3-pointers nearly cause Cat disaster

By ANDY DUMSTORF
Sports Editor

Eddie Sutton said at the start of the season the three-point shot would revolutionize the game of college basketball.

So far this year it has been the major topic of discussion, ranking up in the popularity polls with the NFL's controversial instant replay.

As the season continues, surely the new regulation will be on the minds of hoop junkies who will argue at their favorite local bars until they're blue in the face.

Saturday night the three-point game almost left the 22,630 Wildcat faithful, who filled Rupp Arena for the season opener against Austin Peay, singing the blues.

Only Irv Thomas' 12-foot baseline jumper with 18 seconds left coupled with an 18-foot air ball by Austin Peay's Vincent Brooks saved the Wildcats (1-0) from embarrassment, and sealed a 71-69 victory over the lowly Governors (0-2).

But Brooks and bulky Peay center Darryl Bedford nailed crucial three-pointers to keep the game close for former UK assistant Lake Kelly, now the Governor's head coach. On the night, the two connected on five three-pointers in seven attempts, while UK could muster only 2-of-9 shooting.

Kelly, however, hadn't even thought about using the three-point shot to his team's advantage.

"I was ignoring the three-pointer all preseason and hoping it would go away," he said.

No matter, the three-point shot could have proven to be the difference as the unranked Governors almost upset the 11th-ranked Wildcats.

Four of Austin Peay's three-pointers came in the final eight minutes. The first coming from Brooks with Kentucky on top 60-50, appearing to be on the verge of putting the Governors on ice.

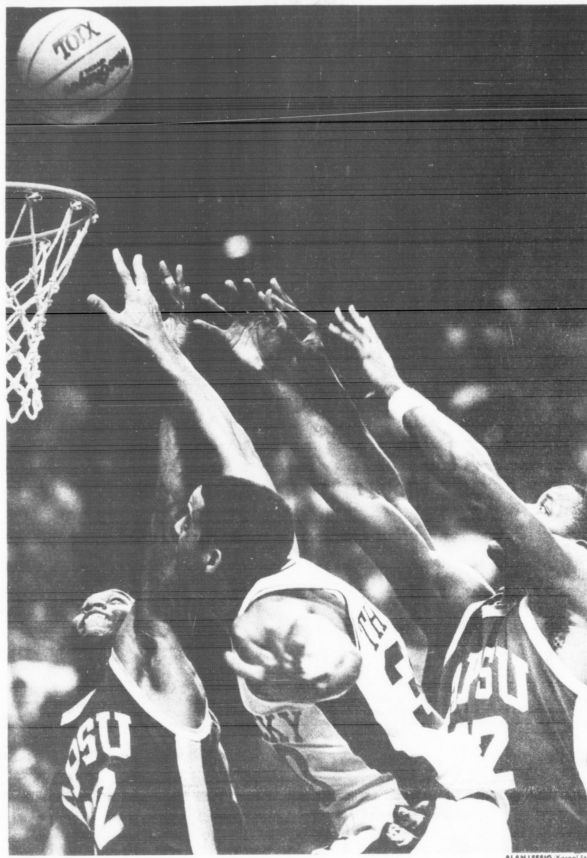

"We had our opportunities to blow the ball game open," Sutton said. "Not only in the first half but in the second half."

"Anytime you get in double figures and you don't seize that opportunity, you're asking for problems."

The longer Kentucky waited, the louder the knock for an Austin Peay upset sounded.

Five times in both periods the Wildcats had leads of 10 or more.

The poor UK showing almost tempted Sutton to take his team back out on the floor, "but I thought you guys (the media) might criticize me for doing that."

"We're just happy to win," he said. "That's the way it's going to be I'm afraid for a while. It's going to be a struggle every night."

A struggle is putting it lightly. The Wildcats lacked in more areas than one.

UK committed 25 turnovers on the night and was out rebounded 38-27 by an Austin Peay squad that was knocked off by Centre College 85-83 Friday night.

