Placement service changes references to be more reliable

By BRIDGET McFARLAND
Staff Writer

The Placement Center has implemented two changes in its student registration process that may lend more credibility to references according to Harry Jones, associate director of the Placement Service.

Students now deliver their own "Rating and Opinion Sheets" to be completed by the faculty member, staff member or employer they have chosen as a reference. In the past the Placement Service sent the forms directly to the reference.

Also, students may now waive their right to review how they were rated by their reference.

Jones said the changes lend more credibility because hand delivery of the rating sheets encourages the students and their chosen references to discuss the rating. Students then may decide whether to waive their right to review. Hand delivering the rating sheets also helps professors match students' names with their faces.

"In recent years we've had a lot of flack from employees about references not being worth anything that the references weren't accurate. Since it's open information, a student can remove an unfavorable reference from his file," Jones said.

If, after waiving their right to review, students feel there is an unfavorable reference in their file, they may discuss the issue with a Placement Service staff member and have a reference removed.

Prospective employers are presently being informed when students waive their right to review. Jones said if an employer knows the student won't have access to his reference file this may possibly give more credence to a student's references. Also, according to Jones, students will give more consideration to those chosen as references.

Ian Hurst, assistant director of the Placement Service said it is important to start looking for a job early if you are graduating in May. "Now is the time to be interviewing, not in April," Hurst said. "The recruiting service runs from the end of September to mid-December and from the end of January to mid-April."

The Placement Service issues bulletins on the 1st, 10th and 20th of each month announcing what corporations and companies will be holding campus-based interviews during the upcoming week. To participate in the interviews, students must register with the Placement Service, meet the eligibility requirements for the available jobs and sign up for the interview two days in advance.

Before participating in an interview, Hurst stressed that a student should make an appointment with a Placement Service staff member to discuss various aspects of the interview and job hunting in general. Staff members can offer advice on resume preparation, references and letters of inquiry.

Day attack made by alleged rapist

By DEBBIE MCDANIEL

Another female UK student became the third victim of an alleged rapist when she was "detained" Saturday morning near Blanding Tower. UK Police Chief Paul Harrison said last night.

"As I understand it, we did have one (incident) Saturday morning," he said. "I have not read the report, or talked to the officer (who took the report)."

"There was an incident Saturday morning," UK Safety Director Tom Padgett said in confirmation. "It was at the complex." However, he said he did not have any other details.

Harrison said nothing "serious" happened. "A girl was detained for a few minutes, but she got away."

Saturday's incident is the third attack in the campus area in two weeks.

According to police reports, the suspect is a 5 foot 10 male, with a medium build and short brown hair. He wore an old, olive army jacket, and a blue stocking cap with some type of trim the first two incidents, Harrison said. However, the third victim said he was not wearing the jacket Saturday.

On Jan. 7, a 21-year-old woman told police she was raped early in the morning, before dawn. She said she was walking from the Newman Center on Rose Lane when a man approached her from behind, pulled a knife and forced her into an apartment doorway on Grossenor Avenue, which is one block north of Maxwell Street. An attempted rape occurred around dawn Wednesday, when another 21-year-old woman was walking alone on Hilltop Avenue, in front of the Kappa Alpha house. She said she was grabbed by a man and gave a description similar to the one reported by the first victim.

The assailant held a knife to her throat but she screamed and frightened him away.

"We're concerned the attacks are related because of the time of day they occurred and basic generalities," Padgett said in the Kernel Friday.

Although Saturday's assailant was not wearing an army jacket, Harrison said he believes the three attacks were committed by the same man. "As far as we know the guy fit the description," he said. "There were some similarities."

Despite the fact the three victims did not get a good look at the man, Harrison said police believe he is a Caucasian and approximately 25 years old.

"We've beefed up the investigation," Harrison said. "We've worked on it pretty heavy since Wednesday, and we've checked out some suspects."

Harrison said he will read the report of the third incident today and discuss the situation with the campus police department. "Sometime Monday morning we will probably have a good long meeting and decide what to do about it," he said.

Joe Hall says 6-10 center is quitting team

By JOHN CLAY
Assistant Sports Editor and

Kentucky basketball coach Joe B. Hall expressed concern last night over the possible departure of starting center Chuck Aleksinas.

When contacted at his home, Hall said Aleksinas missed practice yesterday, and added, "I assume that by missing practice he has left the team, but I hope to talk to him."

Although Aleksinas had not contacted Hall, the UK coach said, "He told the players before practice that he was quitting."

If Aleksinas has indeed left the team, he will be the second player to do so in the past three weeks. Junior forward Tim Stephens transferred to Cumberland College after UK's win over Notre Dame.

