is fit to die who has shrunk from the joy of living and the duties of living.

We should have told him both life and death are a part of the same thing—call it "the great adventure", the plan of things or what you will but there never has been any great, truly great, bit of worthy action performed by a man who put his own personal safety first and there never has been a country yet worth living in whose people were not of stern enough stuff to die if when circumstances made dying for it necessary; and yes, there never has been a country worth dying for unless its people thought of life not as something concerned only with the selfish survival of the individual, but as a part, no matter how mean, an essential part of the whole whose life serves the larger and continues the life of the whole.

We should have told him this and we should have told him about Nininger, who loved music and Baudelaire; who wrote poetry and was too shy to let anyone read it. If anyone ever knew what he was dying for Nininger did. He knew and understood beauty. He liked the idea of Liberty and the hallmarks enough to crawl into three machine gun nests and a long way behind the enemy lines alone and unhesitatingly knowing all the while that he might be killed. Nobody forced him to destroy those machine gun nests. He could have stayed in a shell hole and have waited until reinforcements came up. The cynic could say "Of course they didn't force him—but I'll wager that he wasn't conscious of the fact that he was dying for liberty." And he'd be right.

Nininger wasn't thinking about himself, the glory he'd achieve by getting shot to hell. No, Nininger wasn't that kind. He saw a job that

Then we should have told him about all the heroes. We should have explained that it is not necessary to die to be a hero. A person is a hero every instant he thinks about doing unto others as he would have them do unto him. He is a hero every time he allows the other guy to express his opinion without hitting him in the mouth for doing so. He is a hero every time he gets sentimental over a mass of people saluting the flag or over the playing of the Star Spangled Banner. He is a hero every time he goes to the balllot and votes like he sees fit. He is a hero every time he intercedes in the behalf of a darky the town bully is trying to force off the sidewalk.

We should have told him about all the other heroes who don't write poetry and don't get medals; who just stand in the mud and dirt and do what they are ordered and who don't have anything memorable to say except what their mere presence in the trenches implies.

And what does their mere presence imply? Well, just read Lincoln, Jefferson, Hamilton, Paine, Wolfe, and Whitman or ask Dos Passos, Mann, Willkie, or Roosevelt. They'll tell you in better words than we can and they'll tell you so you won't very easily forget it.

Somebody once said that "Heroes are born, not made." We believe that this trite adage no longer applies. We believe that heroes are made. We've been making them here since 1776 and a little while before and we're making them right now. Inside of the next two years we're going to have seven million heroes out fighting and another one hundred and twenty-five million heroes backing them up.

Possibly it wouldn't have done any good to have told him this and he probably would only have passed off as an idealist and one more fool.

Repeat Performance: We Protest

Senior Edition Is Ruled Out

It is now definitely decided, that there will be no Senior Edition of THE KERNEL this year. The traditional laugh issue, which for years has given senior journalism students a chance to poke a little fun at their friends, school, and anyone else within range—much to the enjoyment of the school and themselves—will not be put out this year. Dr. Niel Plummer, director of student publications, has announced.

Reasons for his decision in this case have been stated by Dr. Plummer as follows:

"1) The KERNEL is a newspaper and follows a tradition of objective and regular reporting.

"2) As a newspaper it leaves its accepted field when it invades the province of the humorous publications which are admittedly devoted to burlesque.

"3) If the students want a humorous magazine they should support one. They have consistently failed to do so. Their newspaper has enough to do covering the news.

"4) A burlesque edition of a standard newspaper in the midst of a series of factual editions creates confusion, particularly among the off-campus readers who are removed from the events which are perfectly clear to us on the campus, but not to them.

"5) The so-called senior edition has never been a senior edition, but has been a hastily thrown together paper edited by a handful of students, few of whom are seniors.

"6) To any thinking person it ought to be obvious that the proposal to have a faculty member approve in advance all copy for such an edition is no solution at all; rather it imposes new complications the solution of which would end in satisfaction for no one."

The decision in this matter was left to Dr. Plummer by the Board of Trustees, since, according to a Trustees' resolution passed October 27, 1937, the professor of journalism is personally responsible for THE KERNEL and everything that appears in it. It is Dr. Plummer's decision that he doesn't care to have the responsibility for the Senior Edition.

As you can well imagine, this decision is a great disappointment to the KERNEL staff, who have been looking forward for a long time to putting out the issue, and it will probably prove a great disappointment to the general student body who, though they have not always been pleased at the fun poked at them, have always been willing to take the jokes with a laugh.