That's Division III Centre College. The inside play, or lack thereof, was another glaring problem Sutton had to contend with.

King not a finalist for CHE position

By JAY BLANTON
News Editor

James King, UK's vice president for administration, was not one of five finalists named yesterday for executive director of the Council on Higher Education.

King had been selected as one of 14 finalists for the CHE's top post, which was left vacant when Harry Snyder left last June.

The CHE, executive committee met for more than three hours yesterday to narrow the list of finalists to five.

Burns Mercer, chairman of the executive committee, said interviews with the five finalists will be conducted during the first part of January.

One of the five candidates named is Gary S. Cox, acting executive director for the council since July.

Cox, 42, received a doctorate in political science from UK in 1975.

In a phone interview, Cox said he was "related" to be among the five finalists for the CHE post.

Cox, however, added that at this point, it is important for the council to "look hard at all five people and decide who best meets (the council's) needs."

If appointed to the position, Cox said his primary interest would be the continuation of "momentum we have in higher education."

"Kentuckians are realizing more and more that education, particularly higher education, is a vital link" for the state.

Other candidates include: Thomas C. Meredith, executive assistant to the chancellor at the University of Mississippi.

Meredith, 44, received his doctorate in education from Mississippi in 1971.

Glenn R. Stevens, executive director of the Presidents Council. The council represents all four-year institutions in Michigan.

Stevens, 49, received his doctorate in education from Michigan State in 1971.

John H. Alexander, vice chancellor for the University of Houston.

Alexander, 40, received his doctorate in education from UK in 1976.

James W. Strobel, president of the Mississippi University for Women.

Strobel, 53, received his doctorate in plant pathology from Washington State University in 1959.

Applications deadline for SAB chairs today

By WILL RENSHAW
Staff Writer

If you're interested in being a Student Activities Board committee chairperson, today is your last chance to apply.

"We're looking for people who are willing to work and become a part of a close-knit team," said Lynne Hunt, president of the Student Activities Board.

Applications are available in 203 Student Center and should be turned in by 4:30 p.m. The applications will be reviewed, and interviews will be held Wednesday to make final determinations.

Hunt said the responsibilities include attending weekly meetings, holding office hours and putting in overtime.

The following five committees have chairperson slots open:

visual arts committee — Members are responsible for planning and booking art shows placed in the Rassall Gallery. The term starts now and ends next May.

homecoming committee — Members are responsible for all activities in and around the homecoming celebration. The term lasts one year.

Parents' Weekend committee — This is the newest of the committees and the responsibilities consist of all programs surrounding this weekend. Term lasts one year.

concert co-chairperson — One of two people responsible for planning, booking and programming popular music concerts on campus. Term lasts one year.

member at large — The "most flexible" member of SAB, Hunt said. These people are open to help on any committee but are responsible for, among other things, the Fall Free-For-All. The term lasts until May.

"We really need young, innovative people who are willing to put a lot in, and they'll get a lot out," Hunt said.

Vice chancellor finalist to meet students today

Staff reports

A reception will be held today for the next finalist for the position of vice chancellor for student affairs, said Lynne Hunt, a student member of the vice chancellor search committee.

Timothy Brooks, dean of students at the University of Delaware, will meet with about 25 student leaders for a question-and-answer session at 1:30 p.m. in the President's Room of the Student Center.

An open reception will follow at 2:15 in the same room.

Student attendance at the previous receptions has been low, which Hunt attributes to "general apathy on campus." She said students are missing their chance to give their input into a major decision that directly affects them.

Students "have a major impact" on the search committee's decision, said Hunt, president of the Student Activities Board. "Whatever students want, we (the three student members of the search committee) will represent."

The vice chancellor for student affairs serves as the link between students and the administration, and "I wish that your general student out there would realize how much this impacts them," Hunt said.

Brooks is the third of five finalists to visit UK to be interviewed for the position, which became open when Robert Zumwinkle retired last summer.