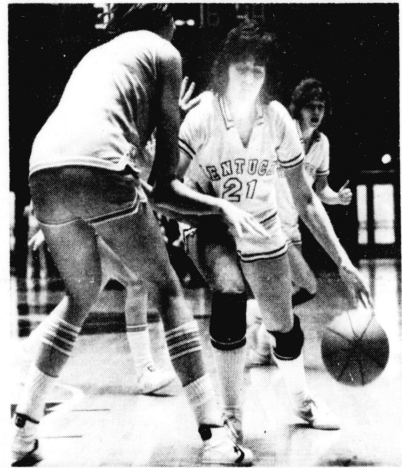

Aleksinas is a sophomore from Morris, Conn., and started every game for the Wildcats. He averages 11.5 points and six rebounds a game.

Neither the players nor Aleksinas could be reached for comment.

Big day for Kats

Saturday was a big day for Kentucky women's basketball team. The host Lady Kats upset No. 4 Tennessee 66-64 on a basket by junior forward Debra Oden, who had 13 points. Starting from the top picture, UK guard Gert Grigsby is shown here emphasizing a point to coaches Diane Beauchamp (center) and Debbie Yow during a timeout. Grigsby poured in 13 points. In the middle, Kentucky forward Maria Donhoff (21) drives past 6-5 center Cindy Noble of the Lady Vols. The bottom picture shows UK senior Janet Timperman running through the rowdy fans of Haggin Hall on her way to the locker room following the game. See story on page 4.

More snow heading for Kentucky

Just when it was almost all gone, snow re-covered Kentucky with a white blanket over the weekend, making driving hazardous and giving many school children another unexpected vacation.

According to the local weather service, only hopes of cloudy skies should be on the ground this morning. Snow should diminish to flurries today.

Warmer temperatures and rain that began Saturday continued yesterday and then changed to sleet and snow as a cold front moved eastward across the state.

Some parts of Kentucky had received up to two inches of snow by late yesterday. As the snow ended from the west last night, additional accumulations of one to two inches were forecast for central Kentucky while the southeastern mountains were expected to get up to another four inches.

As a high pressure system from the Gulf Coast nears Kentucky today, the snow was forecast to change to flurries in the east while the west was expected to get at least a glimpse of the sun. Sunshine was predicted for all of Kentucky tomorrow, but another storm system is brewing in the West, leaving only hopes of cloudy skies again this week.

The National Weather Service said Wednesday would bring another chance of snow. Temperatures later in the week are expected to drop to the teens and low 20s.

Temperatures yesterday held nearly steady in the upper 20's in the West to the low to mid 30's in the East. The same range was forecast for today, with slightly warming temperatures expected tomorrow before the arrival of the other storm system.

State police described driving conditions as slick, hazardous and worsening because of the snow. Police reported numerous traffic accidents, but said there had been no weather-related fatalities.

This weekend's snow is not expected to affect classes at UK, however. There are a lot of different factors involved in the decision to call off classes.

"Our situation isn't like that of the Fayette County Schools," Dean of Students Joe Burch said yesterday. "The students are here. We don't have the same transportation problem."

"Normally I will survey the situation early in the morning and talk with the vice president of business affairs, and decide if we feel it is necessary to alter the University schedule," Safety Director Tom Padgett said.

James Wessels, director of the physical plant, said 70 or 80 workers began snow removal around 4 a.m. at the Medical Center, and would begin clearing snow from central campus around 7:30 a.m. "They'll be getting sidewalks and steps," he said. Streets and parking lots should be clear unless the snow is deep, he said.

THE SHAPE OF TAX RELIEF in the current special legislative session now can be discerned, but not its permanence.

There is little doubt that the General Assembly will eliminate the 5 cent sales tax on home utilities, excluding telephones.

It seems just as inevitable that the lawmakers will impose a ceiling on state and local property taxes.

With most of them facing election in the May primary, they probably could hardly afford to do otherwise.

And all this may be accomplished within the next three weeks, with the Legislature also cleaning up the largely non-controversial and technical cluster of other items on the session agenda.

THE NEW, ECONOMY-MINDED CONGRESS receives President Carter's recommended budget this week, the first salvo in what shapes up as a year-long battle over spending.

Carter sends his spending blueprint for fiscal 1980 to the Capitol today, and follows up Tuesday night with a nationally televised State of the Union address to a joint session of the House and Senate.

With many lawmakers calling for restraint in spending, the president is expected to call for a budget of about $532 billion and a deficit of roughly $29 billion.

POPE JOHN PAUL II INAUGURATES A CONFERENCE of bishops in Puebla, Mexico next Saturday that is expected to have crucial meaning for the Roman Catholic Church in Latin America. Some theologians say its repercussions on Christianity could spread throughout the world.

The 350 or so Latin American bishops will try to reconcile the mission of evangelization with social needs. They are seeking to maintain unity in the face of a growing clamor from churchmen and laity for faster social and political change.

