

Administration To Meet Students At Reception

Presentation To Be By Organizations In Great Hall

All campus organizations will be presented officially to the new administration of the University at a formal reception from 8 to 10 p. m. Tuesday in the great hall of the Student Union building.

The reception will honor President and Mrs. Herman L. Donovan, Dean and Mrs. Henry H. Hill, Comptroller and Mrs. Frank D. Peterson, Dean Sarah B. Holmes, and assistant Dean Jane Haselden.

Also in the receiving line will be Bill Peasek, president of the Student board; Russell Patterson, president of the Student Government association; and Tom Walker, chairman of the reception committee.

Following the reception there will be dancing in the Bluegrass room. Music will be furnished by a campus orchestra.

Women students who will preside are Mary Olive Davis, vice president of the SGA; Doris Reichenbach, president of the Women's Athletic association; Mary Garner, president of Motor Board; Betty Rose, president of Panhellenic council; Betty South, president of the YWCA; and Bebara Rehm, band sponsor. Assisting will be the members of the house committee at 5 p. m. Monday in the Agricultural building.

MABEL WARNECKE is recipient of Chi Omega award.

Fain Named Editor

Stansell Fain, 1941 graduate of the journalism department, has been named managing editor of the Jonesville Journal, published in Nicholasville. He will begin his duties after November 1.

Controlling interest of the paper was purchased by Fain's father, Larkin D. Fain of Nicholasville.

YM-YWCA Pitkin Club Admits New Members

25 Are Selected From Waiting List Of 100 Candidates

Twenty-five new members have been admitted to the Pitkin club, which met for the first time at noon Wednesday at the Maxwell Presbyterian church. It was announced by Joe Massey, president.

Selected from a waiting list of more than 100 students, the 11 women and 14 men were chosen for their interest in the club and in the YWCA-YMCA, according to Bart Peak, YMCA secretary.

New members include Martha Chaney, Jeanne Lancaster, Elaine Hawk, Kay Ellison, Ernestine Fish, Mildred Murray, Doris Reichenbach, Alice Wootton, Dorothy Vaughan, Frances Whitfield, Louise Brightwell, William Bruckart, Robert Fuller, William Campbell, Walter Leet, Valden Cox, George Smith, William Triplett, Leonard Short, John Fortenberry, Glenn Mohney, Elliott Peck, George Keller, Joseph Kelley, and William Fowler.

Programs for the weekly luncheon meetings consist of discussions of social and religious problems, led by a speaker, who continues as program leader during the entire semester.

Founded in 1925, Pitkin club was organized by George Kavanaugh, YMCA secretary at that time. It was patterned after a similar club in Pittsburg, named Pitkin in honor of Horace Tracy Pitkin, who protected the Christians in China during the Boxer rebellion. Since the organization was started on this campus, Centre college of Danville has founded two such clubs.

AUTHOR TO TALK AT CONFERENCE OF LIBRARIANS

Session Will Open At 9:50 Tomorrow In UK Library

Mrs. Mary Peacock Douglas, North Carolina state school library adviser and author of the new American Library association publication, "The Teacher-Librarian's Handbook," will be the principal speaker in the conference on school library problems tomorrow morning.

Miss Mildred Semmons, professor of library science, will preside at the meeting which will open at 9:50 a. m. in room 314 of the library.

In keeping with the general theme of the conference, "Conservation of Resources and Improvement of Instruction," Mrs. Douglas will discuss "The Library—An Integral Part of the Educational Program" and Miss Ruth Wheeler, librarian of William Morton junior high school, will discuss "New Books for the Junior High School."

A luncheon for former library science students and for friends will be held at 12:30 p. m. in room 23-A of the Union building following the meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Kentucky Library association in Bowling Green last week, Miss Margaret I. King, chief librarian of the University library, was selected chairman of the College and University section. Miss Helen Fry of the circulation department, editor of its Bulletin.

The association endorsed a $500,000 state aid bill, and approved and considered essential and necessary the WPA library program.

21 FRESHMEN RANK HIGHEST ON TESTS

Two To Be Elected From This Number To Legislature

Twenty-one freshmen ranked highest on the entrance classification tests. Professor J. M. Asher of the psychology department said yesterday. The scores are based on a combination of the general scholastic, English and mathematics tests.