Students have until end of semester to use up their DinerCard account

By RHONA BOWLES
Contributing Writer

UK students using the DinerCard meal plan have less than a month to spend the money left in their accounts.

Only $45 of the remaining money will be carried over to the next semester, Robert Braun, assistant director of Food Services, said.

"Any amount above $45 will be used by Food Services to 'help pay costs to keep our places open,'" Braun said.

"We provide students with a place to eat, seven days a week," Braun said, "so it is their responsibility to use their money."

Although all Food Service locations are not open seven days a week, there are several places on campus that stay open on weekends, he said.

Students who chose the DinerCard plan were required to deposit $450 in their account at the beginning of the semester.

This amount is equivalent to the two-meal, five-days-a-week meal card plan, Braun said.

"We (Food Services) figured student could spend $450 without too much difficulty."

Because this is the first semester the DinerCard has been used, Food Services posted guidelines to help students budget their meals.

"We realized it would be difficult to budget the first semester," Braun said.

Students may also deposit amounts above the minimum $450 in $50 increments, he said.

Any additional amounts deposited will be carried over to the next semester.

Braun doesn't foresee a problem with students buying large amounts of items such as soda at the end of the semester to use up their money.

It would be the same situation as students on the meal card plan who cash in for weekends, he said.

The DinerCard system has been successful thus far, Braun said. When the plan was first introduced, "60 to 65 percent of the students opted for it."

"There is no indication that we won't see students staying with and even going to this plan."

Faculty members call prospective UK students during recruitment drive

By MELISSA KIRBY
Contributing Writer

With the help of about 30 UK faculty members, the admissions office will be recruiting high school seniors this week, but not for sports.

Donald Sands, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said faculty members will be calling students who scored a 27 or better on their ACT and have a grade point average of at least 3.0.

"We want to get the message to those students that UK is the best school in the state and that UK wants them," Sands said.

Faculty from different academic areas will be phoning students who expressed an interest in that area, he said.

"This gives UK an opportunity to show what it has to offer, and it lets the students ask any questions they have about academic programs, scholarships and the campus in general," he said.

Becky Jordan, UK admissions counselor and director of the Visitor's Center, said the telephone recruiting program has been successful since 1984, when the admissions office first tried it.

"Students are surprised that faculty take the time to call them," she said. "They're impressed by our interest and that gets them interested in UK."

Though there aren't any statistics, enrollment hikes over the past couple of years show that the recruiting program must be working, she said.

"We contacted several students in November who've already expressed an interest in UK and our various scholarship programs," she said.

Sources say North used money from Iran deal for resupplying contras

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A fired White House aide apparently used profits from Iranian arms sales to build a small, American-manned air force that delivered weapons to Nicaraguan contra rebels this year, according to U.S. government officials and documents from the operation.

LI. Col. Oliver L. North, fired last week for his role in diverting as much as $80 million through Swiss bank accounts, had managed a broader contra aid network for two years with President Reagan's approval despite a congressional ban on U.S. military aid to the rebels, White House officials have said.

Although that assistance enabled the contras to continue fighting, the rebels still had trouble resupplying troops operating inside Nicaragua. One government source said yesterday that problem may have led North to create an air resupply wing for the contras — and turn to money from the Iranian arms sales to pay for it.

In explaining North's firing from the National Security Council staff last Tuesday, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said only North "knew precisely" about the Iran-contra connection and his boss, national security adviser John Poindexter.

'Star Trek' sequel full of excitement, should please fans

By WESLEY MILLER
Assistant Arts Editor

There isn't a better feeling in the world than sitting in a movie theater watching a "Star Trek" film.

That statement is conditional, however, on the fact that you are a "Star Trek" fan.

Being a fan of the series (not a "trekkie," an insulting term that carries with it visions of dream-eyed 12-year-olds clutching autograph books at "Star Trek" conventions), I always feel a certain exhilaration when I first see Capt. James T. Kirk and his Vulcan first officer, Mr. Spock.