This intra-church debate has been particularly strong in Latin America. The experience gathered in the Conference of the Latin American Episcopate, meeting Jan. 27-Feb. 12, may especially influence the thinking of Roman Catholic prelates in the Third World regions of Asia and Africa.

WARM SUNNY SKIES WITH HIGHS expected near 80 today in Orlando, Florida. Here, skies will be cloudy with snow diminishing to flurries on Blanding Beach. Highs in the upper 20s to low 30s today, with temperatures dropping from 15 to 20. Too bad spring bread is 54 days away!

Repair needs should be met in north dorms

Whether Boyd Hall passes or fails local building standards is unimportant.

What matters is that many sections of the North Campus residence hall are in disrepair, and students who live there must endure inexcusable discomforts: drafty sections that are either too hot or too cold, leaky ceilings, holes in walls, unsightly bathrooms, exposed heating pipes and a crude "study room" complete with sink, bicycle and a single chair.

A visit from a city housing inspector turned up no violations of city building or housing codes, and the inspector said Boyd Hall wasn't in too bad condition — for a building its age. What no official has said is that they or their children would be happy living there.

It is a tribute to the adaptability of college students that some Boyd Hall residents protested a new plan that will convert their home to a freshmen women's dorm next year. Evidently, the terrors that were already known were preferable to unknown ones. Or maybe they didn't want to move to the far-flung new apartments somewhere in the nether regions beyond Commonwealth Stadium, or didn't want to live in soon-to-be-cooed Keeneland Hall.

Perhaps the change in dorm assignments will inspire more action on making Boyd Hall a decent building. The parents of freshmen girls will doubtless be very circumspect about where their children live. If Boyd Hall hasn't been improved by August, the complaints will be many and loud.

The University should take steps to substantially renovate Boyd Hall this summer before opening next fall, paying particular attention to the problems cited above. So far, the repairs seem to have been limited to new coats of paint, and that's not enough.

Campus housing is so over-requested now that closing down Boyd or any dorm is out of the question. But in formulating long-range plans, Boyd and other aging dorms should be either rebuilt from the inside, keeping the outer shell, or replaced by new buildings — preferably on the North side.

Expansion to the South now stretches an uncomfortable distance from classroom buildings, and that's probably the reason the new apartments haven't been highly requested. The choice property closer to downtown should remain reserved for campus housing — housing that now needs to be improved.

A down and up world

Franklin's roommate discovers the world that transcends all others

BY GREGG FIELDS

In my four years at this bastion of higher education, I've discovered two groups that cut across all social, political and economic barriers: the drunks and the sobers.

My roommate is one of the former. So are all his friends. So are most of the people I've met here.

'franklin and me' by gregg fields

Every Friday afternoon at 1:50:05, Franklin becomes for the next 48 hours a raving, craving, ill-behaving alcoholic who makes W.C. Fields look like a member of the Temperance Union.

Last Friday, when I got home, Franklin was at the kitchen table, pouring cornflakes into a bowl.

"What's going on?" I asked.

"Nothing much," he answered, setting the cereal box on the table.

"You want to go to a party at John's tonight?"

I sat down and put my books on the table. "I don't know. Remember the last time John had a party and when the keg ran dry they accidentally tapped a can of Janitor in a Drum?"

"It was an honest mistake," Franklin said. "Besides, that stuff's pretty good mixed with tonic."

He reached into the refrigerator, pulled out a can of Miller beer and popped the top. I stared in disbelief as he poured the beer over the cereal.

"Franklin, why are you eating cornflakes with beer?"

"Because I didn't have breakfast," he said.

"You're supposed to use milk — it's nourishing."

"Hey, no problem," he answered. "I'm going to drink screwdrivers with it. They give you vitamin C."

"No," he answered, looking contemplative. "What do you use for a mixer with it?"

I cleared my throat. "Never mind." That evening after dinner we drove out to John's apartment, which is on a sidestreet off Richmond Road. The party was audible for three blocks.

John opened his door after we knocked. "What's happening?" he yelled over the music, squinting his eyes. He paused. "Who are you?"

"I'm Gregg," I said. "Remember? We've known each other since elementary school."

"Oh, yeah," he said, falling against a wall. "Hurry up and get a mug of beer. We've got a good game of buzz going."

"What's buzz?" I asked.

"It's a game where everyone stands around and drinks," he explained.

"Sounds complicated."

"That depends on how long you play," he said.

The apartment was so crowded that my elbows made imprints on my stomach. The tipsy crowd swayed and swerved, like a weeping willow in a breeze. The noise was deafening; conversation was impossible.

After a few minutes I grabbed a cup to go get a beer from the keg, which was in the bathtub. When I got to the bathroom I saw Franklin. He had the keg's hose in his mouth; the tap was on.