On the KERNEL staff have always considered the final "fling" of the seniors one of the best traditions of the paper, and one of the

Fraternity, Independent Lines Tangle In SGA Presidential Contest Today

CAMPUS POLITICS By Bob Ammons

Along with the gnat and crochets each spring there appears on the University campus a curious mixture of popularity-contesting, back-room plotting, handbill-throwing, and "arm around the shoulder" tactics which is identified by those who should know as politics.

And the past week, just as certain as the stars returning from the south, the vote-chasers made their appearance.

From where we sit in the basement of McVey hall, the SGA present race today promises to be a good one. At any rate, it will probably be the most unorthodox in a long list of unorthodox elections.

THE MIXUP As things are shaping up now, it appears that Jim Collier, official candidate of the Constitutional Party, which, everyone knows, is the fraternity clique will be polling a goodly number of votes from the disaffected ranks of the Independent party, while Givens Dixon, a fraternity man running on the Independent ticket, will make considerable inroads on the clique's bloc of votes.

Behind the front page stories on the election is a tangle of party maneuvering. The independent Givens Dixon, far less the politician, has greater resources to draw on for votes. An engineer, he can count on the formidable bloc of votes from the disaffected ranks of the Independent party. The ticket is angling for Triangle fraternity—across the street from Dixon's Delta Tau Delta house—while the status of Kappa Alpha, unaffiliated with the clique, is doubtful.

CLOSELY BALANCED With sides closely balanced between the athletic engineer bloc and the fraternity clique, the contest will probably be determined by the number of Greek and Independent side each can win away from the other, with the traditionally independent women's residence hall a question mark in the background.

Each of the candidates for president can call forth presentable records. Dixon has been treasurer of the SGA this year, was instrumental in pushing the SGA budget through in record time, and generally has handled SGA finances without a bobble. Collier was instrumental in pushing the recent SGA constitutional amendments.

AGGR JIMMY CROWLEY, Collier's running mate, has been a SGA member during the past year, and has shown considerable interest in the association's work. Marvin Anderson, Marcus Walling, and Jane Birk, the other vice-presidential candidates, are newcomers to the political field.

STATEMENTS ISSUED Statements from the two parties are printed elsewhere in today's Kernel. The Dixon-Akers outfit brought forth a typical platform. Collier and Crowley offer no program.

A hint of the Collier approach was seen last Friday, with the distribution of mimeographed anonymous handbills setting the Constitutional candidate forth as committed to a "free SGA." The story of the

SUB Roof, Steinfort Aplomb Downed By Barnet's Music

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE By Roy Steinfort

The air waves in the Student Union's Bluegrass room were so violently disturbed by Charlie Barnet and his 17 musicians at Saturday night was the first time that I have ever had occasion to witness the actual falling of a roof.

The Sax Senation of the Nation and his boys were blaring away on the Pompton Turnpike, 4,000 feet were jumping out a dizzy rhythm when the roof, after much debate with itself, gave away as a result of an untimely disturbance of the air waves in the Bluegrass room.

Unofficially, the falling in was attributed to the shaking feet and the air waves. We however, place the blame on the air waves.

Saturday night's falling in was a repetition of the old soldier-bidge story. You remember—the physics prof telling of marching feet of the soldiers in perfect time and how the bridge swung back and forth until it fell in the river.

The seventeen gentlemen of swing loosened a small block of the roof on the first couple of bars of Pompton Turnpike and then proceeded to tear some more down when they took out the chorus as members of the faculty looked on with astonishment.

The tempo of the quivering building was slowed down on the next number when Maestro Barnet saw the situation and gave the sign for a slow piece. If it had not been for his observing eye, we would probably be dancing in a ballroom without a roof.

An untimely gentleman, quickly blocked off the danger zone with some chairs to protect the patrons from falling debris.

Naval Officer Training Open To American College Students

KEEPING UP WITH THE SERVICES By Jim Carroll

The present program of Naval officer procurement under which college juniors, seniors and graduates may be enlisted directly for training as junior deck and engineering officers will be terminated about May 1. It was announced today by Lieutenant Charles K. Seltman, officer in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station, St. Louis.

Students of colleges and universities will have an opportunity this summer to enlist in America's new land army to spend the "Food for Victory" program.

