FOREWORD

It has been said that "there is a place for all in Civilian Defense". Immediately following Pearl Harbor the Citizens of our Community set about to find that place, and the results have been most gratifying.

While various new and independent groups have been formed and literally thousands have made personal sacrifices in many ways to acquire training necessary to fit them for Service, it is our aim to list herein existing groups, already organized, together with their purposes, and the extent of their voluntary participation in the Defense effort.

That errors may occur in this volume we do not doubt. Further, it is realized that the listings are by no means complete. Practically every local organization has pledged support and cooperation.

We are in a total war and our Nation faces the gravest dangers of its existence. The Citizens' Service Corps is extended for complete mobilization to safeguard those liberties for which our forefathers fought and died. Each and everyone will want to do his or her part. To that end this listing of Community Organizations should prove most useful. It may be the means of finding a place where individuals may enlist to the benefit of the general public and to one another.

We are indebted to those whose efforts have made this compilation possible and available.

PAUL R. JARRATT
Coordinator
Nashville-Davidson County Defense Council

PREFACE

Only by full utilization of all civic resources, particularly of organized bodies with well-developed plans and procedures, can the local civilian defense program of any community be consummated. Realizing that a guide to such resources can be of value to all defense agencies, planning bodies, and other official bureaus involved in local defense activities and war work, this Inventory of Civilian Organizations Participating in the Nashville Defense Program is the result of a study undertaken in the spring and summer of 1942 at the request of the Nashville - Davidson County Defense Council and the Tennessee State Planning Commission, to make available for State and local use an inventory of potential civic organizational resources. The scope of this survey was restricted to voluntary civic organizations having no official or governmental status. Similar surveys are also being conducted in the cities of Memphis and Knoxville.

This Inventory indicates the current local defense activities of 244 Nashville clubs, associations, and societies in which they are engaged as organized groups. Other defense activities in which these organizations are interested or for which they are training are also indicated. After the name of the organization are given the affiliation, address, date of organization, officers with their addresses, telephone numbers, and terms; membership, purposes, and current or long-range activities of the civic bodies. A list of organizations which were contacted but whose members might be participating in the Nashville Defense Program as individuals and not as identifiable organizations follows the entries in this book. A number of civic organizations have disbanded for the duration of the war. All active and several inactive organizations in Nashville were contacted to determine their status in the local defense program. An index of defense activities follows the list of organizations reporting no defense activities.

While members of many organizations listed herein are engaged in preparation of surgical dressings, only the American Red Cross is authorized as a body to undertake the work, and all surgical dressings are prepared under its auspices. Red Cross Assistance may thus cover, in some cases, the activity of preparing surgical dressings. Names of lodges, chapters, etc., follow the group name, as for example, Free and Accepted Masons, Parent-Teacher Associations, and Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

The field data for this volume was collected by personal interviews with representatives of the organizations listed herein and approved by them. The material was gathered by Dan R. Wallace, Maude Begin, Lucile Hosale, Ballard O. Donnell and Nicholas F. Hobson, Jr. Editing of forms and preparation of entries was done by Beatrice O. Kannon and Elliott S. Ford, typing and cutting of stencils by Marie P. Stewart, Mary B. Morel, and Eleanor Waters, proofreading by Virginia H. Sibert, and mimeographing and assembly by Sue S. Jones and Mae C. Yates. Preparation and publication of this book was under supervision of the undersigned. This project has been under the general administrative supervision of Mrs. Betty Hunt Luck, State Director of the Service Division. This project has also published a Guide to Church Vital Statistics in Tennessee and a Preliminary Inventory of Maps in Tennessee.

Acknowledgment of cooperation is due officials of all Nashville organizations who were contacted in the compilation of this Inventory. Particular acknowledgment is made to Paul R. Jarratt, Coordinator of the Nashville - Davidson County Defense Council, and to William D. Price and Dennis W. Eagan, of the Tennessee State Planning Commission, for valuable suggestions and criticisms.