I groaned. "Why don't you drink it out of a cup like everyone else?"

Franklin pulled the hose out of his mouth and belched so loudly the wall quivered. "Ish nawt as fress that way," he slurred. He stood up, then sat quickly back down. "Oh, wow. My head's spinning."

"What do you expect? The last time you drank this much it took four tubes of toothpaste and a bottle of Lazoris just to cut through the sludge on your tongue the next morning."

"Gregg, could we leave here for awhile?"

"But we just got here," I answered.

"Besides, Sheila called today and said she'd meet me here."

"Pleesh," he stammered. "I'm starving. Lesh go eat and then come back."

Under protest, I drove him to Flesh's, home of the Big Belch sandwich. As we walked in, the manager locked the door behind us.

"You're our last customers tonight," he said.

"So where's our prize?" Franklin said.

I ignored Franklin's remark and led the two of us to a table. We sat down and a middle-aged waitress came over and gave us each a glass of water.

"Let's make it quick, college creeps," she said. "If it weren't for you two I'd be on my way home."

"I gesh the kennel gifs you your own key," Franklin said.

The waitress sneered. "What do you want?"

"We'll both have Big Belch platters," I said quickly, hoping to avoid burned food. "And Cokes."

After the waitress led Franklin produced a bottle of scotch and mixed it with his water. "I get so hungry when I drink," he said. "I think alcohol muss hal tapeworms int." He sipped his drink. "By the way, did you get to see Sheila?"

"Yeah," I said. "On the way out I heard her voice. When I looked down I saw I was walking on her. She'd gotten drunk and fallen on the floor."

He laughed. "So I guess you didn't have a very good time."

"It wasn't bad. It was just awfully hard to talk to people what with the music and the booze."

The waitress brought out orders. Franklin drained his scotch and water, then produced a bottle of bourbon and mixed some with his Coke. "You know..."

Suddenly shock crept into his face. His mouth dropped open and half chewed sandwich began dropping onto his plate. "Purple onion," he gasped. "There's purple onion on this."

"I know," I said.

His forehead was now matted with sweat. His skin was white. "I get out of here," he said nervously.

"But I haven't finished yet."

"Pleesh, I've got to..." his stomach started jerking and his throat quivered. "I think I'm going to..."

His head drew back and his mouth opened uncontrollably. Out flew food and liquor in various stages of digestion. "Please," he gasped breathlessly.

I held my nose and tried not to look down. "Before we go, Franklin," I said calmly. "Let me thank you for barfing on my french fries. Congratulations, also, on landing some of it on my shoes."

The waitress walked by. "Could you two please hur. Oh, my God! Hey, George," she yelled back into the kitchen, "bring a mop. One of those college kids just tossed his cookies."

"Oh, no," Franklin said, putting his hand over his mouth and quickly staggering for the front door.

It was locked. He looked in need of an exorcist as he futilely shook the handle. A middle-aged couple, apparently unaware that the restaurant was closed, walked up to the glass door. Franklin greeted them by covering the door with regurgitated

"You know, I'm going to quit drinking," he said. "From now on I'm on the wagon. Drinking is stupid."

I got up and walked down the hall. I could hear him moaning. I pushed open the bathroom door. Franklin was lying on the floor, his head propped on the lip of a commode.

"Are you all right?" I asked.

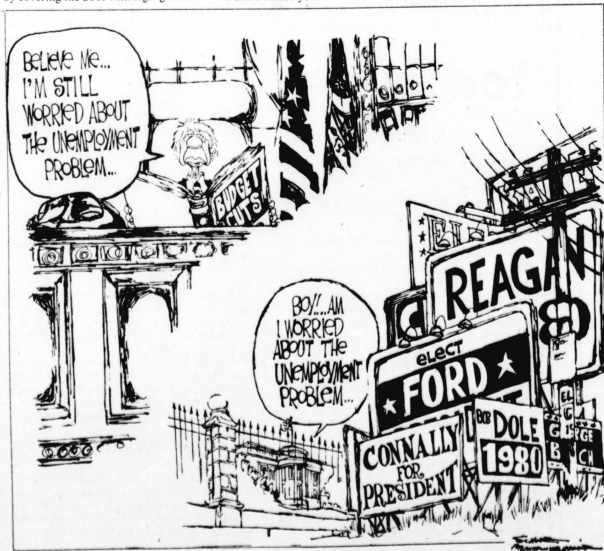

"You didn't tell me this was a revolving restaurant," he said, spitting into the commode.

I laughed at him. "Franklin, you're going to have to get up. For one thing the restaurant's closing. For another, this is the women's bathroom."

He dragged himself up. He mopped his face and hair with paper towels from the dispenser. "I'm so embarrassed," he said.

"I don't blame you."