Two of these 21 will be elected to represent the class in the SGA legislature. The students who ranked highest are: John Garth Atchinson, Edith D. Conant, Mary E. Crawford, Ledford Gregory and James L. Wyatt, all of Lexington; George W. Ballou, Maysville; Virginia Baskett, Casper, Wyo.; Rosalyn M. Freedman, Fort Chester, N. Y.; Ollie J. Hurt, Harbourside; Ernest E. Lane, Kyrock; John Dorsey Luder, Wrightsville Beach, N. C.; Caswell Logan, Winchester; Robert C. McAlister, Mayfield; Mary Ann Macke, Newport; Mary Payne Mountjoy, Warsaw; Elizabeth Noble, Hendersonville, N. C.; Charlotte Oldham, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; James H. Saunders, Hopkinsville; Ellis Schenker, Ashland; Guy F. Simpson, Lawrenceburg; and Marvin Talbott, Winner, S. Dak.

rickman. He contended that this abolished machinery for appeal from the student body to the University administration on SGA questions.

LIAISONS DUTIES
The SGA constitution lists as duties of this committee the maintenance of good will and the fostering of cooperation among different colleges, organizations, student groups, and faculty.

In reply, Patterson said that, as the board has never functioned, it is apparent it has no use. Any faculty member or student may carry problems directly to President Donovan without the aid of any committee, he added.

If a department of this type is necessary under the proposed changes, Collier stated that it is within the power of the legislature to create such a board.

The final measure discussed was the removal of all SGA elected officers by a two thirds vote of the legislature. Adams argued that some form of trial should be provided to prevent politics from entering into such action.

Sports Whirl

By WINDY

The West Virginia Mountaineers rolled up nearly a mile on the gridiron last year, but didn't go anywhere in particular. After they beat Kentucky 9-7, the merry-go-round broke down completely and Michigan State beat them 17-0.

The field was so muddy at Morgantown last year when the Wildcats went down that Coach Kirwan had to go on the field with the substitutes to introduce them to the rest of the players.

The familiar cry around the University of West Virginia campus was, "We'll mudder them bums." And that's exactly what they did.

So far this year though, the Mountaineers have been going in reverse. They lost to Navy 40-0 and to Fordham 27-0. Must have run out of mud in Morgantown.

KERNEL SPORTS

The Sporting Way

BY JOHNNY CARRICO

The Cat went over the mountain
To see what he could see;
The other side of the mountain
Was all that he could see.

Thus runs the refrain that might be quoted aptly in reference to the 1940 joust with the Mountaineers. For the older side of the Mountain was about all the Wildcats could see after jerseys became coated with West Virginia mountain mud.

Last year the Wildcats played the Hill-billies in their stadium at Morgantown. After the very solid rains and snows had operated on a full-time schedule, the turf was a solid mass of mud and slipperiness that no self-respecting back would venture to set a toe in.

The end of the first half was approaching and Kentucky had already rammed across its usual first period touchdown in summary fashion. Billy Black took the ball on the Kentucky 45 and started down the field with a host of blockers. Unnoticed because of his mud-coated jersey, a West Virginia player sidled in among the blockers and edged his way toward the flying Black.

TROJAN HORSE

After fraternizing freely with the Kentucky men in order to throw them off their guard, this Trojan horse sprang upon the unsuspecting Black and hurled him to the ground on the Mountaineer 7. Before the Wildcats could line up for another play, the gun sounded. It happens once in a lifetime.

In the fourth quarter the West Virginians moved to the Kentucky 11 where the Cats held them for three plays. On a fourth down McElwee shot a pass to Lewellen in the end zone which Ernal Allen and Dave Brown covered. They baited the ball upward and Lewellen, who had fallen to his knees, scrambled up and snatched the falling sphere.

In the final minutes a Mountaineer punt went out on the Kentucky 4. With most of the Wildcats holding on to each other to keep from being blown away by the wind coming into them from the Monongahela river, Kentucky elected to run the ball out.