"Those students who will have a summer vacation can spend it in no better way than by helping in the planting, cultivating and harvesting of crops," says E. L. Keenan, regional representative of the United States Employment Service for Ohio, Michigan, and Kentucky, who explains that a farm recruitment program has been set up under William V. Allen, regional farm placement representative.

Revised agricultural goals for 1942 call for an output even greater than in 1941 when farm production was the greatest in history, while industrial and military expansion have made great inroads into the number of available farm workers.

With less help, the farmer is asked to produce more. Students are asked to register at the first opportunity with the office of the United States Employment Service nearest their home. In Kentucky there are USES offices in Lexington and more are being opened up as student demands.

Many college students and instructors, as well, already have registered for farm work this summer, Keenan says.

WEST COAST COEDS READY FOR AIR RAIDS You never know these nights, if you live in a sorority house at the University of Southern California, just what's going to happen. Under campus war rules, all sororities are required to hold a fire drill one night a week. The president decides what night is drill night; she tells the fire warden, who sets an alarm clock.

Each girl is required, every night, to place a coat, shoes and towel (to breathe through if there's smokes) at the foot of her bed. On drill night, the alarm goes off, the fire warden bangs on the dinner gong. The girls get up, put on their shoes, coats and towels, and walk—not run to the front porch. They then walk back to bed and get some sleep, if their nerves can stand it.

The Witch-Hunter Of 1942

THE FREE LANCE by Bob Warrth

To say that the witch hunt is by now a cherished American institution to be defended along with the Constitution, Washington's Farewell Address, the Jim Crow car, and white man's burden, the Gospel, monogamy, the Rotary Club, the graduated income tax, and other appropria-tions, and how would they keep the confidence of the firms in the ideological baggage of the American Way, is not, we trust, too harsh a blow for our sheltered readers to absorb in a paragraph.

If our memory serves us correctly, it was in Salem, Massachusetts, that the first purely American witch-hunt was inaugurated. But there is a difference; for those upright, God-fearing citizens were simply and sincerely, if naively, on the hunt for witches, with no hypocrisy and no cheap agitation; dodges which so liberally bedevil Mr. Martin Dies' Committee for the Investigation of Un-American Activities.

WHAT IS IT? This august body of distinguished American politicians has, after spending $385,000 in three and a half years, as yet failed to define just what an "un-American" activity is. Presumably to look at the record, it covers a broad range of depravity from the hideous iniquities of Shirley Temple to the sheer horrors of nudism.

With such a convenient sliding scale of un-Americanism to go on, it is hardly surprising that most of the committee's "investigation" has been confined wholly to demagoguery, or unless the ally in all that saves us from sacrificing several millions of our own young men on the battlefield.

A fair analogy to this grotesque situation might be approached if the USSR began its own version of the Dies Committee by hounding ordinary citizens and government officials alike for their allegedly seditious democratic ideas, when in reality they were good Bolsheviks.

Up to this writing, Mr. Dies has never expressed any unkind sentiments toward Mr. Hitler or attempted, however feebly, to ferret out any suspected Nazi agents, and yet the defeat of Germany is presumably the main object in fighting the war. The sooner the country is rid of the Dies pest, the sooner will we cease giving aid and comfort to our enemies and consternation to our allies.

ever to officially condone a policy of deliberate insult toward any while that ally in all that saves us from sacrificing several millions of our own young men on the battlefield.

We, personally, will take one "Communist" like Leon Henderson to a whole regiment of Martin Dies' sniping around the country on the hunt for "un-American" activities.

INSULTING ALLIES Since Representative Dies has such a curious penchant for fomenting Red-scares, we suggest that Congress set up another committee to inform him that this country is sale of un-Americanism to go on, at war as, so far as we know, it is hardly surprising that most of the committee's "investigation" has been confined wholly to demagoguery, or unless the ally in all that saves us from sacrificing several millions of our own young men on the battlefield.

Pershing Rifles To Compete In Regimental Drill Meet

Drill Unit To Seek Twelfth Win In Thirteen Meets

By MAUREN ARTHUR
Competing as a guest of their former regiment, Company C-3, Pershing Rifles will seek their twelfth win in thirteen starts in regimental and interregimental drill competition April 24 at Ohio State University in Columbus.
Officers, active members, and sponsors of the company will leave the campus Friday morning at 5:30 for the meet. The company will make the trip by convey in private car, Captain A. J. Spore, commander, announced.
The regimental parades will form at 7:30 Friday evening with competitive drill scheduled to begin thirty minutes later. There will also be a shoulder rifle match and competitive individual drill Saturday morning.
Trophies to first and second place companies will be made following the competitive drill. Rifle team members and individual drill winners will receive awards at the noon-day banquet Saturday.