Television offers a servant's view of White House doings

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - The first time Maggie Rogers entered the White House, a cow was grazing on the lawn and William Howard Taft was in the Oval Office.

Maggie stayed on as a maid to first families until Franklin Roosevelt was in his second term. She was the first black maid to work on the family floor. Her daughter, Lillian Rogers Parks, who as a child was discovered by Taft playing in his oversize bathtub, joined by her mother and remained until the end of the Eisenhower administration.

Backstairs at the White House runs for nine hours over four Mondays on NBC, offering a servant's eye view of eight first families from 1909 to 1961. While it shows that a man can be a hero to his valet, it also has some revelations about the whims, quirks, and eccentricities of presidents and first ladies.

Olivia Cole stars as Maggie and Leslie Uggams as Lillian. Also starring are Louis Gossett Jr., Robert Hooks, Cloris Leachman, Paul Winfield, Leslie Nielsen and Barry Sullivan. The presidents and their wives are played by an all-star cast.

Backstairs at the White House opens a three-hour show on Monday. Two-hour segments follow on the three Mondays.

The first segment, seen in preview, offers a marvelously warm and human story. It is a view from the servants' quarters, where they had their own pecking order. The servants regarded themselves as the only permanent tenants of the White House.

Cole gives her role authority and dignity, while Uggams is more impish, out-going, and fun-loving.

So many three-hour shows sag from having too thin a story stretched too far. Not here. Every minute is crammed with something interesting, showing for instance, the dignified and aloof Mrs. Taft pampering her husband and letting about his health and image. Or how the austere Woodrow Wilson danced with his daughters and had a mischievous sense of humor.

The series offers a reversal of roles from Roots for Cole and Uggams. In ABC's Roots Uggams was Kizzy, and Cole was her daughter-in-law, Matilda.

Autograph hound tells of his vast empire

GREENWOOD, Ind. (AP) - Paul Christen is one one autograph hound who admits he can be ruthless when dogging a celebrity, and he's got more than 430 famous signatures to prove it.

Since he began in 1974, the walls of his den have become crowded with framed signatures of the famous, most scrawled on pictures - people like Herbert Hoover, Anwar Sadat, Jimmy Durante, and Groucho Marx.

"Part of the trick is to get a good address, preferably a home address instead of an office or a studio or agency," Christen said. "I write a brief thing about them personally, something a little flattering. I don't make a big hullabaloo about it. I say how I collect autographs and if they have time, would they please sign this picture and return it to me. I always include postage."

Although Christen says he prefers autographs through the mail, he has bought a few and some have been given to him. And once in a while, he gets to meet the star, but that's not important, he says.

"Meeting them would be nice, but you might not always be able to meet them and then you couldn't get their autograph," Christen explains.

Roots. From the point of view of its characters, Maggie is different from Matilda," Cole said. "Roots was a story about servitude. Backstairs at the White House is about service. The ladies made a contribution at the White House. They were a part of very historical events."

ed. He doesn't consider his requests for autographs as impositions, arguing that because fans provide stars with their livelihoods, the stars owe their fans a little something in return. Some celebs are responsive - like Mae West, who lists her telephone number in the directory, he said.

Others, like the late artist Norman Rockwell, are more reluctant, but Christen said he got that autograph anyway.

"Dear Mr. Christen," Rockwell wrote. "I am curtailing my autograph practice because of the requests. Also, I do not autograph for professional use. I am sorry. Sincerely yours, signed Norman Rockwell."

Experts have confirmed the authenticity of Rockwell's signature, he said.

The thrill of the chase," Christen claims, is half the fun of autograph collecting.

"When he comes home at night, he's always excited and asks, 'Is there any movie mail?'" his wife Cheryl said. "Then if there isn't any, he'll be really depressed and wonder why he even bothered to come home."

"I'm just glad he's collecting autographs instead of what he used to do," she laughs. "Collecting antique cars."

Performance and price are the keys in choosing a calculator. One of these Texas Instruments slide-rules is right for you.

Capability. Quality. Value. The right combination can help you make short work of problems in fields like math, engineering, science and business statistics and give you more time for other important things. Choose the TI calculator that's right for you and get ahead of the game.

TI-55. Advanced slide-rule functions with statistics, programmability and valuable problem-solving applications book.

The versatile TI-55 calculating system is packed with the features and functions you need to handle almost any mathematical operation, from logarithms and trigonometry to advanced statistical problems. Thirty-two steps of programmability add new dimensions of accuracy, speed and ease to performing repetitive calculations and "what-if" analyses. You just teach the TI-55 a series of operations and it performs those steps for you.

For more help in making quantitative decisions, the TI-55 comes with the Calculator Decision-Making Sourcebook, a $5.00 value. The book, 140 pages of easy-to-understand, real-life applications shows you how to use the power of statistics, financial math and programmability in analyzing relationships in data, verifying quality and performance, measuring change, forecasting trends and projecting returns - in short, how to make better decisions, today and tomorrow. Calculator and book combination, only $50.00!