Allen took the ball and splashed his way through the three inches of water covering the end zone. When he was rushed, Allen tried to pass but the slipper ball skidded off cold wet fingers and the officials ruled a lateral pass and an automatic safety. It happened.

THEY REMEMBER

The Wildcats remember that cold day in Morgantown. They remember the cold dressing room and the uniforms colder still from the wetness. They remember the sight of the Mountaineers trotting on the field with clean, dry jerseys and pants.

And because they remember, we pick the Wildcats to beat the Mountaineers. Kentucky should measure them by two touchdowns (the downtown men give the West Virginians 14 points). West Virginia has an unimpressive record. They edged by their brother, Waynesburg, 13-6 but the Middies of the Naval Academy took no mercy and leech them 40-0.

At this point the governor of West Virginia stepped in and took charge. He urged the boys to win a game and "save the state humiliation of losing teams." The boys won 20-0 from West Virginia Wesleyan.

However, Fordham trounced the Hillbillies 27-0 last week and so the governor is likely to go to bat again this week. He might do better to appeal to the West Virginians on the Kentucky squad—Tom Zinn, Bob Herbert, Claude Hammond, Clark Wood, and George Schlegel—to save the state from humiliation.

Sporting 'One-Eye' May Crash

By JAY WILSON

NAME: "One-Eye" Connelly
ADDRESS: Anywhere
INCASE OF ACCIDENT NOTIFY: Any Sports Writer
ADDRESS: The World

So reads the identification card in the bill folder of "One-Eye" Connelly, world famous gate crasher, in Lexington this week.

Connelly will probably be one of the few people at the Kentucky-West Virginia game who do not pay the usual two-fifty—that is, if he even chooses to go.

"Football doesn't appeal to me," explained the 66-year-old sports lover. "Boxing and baseball, they're my games."

Certainly no one would deny that "One-Eye" is one of the nation's most avid sports fans. He has traveled across the United States ten and one-half times following major sport attractions. Not only has he kept up with American athletics but he has been to Europe five times in search of new thrills and more gates to crash.

IT'S HIS BUSINESS

Crashing gates is really his business. It was his artistic ability to enter the arena for free that required fee that placed him in the national spotlight a few years ago, but "One-Eye" Connelly was making unique history long before that.

As early as 1875 young Connelly crashed the gate to the fair in his home town, Lowell, Mass. The eight-year-old novice took a vase of flowers which some neighbor had carelessly left on the front porch and set off for the nearby fairgrounds.

"Where do you think you're going?" was the biting question of the gate attendant.

Connelly explained that his mother was entering the bouquet in an exhibit at the fair whereupon he was given a pass and admitted to the grounds. Four days later, at the close of the fair, Connelly was surprised to find that his bouquet had actually won first prize.

TEN YEARS LATER

It was approximately ten years before "One-Eye" seriously took up his life's work of crashing gates. Meanwhile he entered the prize ring where he fought in the bantam weight division. In a bout for the championship he lost his left eye only to be named "One-Eye Connelly" by a sports writer on the Denver Post.

Refusing to tell his first name, Connelly stated that no one had ever called him anything except the now famous "One-Eye Connelly."

Wearing a rumpled blue suit and a dark cap which he insists on placing sideways, "One-Eye" stopped selling pencils long enough to look over at Stoll. It was just another stadium to him—another gate to be crashed.

TOO WELL KNOWN

Lately he hasn't tried any spectacular methods of getting into major sports events. "I'm too well known," he explained.

Many of "One-Eye's" clever attempts to outwit the boys on the states have caught the public eye. The greatest of these, according to Connelly, was the time that he removed all the bulbs from the huge sign "ARENA" on the outside of the building in the afternoon. That night, while other patrons were crowding the lines in order to buy tickets, "One-Eye" walked up to the entrance, took a ladder off his shoulder and proceeded to replace each of the bulbs. Then picking up his ladder, he proceeded unaccompanied through the main gate to the prize ring.

On another occasion he carried a block of ice through the gate into the arena of the Dempsey-Gibbons fight in Shelby, Mont. A few moments later he reappeared on the inside of the gate with a bucket in each hand.

"Remember me?" demanded Connelly.

"Sure, you're the guy that just brought the ice for the press," returned the alert gate-keeper.