In the first "Trek" movie, that was not enough. "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" was an overlong, dreary display of special effects and over-indulgent direction.

The TV series, which ran in the late '60s, achieved its phenomenal success because of its intelligent scripts and the human (and alien) interplay, not due to any outstanding visual effects. It was essentially a story of people who just happened to be in outer space.

This element of the series was not featured in the premier film.

The next two "Star Trek" films, "The Wrath of Khan" and "The Search for Spock," returned to the spirit of the original series, sacrificing an emphasis on special effects (without sacrificing a quality appearance) for action-packed scripts and a careful handling of the characters.

"Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home" picks up where the third film left off, with Kirk and his crew,

MOVIE REVIEW

In Dutch with the Federation for stealing (and destroying) the U.S.S. Enterprise, on the planet Vulcan. They decide to fly their stolen Klingon warship back to Starfleet Command and accept whatever consequences that may befall them.

Starfleet Command, whose headquarters is on the planet Earth, has been rendered powerless, however, by an alien probe. The probe has been sending a signal into the oceans of the Earth, and the signal is messing up every form of power on the Earth.

Kirk and his crew intercept the signal and interpret it to be the song of the humpback whale, a species that has been extinct on the Earth for two centuries. To save the Earth, the Enterprise crew (I know the Enterprise was destroyed, but it will always be the Enterprise crew to me) must go back to 20th-century Earth and bring back a pair of humpback whales.

Well, if the screenwriters of "Star Trek IV" were paid for originality, they must all be millionaires.

The eccentricity of the script notwithstanding, "Star Trek IV" succeeds as an exciting sequel. Nowhere in the cinema can you find characters who act so natural around each other. These men and women have been working together for the past 20 years, and their closeness shines through in their performances.

"Star Trek IV" also gives the moviegoer an opportunity to see the 23rd-century Enterprise crew face the off-the-wall lifestyle of 20th-century San Francisco. Kirk and Spock confront a jambox-toting punker, coin-operated newspaper machines and the constant intrusion of obscenities in everyday speech.

Despite their advancing ages (William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy are in their mid-50s, DeForest Kelley's Dr. McCoy is in his mid-60s and James Doohan's Chief Engineer Scott is in his 70s), the actors perform up to their usual par.

Because the crew gets split into four groups to accomplish its task of finding the whales, the minor characters

Scheider pursued again in thriller '52 Pickup'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Roy Scheider is on the run again, fighting a gang of murderous blackmailers.

His new movie is the Cannon Group's "52 Pickup," directed by John Frankenheimer ("Hirdman of Alcatraz"). Scheider plays a successful businessman whose one indiscretion with a party girl threatens to destroy him and the career of his wife (Ann-Margret), a rising deputy district attorney.

It seems as if Scheider has spent his film career being menaced by mobsters ("The French Connection"), sharks ("Jaws") or marauding helicopters ("Blue Thunder").

"I thought 'All That Jazz' sort of broke the mold," the actor said, referring to the Bob Fosse self-portrait that won Scheider an Academy Award nomination.

"Something happened to me when I came to New York. I got myself into the square-jaw milieu of being either a lawyer or a policeman or a gangster. I guess my face got lean and mean or something."

Don't get the idea that Scheider is complaining, though.

"I've been fortunate to do what I consider three landmark films. 'The French Connection' spawned a whole era of the relationship between two policemen, based on an enormous amount of truth about working on the job. It's still going on. Now it's 'Miami Vice'."

"Jaws" was the first big, blockbuster outdoor-adventure film. And certainly 'All That Jazz' is not like any old MGM musical. Each one of these films is unique, and I consider myself fortunate to be associated with them."

Fit and 52, Roy Scheider gives no indication of his invalid childhood. Born into a working class family in Orange, N.J., he was stricken with rheumatic fever at 6. He spent long periods in bed, becoming a voracious reader. Except for a slight heart murmur, he was pronounced cured at 17. He discovered girls and athletics — the distinctive Scheider nose was acquired in an amateur boxing match.