Slimline TI-50. A powerful, stylish slide-rule with new Constant Memory™ feature.

The pocket-portable Slimline TI-50 is today's most powerful liquid crystal display (LCD) slide-rule calculator. It has 60 functions including common and natural logarithms and six trigonometric operations that can be performed in three angular modes (degrees, radians or grads).

Seven built-in statistical functions make it easy to "boil down" large amounts of data so you can perform accurate analyses and draw reliable conclusions.

Two constant memories retain their contents even when the calculator is turned off, so frequently used constants and other basic values are at your fingertips when you need them.

Two miniature batteries provide over 1000 hours of operation in normal use; TI's APD™ automatic power down feature helps prevent accidental battery drain by turning off the calculator after approximately 10 minutes of non-use. With imitation leather wallet, $40.00!

Slimline TI-25. Slide-rule power at a small price.

Economy and value go hand-in-hand with the Slimline TI-25, a pocket-portable LCD scientific calculator that has what it takes to handle advanced math. It provides the most-needed slide-rule functions. Trigonometry in degrees, radians or grads. Plus basic statistical power, too: Mean, Variance, Standard Deviation.

Three levels of parentheses can handle up to three pending operations to make your work easier. Four-key memory allows you to store and recall values, add-to memory contents and exchange stored and displayed numbers.

The TI-25 goes far on a pair of miniature batteries - includes APD™ circuitry. Vinyl wallet included. $33.00!

See the complete lineup of Texas Instruments slide-rule calculators at your dealer today. There's one exactly right for the work you're doing.

UK Lady Kats shock No. 4 Tennessee, 66-64

By BRIAN RICKERD
Assistant Sports Editor

The Kentucky Lady Kats earned an unforgettable memory Saturday afternoon when they shocked fourth-ranked Tennessee 66-64 at Memorial Coliseum.

In doing so, the Kats went back a year in time and gave the 1,500 fans a taste of exciting basketball that had not been seen since last season when UK went 23-12. "We've been so close to the big upset before and this time we finally did it," said Kentucky Coach Debbie Yow afterward as she stood outside the jubilant Lady Kat locker room.

The game was almost a replica of Kentucky's 92-90 double overtime loss to the Lady Vols in the coliseum a year ago. It was one of those "near upsets" that Yow referred to.

UT's All-America forward Cindy Brogdon was the hero in that one, but this time the Lady Kats reversed things.

The Lady Vols had the ball in the final minute with the score tied at 64, but instead of Brogdon hitting one of her patented long-range jumpers, she turned the ball over to Kentucky with 30 seconds remaining.

Guard Gers, she turned the ball over to Kentucky with 30 seconds remaining.

Guard Geri Grigsby dribbled the ball up the floor and the Lady Kats ran down the clock.

"We were just looking for a good shot," Yow said. "We didn't want anything worse than an overtime."

Yow got her wish. With five ticks left in the game, Debra Oden took a pass and released a short jumper that banked off the backboard, bounced on the rim, and dropped through.

Many thought the victory would be a costly one when Kentucky standout center Liz Lukschu got her leg tangled up with a Tennessee player with 3:02 left and went to the bench in obvious pain.

The score was tied at 60 when the incident occurred and it appeared to be a critical blow to the Lady Kats' chances. Lukschu had controlled the inside play up to that point as she pumped in a team-high 19 points and held her Volunteer counterpart, Cindy Noble, to just two points.

Grigsby said the Kats were concerned when Lukschu went out, but "we didn't have time to worry. We wanted to win so bad. We were just hustling and giving it all we had."

That attitude carried the Lady Kats through as they pressured the Vols into their fourth defeat in 15 games.

Tennessee surprises Wildcats

By JAMIE VAUGHT
Sports Editor

Many things went wrong for the young Wildcat basketball team in their 66-55 loss to arch-rival Tennessee Saturday night at Rupp Arena.

1) They could not get their rebounds. The orange-clad Volunteers dominated the game on the boards, outrebounding Kentucky 32-21.

2) They could not find the basket. UK shot only 43 percent as compared to Tennessee's 57.

3) They lost their fifth Southeastern Conference game in six meetings. The setback diminished UK's hopes of finishing first or second in the SEC. No conference winner has lost more than four games. 4) They were not fired up for the game. Unlike Tennessee, UK was listless.

Disappointed Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall thought the lack of emotion was a big factor in UK's rare home loss.

"For some reason or other, we were not emotional about the game and Tennessee was extremely aggressive and emotional," said Hall, whose Cats are now 6-7 overall on the year.