"Well, I'm going to get some water to wash it off," said Connelly, and he was off on another adventure in gate-crashing. Returning with the water, he washed the ice, made ice-water, and sold it for a net profit of $122.

Perhaps the most difficult gate Connelly ever crashed was in Jersey City, N. J., when he was thrown out of 13 of the 15 entrances to the Dempsey-Carpenter fight. Using a basket of sandwiches and a gallon of coffee which someone had "misplaced," "One-Eye" made his grand entrance.

Every attempt to evade the entrance fees has not ended successfully for "One-Eye." Last year at the Rose Bowl he succeeded in getting past the gate only to be accused by an irritable official who accused him of "slipping in."

"Sure I slipped in, retorted 'One-Eye,' only fools have tickets."

This official, who seemed a little brighter than the usual run-of-the-mill, told Connelly that he was going to take him over to the cheering section of the Stanford team. It turned out that Connelly spent the game locked in a room under the stands. After a night in jail Connelly was brought before a judge and sentenced to 10 days in jail.

A large number of reporters were present and one protected the judge's decision. The result was that the judge released Connelly eral years ago when the Galloping Ghent was yet in college. Grange learned that Connelly had come to Indiana to see him play and told him that if he could beat Zuppke's gate force, he would give him the ring. After the game Grange took a small gold band down to the jeweler and had engraved on it, "To 'One-Eye' from Red Grange."

"Tennessee won't get far this year," affirmed Connelly as he thought of football for a moment. "They're a good team, he hastened to add, "but there are some lots better."

I don't follow football or politics... or the lot. Never cared much for that sort of thing. It seems kind of silly... all that clamor about such little things. Anyway, I'm still a kid. And after all, kids just don't get around like they will some day.

One thing, though. Reckon I'm an authority on eating, if there ever was one. Guess kids eat just about as much as anyone. Yes sir! So when I ate lunch the other day with some other pledges... one of them suggested we go to the COMMONS. Sounded funny to me, but we hot-foots it over there... and what do you know... the place was full of fellows just like me.

Well sir, you could have knocked me over with a feather... but there we were and there we ate. And guess what? I liked it! Yeah... the food's swell... and the service just as good. And what I like (me with my meager pin money) is the extra low prices. They'll slay yah... (the prices, I mean).

Grillology As A Crip Course

Grillology class-room is in the basement of the Student Union building. Unlike other class-rooms it has no evenly-spaced study chairs; instead its seating arrangement consists of a squad of tables fired in like bucketshot. There is no blackboard; instead there is a black soda fountain behind which the laboratory assistants, in white uniforms, work with coca-colas and ice cream and what'll you have?

Reasons for the popularity of the course are many, varying with the opinions of the grillhounds. "I like the grill," says blonde Pat Pennebaker. "I guess because there are always so many people down there. It's a good place to come and talk and meet your twils."

Lack of order, lack of worthwhile talk, lack of fresh air, lack of seats are many of the blackmarks against the Grill.

None of them, however, keeps even the people who make complaints out of this Grillology class-room. And everyone knows what happens when there's a University convention. Memorial hall just can't accommodate the entire student body.

Rally, Parade, Mum Sale Will Precede Grid Fest

Kirwan, Rupp, Kern To Speak Friday Night

A pep rally and parade tonight, flower sales, cards stunts, band formations, and the Union building's formal for tomorrow are scheduled for the week-end celebration built around Saturday afternoon's Kentucky - West Virginia football game.

Ab Kirwan, head football coach; Adolph Rupp, head basketball coach; and Bill Kern, West Virginia football coach, will be the featured speakers at the SuKy pep rally at 7 p. m. today at Alumni gym. The pep rally will be broadcast between 7:15 and 7:45 over WLAF.

Kirwan will talk about Kentucky's chances in the game against West Virginia tomorrow. In return Kern, who was judged the nation's outstanding coach at Carnegie Tech, will tell his hopes for West Virginia's victory.

Rupp will discuss the lack of school spirit in the University student body and will suggest possible remedies.