After three years in the Air Force, Scheider sought a New York theater career in 1960. His debut came as Mercutio in the New York Shakespeare Festival's production of "Romeo and Juliet." After some minor roles, he broke through in 1971 as Jane Fonda's pimp in "Kluge."

Although Scheider has often worked in Hollywood, he remains a staunch New Yorker.

"I have no gripes about California — I love it out here," he remarked. "I could become the biggest sun-worshiper bum. I love to lay around. But it's not really good for me as an actor. That's not getting out and seeing what's going on in the world."

"New York is my home. I feel good there because I've done so many years of theater. I think it's important for actors to live in a place that reflects what's happening today."

Courier-Journal poll rates Gov. Collins; most say she does better than average

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Almost three-fourths of the Kentuckians who responded to a poll think Gov. Martha Layne Collins is doing a "fair" job or better as she heads into the final year of her four-year term, according to a copyright story published in The Courier-Journal on Monday.

When asked to rate the job Collins was doing as governor, seven percent of the respondents said she is doing an excellent job, 30 percent rated her performance as good, 37 percent rated it as "only fair" and 20 percent said it was poor. Five percent had no opinion.

The results of the poll conducted by The Courier-Journal reflect the opinions of 737 Kentucky adults who were interviewed by telephone from Nov.

13-22. The poll's margin of error is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

The poll's results were shared with Collins, a Democrat, on Friday.

"Going into her final year in office with a special session and two regular sessions of the legislature behind her, Gov. Collins is pleased that three-quarters of the people surveyed approve of the job she is doing," said Barbara Hadley Smith, the governor's press secretary.

Smith said the governor considered an "only fair" rating as a statement of approval.

"As any public official knows, when you step out in front and try to accomplish something, there is bound to be disagreement about what you are doing or how you are doing it," Smith said.

The newspaper said the poll also found that:

—Generally, the governor's job rating was highest in northern and central Kentucky and the lowest in eastern and western Kentucky.

—There seemed to be no significant difference in the attitudes of men and women toward the governor's performance.

—Democrats tended to be more supportive of Collins than Republicans.

—Kentuckians 65 and older were somewhat less supportive than those in other age groups.

The ratings that Collins received in the newspaper's poll were similar to those found by the University of Kentucky Survey Research Center in October. But they were different from the findings of an August poll done for the governor's office.

In the UK poll, 43 percent rated the governor either excellent or good and 51 percent rated her either fair or poor. Six percent had no opinion.

The poll for the governor's office gave her higher marks: 68 percent excellent or good and 29 percent not-so-good or poor. Two percent had no opinion.

But the newspaper and UK polls posed the job-rating question to randomly selected Kentucky adults. The governor's poll asked those who had voted in at least two of the last three general elections, said Larry Hayes, the governor's cabinet secretary.

The newspaper's poll, in which telephone numbers were randomly selected by a computer, asked: — What kind of job do you think Martha Layne Collins is doing as governor of Kentucky — excellent, good, only fair or poor?

Philippines troubled; Aquino calls opposition chauvinist 'big talkers'

By RUBEN G. ALABASTRO
Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — President Corason Aquino said yesterday the men who doubt her ability to govern are just big talkers and called her predecessor, Ferdinand E. Marcos, "not the last to pay" for underestimating her.

In other developments:

—The Communist Party said that despite a cease-fire agreement with the government, "revolutionary armed struggle" remains its main goal, and the armed forces chief called on his troops to remain vigilant during the truce.

—Police stopped about 3,000 leftists en route to the presidential palace to demand justice in the slaying of their leader, Rolando Olalia.

—10,000 Aquino supporters rallied to urge adoption of a proposed constitution.