"Tennessee really came to play," he continued. "They played a very aggressive game. They outlasted us on the boards... They worked the ball inside exceptionally well, did a real good job posting up and getting it inside."

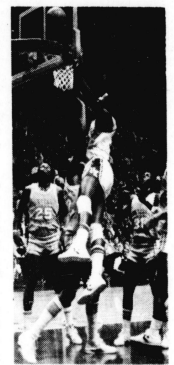

For the first time in three years, UK is playing below .500 ball. In 1976 the Cats were 5-6 after dropping three consecutive SEC games.

The setback was also Kentucky's worst at home since 1974 when Alabama defeated UK 94-71 in Memorial Coliseum.

"I thought the important thing about the game was the fact we went out there and proved early that we could play well here," said Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe, who formerly coached at Virginia Tech and Wyoming. "We controlled the defensive boards. It was our game all the way."

"I am a great believer that the bounce of the ball is vital in rebounding and the bounce tonight was in our favor."

Kentucky was never ahead in the game, but managed to knot the score three times in the early part of the first half. But, then Tennessee, now 4-2 in SEC and 10-7 overall, outscored UK 12-2 to take an 18-8 lead. After a basket by 6-7 sophomore center Howard Wood gave the Vols a 30-20 margin, UK rallied to cut its deficit to three points at halftime, 33-30.

In the opening minutes of the second frame, UK was able to get within one point of Tennessee twice, but the winners broke away the second time by outscoring the Wildcats 11-4 to make it 48-40. After a field goal by LaVon Williams reduced the Volunteers' advantage to five points, 52-47, with about seven minutes remaining, Tennessee

Bradshaw leads Steelers to 'Super' win

MIAMI (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, who so often has seen other National Football League quarterbacks destroyed in the Super Bowl, used the championship game as a personal showcase last night, firing four touchdown passes and leading the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 35-31 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Bradshaw passed for a career-high 318 yards and was an unanimous choice as the game's most valuable player. He constructed the victory much the way he had moved the Steelers to pro football's best record this season by throwing the ball.

The result was the most exciting game in the 13-year history of the Super Bowl series, as Bradshaw staged a brilliant passing duel with Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach. Both men finished with identical passing figures — 17 completions in 30 attempts with one interception apiece.

"We used a lot of play action passes," Bradshaw said. "I was going to play the game my way, win or lose. We turned this team around by going to the air and nobody was going to make me change that."

Certainly not the Cowboys, who simply couldn't control Bradshaw's air game. Lynn Swann caught seven passes for 124 yards and one touchdown. John Stallworth caught three for 115 yards and two touchdowns. And Pittsburgh ran up the highest point total for a Super Bowl champion.

Injured Lukschu paces Kats' attack

Lukschu said she sprained her ankle and hopes to be back for Kentucky's battle with top-ranked Old Dominion next Sunday.

UT Coach Pat Head took the loss calmly in her post-game interview.

"Kentucky played more intensely, consistently, and smarter than we did," she said frankly. "But I didn't think UK played over their heads. Coming into the game I knew they had good personnel."

Grigsby and Oden followed Lukschu in scoring with 13 points apiece. Oden led the Lady Kats in rebounding with eight, while Grigsby's floor game beat the Vols' quick zone press throughout the contest.

"Grigsby did a great job for them," Head said. "She's a great ballhandler."

"I felt like my old self today," Grigsby added.

Most of the Lady Kats were probably feeling the same way as UK found a quick way to turn a dismal season back in the right direction.

Kentucky took the court with a 5-9 record and looked to be no match for the Volunteers who came in 14-1 against a schedule, which included nine games against top 20 teams. In Tennessee's last outing, the Vols defeated Alabama by 33 points while UK lost to that same Crimson Tide team 83-70 last weekend.

But the Lady Kats left their problems behind and played with abandon Saturday afternoon.

The game was tight with the exception of the final five minutes of the first half when Tennessee ran a 10-2 spurt to lead 37-30 at intermission. The two teams appeared even in most categories but the Lady Vols' fast break was hot in the first half and that made the difference.

In the second half Kentucky cut off the break and slowly crept back into the game. The Lady Kats cut the margin to one with 9:08 remaining, and finally knotted the score at 58 with just four minutes to play on two free throws by Lukschu. That set the stage for UK's last hurrah, as the crowd looked on in disbelief.

"How did you do it?"

"We just got sick of losing," Grigsby said. "Lots of people were down on us, but I've always thought we were capable of playing with the best. With this victory we know we can do it."

"They feel like they can do ANYTHING now," Yow added.

Desegregation review team visiting UK and several other Kentucky universities

A federal review of higher education desegregation in Kentucky, which is expected to take about nine months to complete, began Friday. The review team, composed of members from the department of Health, Education and Welfare, plans to visit UK and several other state universities. Although the HEW members are expected to visit UK soon, Vice-president of Minority Affairs John Smith said he has not received an advance letter requesting information they need to evaluate UK.