In contrast to modern drill movements, Kentucky's Confederate Squad and the Yankee Squad of Ohio State, to be garbed in authentic uniforms of the Civil War, will vie for the spotlight with the drill team. The drill both squads will present was taken from drill regulations of the Confederate and Union Armies.
Company C-3 while still a member of the First Regiment, suffered only one loss in ten starts in First Regimental Drill competition. Also listed in C-3's record are two wins in interregimental competition between the First and Third regiments.
The University unit was transferred from the First to Third regiments last summer by action of the Pershing Rifles National Assembly. The officers of the company attended the regimental assembly of the First Regiment in February and received an invitation to their meet.
In preparation for the contest, the championship outfit has been drilling three hours each week since October and recently began practicing from four to six daily.

Dixon - Akers PLATFORM

In order to secure for all the students of this University, regardless of political affiliations, more practical benefits, more representation in regard to matters of importance concerning the University, and a greater and more powerful voice in student government, we bring candidates for the office of president and vice-president of the Student Government Association do set forth the following as the platform upon which we base our candidacy:

- (1) Since we believe that the Kentucky Kernel is the official organ for student, faculty, and administration expression of opinion concerning university affairs and matters of local and national importance, we promise to preserve "freedom of the press" by aggressively resisting increasing dictation from the administration.
- (2) We advocate the election by the student legislature of a non-voting student representative to participate in the meeting of the Board of Trustees, so as to establish a sense of cooperation between the administration and the student body, and also to provide the board with a means of more adequately determined student opinion on various matters which arise concerning them.
- (3) We advocate hearily the installation of a "buzzer" system or a similar means of communication for the residents of the men's dormitories.
- (4) We sincerely hope to secure more "name" bands for formal dances. We propose that such dances be held on Friday night so that students may enjoy the more convenient hours for dancing from 9 P. M. to 1 A. M.
- (5) We promise to promote the recently created Student War Fund.
- (6) We propose to investigate thoroughly the complaints against the management of the University tennis courts and recommend appropriate attention to the proper authorities.
- (7) We propose to have students receive at all football games away from Lexington considered as home games the same privileges that they would receive at home games.
- (8) We propose to reduce all necessary expenses in the SGA budget in order to allow more money for necessary student welfare projects and especially to have the budget completed shortly after the beginning of the fall semester.
- (9) Finally we promise to cooperate in every way with the present administration in order to maintain student privileges, and to present student desires and needs forcefully and truthfully with every effort to harmonize the attitudes of the administration and the students.

Collier - Crowley PLATFORM

We can ask students to make an unbiased search of our record since, "EITHER WAY YOU VOTE, YOUR BALLOT IS FOR A FRATERNITY MAN."

There is no need for us to draw up an elaborate platform because the whole student body knows we stand for a free, efficiently managed student government. We do not believe in wasting the Kernel's space or the students' time by a mere recitation of "lip-service" planks.

We urge only that the student look at the past to find who have been the outspoken friends of Student Government, then draw their own conclusions as to who will continue to exert their efforts on behalf of the students.

We have shown our inclination to cooperate by assisting Bob Allen and then Russell Patterson when they attempted to further student welfare and SGA efficiency; also to fight back even against overwhelming odds, when we believe our cause was right. These same things we shall continue to do in the future.

Since political promises are never kept, one should look to the ability of the individual to cope with situations as they arise.

KENTUCKY MEN WILL BE INTERVIEWED AGAIN...

► Last year, on 39 different college campuses, men were asked for candid opinions about clothing styles. This poll, conducted by The Saturday Evening Post, is being repeated this year for more than reasons of fashion. It should have important usefulness in the national conservation of cloth and other materials.

Manufacturers and retailers want to know exactly what kind of clothing college men like best—what they find most practical. Government regulations about clothing make it vital to get such facts in advance.

Maybe you were one of the 4,179 college men who helped provide the information last year. Maybe you also saw the Post Portfolio of College Styles in your favorite store when you bought clothes last fall. It made buying simpler for a good many men.

The 2nd Annual Post Poll of College Styles will be made very soon through cooperation of the KENTUCKY KERNEL.

Results will again be available to you in leading stores this fall. When your local reporter asks you for information, your answers will be appreciated.