WILDCATS JUMP 9 POINTS HIGHER FOR LITKENHOUS

Kentucky Is Rated 10.6 Points Better Than Mountaineers

By BOB ADAIR

Bobbing up and down the football ladder like the apple in the tub at a halloween party, Kentucky jumped up 9.1 points in the Litkenhous Difference by Score System this week to a mark of 81.5 as a result of last Saturday's 21-6 victory over Xavier.

The Cats are rated 10.6 points better than West Virginia as a result of their leap. The Mountaineers dropped a 28-0 decision to the powerful Fordham Rams for a ranking of 70.9.

Broadway bookies also seem to believe that the Wildcats will bite the victory apple, quoting Kentucky as 13-to-5 favorites.

Vanderbilt, after successive victories over Kentucky and Georgia Tech, climbed to a lofty perch on the eighth rung in the nation's gridiron ladder this week. Northwestern, Dartmouth, and Ohio State slid out of the high atmosphere zone, being replaced by Vandy, Texas A & M, and Tulane in the top ten bracket.

Teams occupying the top ten rungs in the ladder, according to the Litkenhous ratings are:

Minnesota	100.5
Duke	100.0
Texas	99.9
Navy	99.1
Texas A & M	98.9
Michigan	98.7
Fordham	98.0
Vanderbilt	96.7
Notre Dame	95.5
Tulane	85.4

CATS ARE LAST, VANDY FIRST, IN CONFERENCE

Tulane Is Second, Mississippi Third, In Southeastern

Vanderbilt, who finished last in 1940, took the lead in the Southeastern conference Saturday by virtue of their win over Georgia Tech. The second spot is held by Tulane while the third position is occupied by Mississippi State.

Kentucky, who finished ninth last year, is in last place along with four other Big 12 teams.

Four conference battles are scheduled this Saturday with Alabama meeting Georgia, Mississippi State tangling with Tulane, Auburn playing Georgia Tech, and Florida battling L. S. U.

The standings:

Team	Won	Lost	Tied
Tulane	1	0	0
Mississippi State	2	0	1
Mississippi	0	0	1
Louisiana State	0	0	1
Georgia	0	0	1
Alabama	1	1	0

Auburn	0	1	0
Florida	0	1	0
Kentucky	0	1	0

Added emphasis on home economics training is expected to boost enrollment of women students at the University of California college of agriculture.

Freshman Football Season To Open With UC Barkittens Cincinnati Team Will Play Here Next Saturday

With a squad sprinkled with many bright prospects, Kentucky's yearling footballers will open their three-game schedule next Saturday afternoon when the University of Cincinnati first-year men will invade Stoll field. The Queen City boys eked out a 2-0 victory at Cincinnati last year, although the Cat yearlings more than doubled the count in the first-down and yard-gained columns.

Coach Gene Myers said that this year's crop of freshmen has rounded into a promising outfit and rates above last year's aggregation at the same stage of the season. Barring injuries, the Kittens have a good chance of going through their three game schedule with a perfect record, although they meet two of the best first-year outfits in the South.

The weekend following the Cincinnati contest the Kittens will tangle with the Vanderbilt frosh, a team which administered a 13-0 spanking to them last year.

Their third and last game will be played at Knoxville, with Tennessee's Baby Vols. Last season, after losing their first two games, the Kittens turned in a surprising 12-0 win over the Tennesseans on Stoll field.

Student ticket books will be good for the Cincinnati and Vanderbilt games, both of which will be played on Stoll field.

The freshmen roster includes: 31 men. They are: Rhoades, Rowen, Alhaus, and Todd, centers; Warner, Spangnola, Spurlock, Yarus, Brumback, Jones, and Browning, guards; Crenshaw, Griffin, Settle, Frederick, Crouch, McAllister, tackles; Augustine, Dunning, Minor, and Root, ends; Mathias, Tunstall, Allen, Lair, Cordell, Meeks, Walker, Campbell, Ott, and Mossy, backs.

These Wildkittens Have Graduated To Varsity Berths

It was just last year that Carl Althaus, Bill Portwood, and Charley Kuhn were performing for the Kittens. Other former Wildcat stars who are performing in shoes of a larger size include Noah Mullins, Junie Jones, Clark Wood, and Bob Hebert.