The review team has not been here since 1975, the year Smith became vice-president. "Usually, a letter is sent to let us know what information to gather for them," Smith said. "We haven't received it. They are looking at the state as a whole, not just UK."

Four representatives of the U.S. Office of Civil Rights outlined their plans to the state Council on Higher Education and indicated they will begin visiting campus next month.

Kentucky is one of numerous Southern and border states that once operated legally segregated higher education systems. The federal government is reviewing desegregation in these states. Universities in the state must convince federal officials that Kentucky has dismantled its once-segregated system.

Harry Snyder, the education council's executive director, said he believes the state's universities will show they have made significant progress toward full integration.

Smith admitted UK has a long way to go toward integration, but added, "student-wise, the University has been improving." There are only 14 black faculty members. Blacks are the largest minority in the state.

Smith also said only 7.2 percent of the states' universities are populated by minorities. "Some other states have minority percentages higher than 27 percent," he said.

Last week Snyder said officials will check: Racial distribution of enrollments, faculty and staff hiring practices, tenure policies, admission requirements, student aid and recruitment.

Snyder said officials will also check athletic programs for signs of desegregation.

"I assume they will be looking at the integrated nature of athletic teams, the distribution of athletic scholarship monies, the racial mix of athletic department employees and conference memberships," Snyder said.

Preliminary plans do not call for officials of the Office of Civil Rights to visit each campus, he added.

Subject to approval from its Washington office, Snyder said the review team now plans to visit UK as well as Kentucky State University, Eastern Kentucky University, Western Kentucky University, UK's Hopkinsville Community College and graduate and professional programs at the University of Louisville.

Snyder said the first campus visit would probably come next month. "They hope to finish campus visits by the end of March and expect to have their report filed around Oct. 1," Snyder said.

He said the report will include the review team's findings. "I assume if they find any vestiges of segregation remaining, their report will enumerate these," Snyder said.

He said Kentucky would then have to file a desegregation plan that would outline how the state plans to overcome these vestiges.

Last year the eight state universities enrolled 108,527 students, including 7,507 blacks. That was 6.9 percent of their enrollment.

Placement services are being improved

During the month of February, the Placement Service is offering two programs to help job-seeking students.

On February 1st, 2nd, 5th and 6th, the Placement Service will videotape mock interviews between students and staff members. After the ten-minute interview, the tape will be played back and critiqued by the student and staff member.

"Videotaping an interview helps students build confidence in interviewing techniques," Hurst said. "Techniques showing enthusiasm and avoiding distractions such as hand fiddling are important during an interview."

Students should sign up for the videotaped interviews at the Placement Service. Hurst said if there is great demand for the service it will be offered again later this semester and next semester.

On Feb. 6, the Placement Service is sponsoring a job search strategies seminar at 7 p.m. in the Commerce Auditorium. It is open to all students and topics of discussion will include: how to use the Placement Service, write a resume and interviewing techniques.

Featured speakers are Jerry Pollard of Proctor and Gamble, Bob Lee of the accounting firm Ernst and Ernst, Ben Crockett of Sears Roebuck and Co. and Peggy McClintock of the UK personnel office. They will offer interviewing suggestions and be available for questions following the seminar.

came back and outtraced UK 14-8 to win its second Rupp Arena victory in three tries.

During that spree, Tennessee had its biggest bulge of the contest — 13 points (66-53) — on a basket by guard Bert Bertelkamp.

Forward Reggie Johnson took the game's scoring honors with 20 points, including two slam dunks. The 6-9 junior connected on nine of 14 shots and also grabbed a game-high of 10 rebounds.

Vols' senior forward Terry Crosby added 14 points, hitting seven of nine from the field, and freshman guard Gary Carter had 13.

Williams, who snatched a team-leading six rebounds, paced the Cats with 19 points, his career-high. Kyle Macy scored 18.

6-3 freshman Anderson, who received his first starting assignment (replacing 6-7 sophomore Freddie Cowan), and Chuck Aleksians added six points apiece.

DeVoe praised some of his players, saying, "I thought Bertelkamp did as good a job in leadership and working the ball as he has all season. Crosby may have been the catalyst for us, hitting those baseline jumpers against their zone."

Kentucky will be hoping to even its record tonight when it faces the Georgia Bulldogs at Rupp Arena. The Bulldogs, coming off their 78-76 loss to SEC leader Vanderbilt Saturday night, are 2-4 in SEC play and 7-6 overall.

Georgia, coached by former Florida State boss Hugh Durham, returns three key players from last year's team in 6-10 center LaVon Mercer, 6-10 forward Lucius Foster and guard Walter Daniels, the SEC's top scorer with 24 ppg.
