

complimentary letter to me, to be used as a reference, in procuring a new room.
Business is a little dull will be until March, they say, Jo Stille is not in idleness, she assists me greatly, besides I want her to go to those concerts all she can, Mr. K. is very kind to her, as well as us, and will come to Richmond to see Al or any one else, if we but say the word, he is quite ready to do it, and advises her in every thing, to consult me. Charles has said from the 1st. that Al got this whole thing up, to get aid of her for a purpose, perhaps his mother has promised to deed him a lot

Friday Evening

My dear Gittie

Your letter to Stille just-received, are how sorry we feel for you, Before 10 o'clock the morning she came here, she told me all about the Great Northern storie, and I had never asked her whether you had been told a word; but Al knows and I know, that she done nothing wrong, it was independent, but if they both knew the detective was after them, and I heard her tell him, Al before the detective had told him, I was with them
