PREFACE

The Inventory of Federal Archives in the States is one of the products of the work of the Survey of Federal Archives, which operated as a nation-wide project of the Works Progress Administration from January 1, 1936 to June 30, 1937, and has been continued since that date as a unit of the Historical Records Survey, also operating as a nation-wide project of the Works Progress Administration, and a group of state or local projects of that Administration and of the Work Projects Administration.

The plan for the organization of the Inventory is as follows: Series I consists of reports on the administration of the Survey, acknowledgments, and general discussions of the location, condition, and content of federal archives in the states. Succeeding series contain the detailed information secured by workers of the Survey, in inventory form, a separate series number being assigned to each of the executive departments (except the Department of State) and other major units of the Federal Government. Within each series No. 1 is a general introduction to the field organization and records of the governmental agency concerned; the succeeding numbers contain the inventory proper, separate numbers being assigned to each state in alphabetical order. Thus, in each series, the inventory for Alabama is No. 2, that for Arizona, No. 3, that for Arkansas No. 4, etc.

For each local office information regarding each series, or unit of related records, is presented in the following order: title, inclusive dates ("to date" indicating an open file at the time the information was secured), general description of informational content, description of the system of filing or indexing (if any), a statement of frequency and purpose of use, form of the record itself (bound volumes, sheets in folders, etc.), linear footage, description of the containers, physical condition of the records (not stated if satisfactory), location by room number or other identifying information, and finally, the number of the Form 58SA on which this information was originally recorded by a Survey worker and from which it was abstracted for the Inventory. This form is on file in The National Archives. When it contains substantial information on addenda sheets which has not been included in the mimeographed abstract, indication of this is given by use of the reference "See addenda."

In Ohio the work of the Survey was under the direction of Dr. William D. Overman with Mr. William M. Verross as his assistant until February 15, 1937. At that time Mr. Verross became director and served until February 1938. Since then Federal archives work has been under the technical direction of the Ohio Historical Records Survey Project. Dr. John H. McMinn, in charge of the Federal Archives unit, assisted by Mr. Wilbert R. Bruce, classified and edited the materials. This inventory of the records of the Department of Justice was prepared in the Columbus office of the Survey and was edited, before final typing, by Mr. R. R. Stenberg of the Washington office.

INTRODUCTION

An Attorney General was appointed by the Judiciary act of 1789 but he had no department under him. For decades he had no supervision or control over those presumably working under his direction. The district attorneys and marshals throughout the country were practically autonomous. Edmund Randolph, the first Attorney General, perceiving the weakness of such a system, recommended that the Attorney General be given control over the district attorneys.¹ This control was not granted until 1861.² The act of 1861 required the district attorneys and marshals to submit reports to the Attorney General, and provided him with clerks to inspect these reports.³ As early as 1867 a bill was introduced in the House of Representatives to bring "all the law officers of the government into one department."⁴ The Department of Justice was not created, however, until June 22, 1870, when the Attorney General at last became the head of an executive department.

Congress authorized the first Federal district court in Ohio in 1803 to sit at "the seat of Government." A district attorney and marshal were provided.⁵ Because Chillicothe was "the seat of government," the first United States district attorney and marshal in Ohio had their official headquarters there. In 1807 Ohio was made a part of the Seventh Circuit,⁶ and sessions of the circuit court were likewise to be held at Chillicothe.

In 1816, after a struggle between politicians representing various localities, Columbus was made the state capital,⁷ and four years later Congress ordained that the district court in the Ohio district and the ⁵United States Statutes at Large, II, 202. The district attorney and marshal were to receive "the fees stipulated for these officers" plus $200 each per annum. Vols. I-VIII of the United States Statutes at Large were compiled and edited by Richard Peters (Boston, 1848-1856); Vols. IX and X by George Minot (Boston, 1851, 1863); Vol. XI by George Minot and George P. Sanger (Boston, 1859); Vols. XII-XVII by George P. Sanger (Boston, 1863-1879). Beginning with Vol. XVIII, which was published in 1875, all volumes (XVIII-XLI, which was published in 1938) have been published by the United States Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C.