Mrs. Aquino told the women's club of the Asian Development Bank, "It has often been said that Marcos was the first male chauvinist to underestimate me. He was not the last to pay for that mistake."

She called others who have challenged her in recent weeks "a crop of garrulous men with better and brighter ideas on how to run my government. . . . I would like to think that I have managed to have the last word and the last task of having to put things back in order after these men were finished."

A week ago, Mrs. Aquino demanded resignations from all Cabinet ministers after word that a planned coup by officers close to Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile had been foiled. She immediately replaced Enrile and has accepted other resignations since then.

In downtown Manila, about 3,000 people belonging to the militant leftist May 1st Movement tried to march to Malacanang Palace, but were stopped by dozens of riot police.

The demonstrators demanded "swift justice" for the slaying of their leader, Olalia, two weeks ago.

Later, a 10-member delegation carrying a letter with demands was allowed into the palace. An army major accepted the letter.

Police said about 500 members of the group rallied at the U.S. Subic Naval Base 50 miles northwest of Manila. The demonstrators demanded the removal of all U.S. military bases in the Philippines. Police said the protest was peaceful.

At Manila's Rizal Park, about 10,000 supporters of Mrs. Aquino urged voters to approve the new constitution in a Feb. 2 plebiscite. The constitution would extend the president's term until 1992.

The outlawed Communist Party said, meanwhile, that all forces under its leadership would abide by the 60-day cease-fire that is to take effect Dec. 10.

Concrete wall being built around Soweto

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A concrete wall is being built around parts of Soweto. The government said yesterday the barrier would not enclose the entire black township, but workers building the wall contradicted this.

Construction began last week, but there was no official announcement.

Adriana Andersen, a spokeswoman for the government Bureau for Information, said the wall was designed to block children and animals from running onto a major highway, which curves around an area of Soweto called Diepkloof.

She said the wall would not enclose the entire township, which covers 38 square miles near Johannesburg and is home to about 1.7 million blacks. She said the wall so far extends several hundred yards and is about 7 feet high.

The Sunday Star, an independent English-language paper, quoted workmen at the site as saying they were told the wall was meant to enclose the entire township.

Three black townships around the Indian Ocean city of Port Elizabeth have been fenced off by barbed wire for months, with access to the townships possible only through checkpoints manned by the security forces.

Actor Cary Grant dies of stroke at 82

By JOHN ANTZAK
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Cary Grant, whose masculine elegance and darkly handsome features made him an unrivaled star of both sophisticated comedy and chilling intrigue for more than 30 years, has died of a massive stroke at the age of 82.

The debonair leading man with the dimpled chin and clipped accent died at 11:22 p.m. CST Saturday at St. Luke's Hospital in Davenport, Iowa, where he was to appear in a 90-minute program that included a talk and clips from his movies.

He had appeared well at rehearsals that afternoon, then seemed to weaken, said Lois Jecklin, director of Visiting Artists, which sponsored "A Conversation with Cary Grant." His condition deteriorated rapidly.

"There was nothing that could be done. There's no intervention when something like this happens," said James Gilson, the cardiologist who treated him.

His body reportedly was returned early yesterday to California. There was no immediate word on funeral plans.

Grant was one of the biggest names in movie history starting in such classes as "The Philadelphia Story," "Bringing Up Baby" and "North by Northwest." But his only Oscar came after his retirement.

He seemed to have been born an aristocrat, but his father was a presser in a garment factory. He was the idol of millions of women around the world, but his private life often was troubled.

"I pretended to be somebody I wanted to be, and I finally became that person," Grant once said. "Or he became me. Or we met at some point. It's a relationship."

It was a singularly successful relationship, one that began in 1932 and filled the big screen with 72 movies until 1966, when his last film, "Walk, Don't Run," was released.

He was paired with Katharine Hepburn, Myrna Loy, Audrey Hepburn and Grace Kelly. To him Mae West tendered the most famous, and frequently misquoted, proposition in movie history: "Why don't you come up sometime and see me?"