⁶U. S. Stat. at Large, II, 420. Kentucky and Tennessee were placed in the same circuit. In 1866 Ohio was placed in the Sixth Circuit together with Michigan, Kentucky, and Tennessee. Ohio remains to this day in the Sixth Circuit. (U. S. Stat. at Large, XIV, 209).

circuit court should meet in that city. The district attorney and marshal accordingly shifted their headquarters.⁸ These courts remained at Columbus until 1842, when they moved to Cincinnati. The law of 1842 also authorized an adjourned term of the district court for Cleveland.⁹ Inasmuch as there was no mention in the law to the effect that an attorney or marshal was to be instituted at Cleveland, it must be assumed that the officials who had been serving in those capacities elsewhere were to serve as well in that city.

In 1855 Ohio was divided into two districts, northern and southern. Cleveland was designated as the seat of the Northern District, and Cincinnati as that of the Southern. A district attorney and marshal were ordered appointed for the Southern District; the district attorney and marshal who had previously served the whole state were now attached to the Northern District.¹⁰

In 1878 the Northern District was divided into Eastern and Western divisions. Cleveland was made the seat of the eastern division, and Toledo that of the Western; but no additional clerk or marshal was appointed, and it was stipulated that records and papers pertaining to cases in the Western division were to be transferred to the deputy clerk in Toledo.¹¹ This makes it reasonable to assume that a deputy clerk had been created at Toledo in 1872, when optional sessions of the district court were authorized for that city. The deputy marshal was probably installed there about the same time.¹²

The Southern District was divided in 1880 into the Eastern and Western divisions. Cincinnati was to be the seat of the Western division, and Columbus that of the Eastern. It was specifically stated, however, that for the Eastern division "no additional clerk or marshal shall be appointed in said district."¹³ At what date a deputy marshal was established in Columbus is unknown. The office of district attorney was created in that city about 1888.

By 1891 it had become evident that the Supreme Court was so overburdened that a subordinate court of appeals was necessary. Hence there was established in that year the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Sixth Circuit was to include the same territory as the old circuit court had, that is, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, and Tennessee. The court was to hold sessions in Cincinnati. A clerk and a marshal were provided for the court.¹⁴

The Judiciary Act of 1911 provided that two terms of the district court should be held each year at Youngstown. A deputy marshal was not placed in that city, however, until about 1922. A deputy marshal's office was established at Steubenville in 1920.

The office of the Special Attorney of the Lands Division, Department of Justice, was established at Zanesville on June 11, 1936. Its purpose is to handle all land title litigation and transactions originating with the Soil Conservation Service and the Resettlement Administration in effecting their programs in the Muskingum River Valley. It cooperates in this work with the office of the Title Attorney of the Lands Division, Department of Agriculture, at Columbus.

Offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were opened in Cleveland and Cincinnati in 1935. The Director of the Bureau has supervision over investigations of violations of Federal laws except in those matters assigned to some other Federal body, "such as counterfeiting, postal violations, customs violations, immigration and naturalization and internal revenue matters."¹⁵

Prior to 1933 all War Risk Insurance litigation was handled by the Veterans' Administration. In that year, however, such activities were placed under the Bureau of War Risk Litigation, Department of Justice. The Bureau has charge of all litigation in connection with war risk insurance, exclusive of claims in favor of the Government, and of matters generally which arise under the World War Veterans' Act and kindred statutes. In this work it cooperates closely with the Veterans' Administration.

¹⁵U. S. Government Manual (Washington, D.C., 1939), 106-107. It is interesting to note that this Bureau, which now has such wide powers, "started as a force of examiners hired by the Attorney General from other departments to audit the accounts of the law officers." (Lange-luttig, op. cit., 15).

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERALCINCINNATI

ASSISTANT UNITED STATES ATTORNEY
Federal Bldg., Fifth, Main, and Walnut Sts.

The date of the establishment of the United States Attorney's office in Cincinnati is not known, but it is thought that it was set up in 1842 when the District Court was transferred from Columbus to that city. In any case, it remained under the direction of the Federal Judiciary until 1870, when the Department of Justice was created. Its jurisdiction includes the area covered by the Western Division of the Southern Judicial District of Ohio, in which it is charged with the prosecution of violations of Federal statutes. It has been continuously located in the Federal Building. Careful records have been kept, but those originating prior to 1870 were probably placed in the custody of the Judiciary when the transfer to the newly created Department of Justice was made. None of the records antedate 1884. They are fairly complete up to 1920. The records since 1920 are sufficiently complete to give an accurate picture of all activities of the office.