He was born Archibald Leach on Jan. 18, 1904, in Bristol, England, the only child of an unhappy marriage. His father often was withdrawn and his mother filled him with dreams of wealth and taught him to sing and dance.

When he was 13, Archie ran away from home to join a boys' troupe, but his father retrieved him.

He later rejoined the group, but left it in 1922 in New York, taking on a variety of jobs, including still-walker at Coney Island, a slapstick mime on the vaudeville circuit and a straight man for comedy acts. He began dressing with conservative elegance and was a hit with New York hostesses.

By 1931 he had a movie contract with Paramount and a new name: Cary, for a part he'd had in a play, and Grant, chosen from a list prepared by the studio.

He made seven films in his first year, including "Blonde Venus" with Marlene Dietrich. Then he caught the eye of Mae West, who cast him opposite her in "She Done Him Wrong" and "I'm No Angel." Both were box-office smashes.

In 1937 he left Paramount and the most memorable roles of his career followed. The danger that seemed to lurk beneath the charm made him the perfect lead for such Hitchcock thrillers as "Suspicion" and "To Catch a Thief."

He was nominated for Academy Awards for "Penny Serenade" and "None But the Lonely Heart," and in 1970 he received an honorary Oscar for "his unique mastery of the art of screen acting."

Grant, who became a U.S. citizen in 1942, amassed a fortune estimated as high as $40 million.

The star's first marriage was to actress Virginia Cherrill in 1934. They divorced after 13 months, with her accusing him of physical and verbal abuse. He married Woolworth heiress Barbara Hutton in 1942; they divorced in 1945.

In 1949 he married actress Betsy Drake. Their union lasted seven years and was formally dissolved in 1962.

Grant and actress Dyan Cannon married in 1963, when he was 61 and she 30. They separated after 17 months, after the birth of Grant's only child, Jennifer.

In 1981, Grant married Barbara Harris, a public relations director for a London hotel and 47 years his junior. The fifth Mrs. Grant later said the age difference was an advantage.

"We don't argue over ridiculous things," she said. "We appreciate each other more than a younger couple because time is so precious."

Drunk driving figures are inaccurate, study says

By PETE YOST
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — National statistics on drunken driving and fatal accidents are inaccurate because police let most drivers leave the scene without being tested for alcohol abuse, according to a new study released yesterday.

The report by the Crime Control Institute, a non-profit research organization of law enforcement officials, found that many drunken drivers in fatal accidents are escaping prosecution because they aren't given a blood-alcohol test.

Of the 32,000 drivers who survived accidents involving fatalities in 1984, more than 75 percent left the scene without being tested for alcohol abuse, said the report. More than 25 percent of the 25,382 drivers who were killed in accidents were not tested for blood alcohol concentration. Overall, only 45 percent of all drivers in fatal accidents are tested for alcohol abuse.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Department of Transportation estimates that the share of traffic fatalities due to drunken driving has been declining, to 41 percent in 1985. In 1982, the first year studied, 46 percent of deaths were due to drunken driving.

"The national statistics on the number of traffic deaths due to drunk driving are unreliable and misleading," said Lawrence W. Sherman, president of the Crime Control Institute.

Various studies have shown that drivers are most likely to be tested if they show visible signs of intoxication. The Crime Control Institute study points out the "varying ability of people to 'hold their liquor'" and says that the adrenaline that accompanies the shock of an accident can cause a rapid sobering effect.

The statistics compiled by the Transportation Department until last year were based on tests of dead drivers in just 15 states. A new method uses data from all fatal crashes, but the Crime Control Institute study said the approach assumes alcohol involvement is equally likely among drivers who are tested and those who are not tested for alcohol abuse.

Minneapolis Police Chief Anthony V. Bouza, the chairman of the Crime Control Institute, called the failure to test most drivers in fatal accidents a scandal.

Kats capture LKIT, defeat Illinois State, Bowling Green State

By ANDY DUMSTORFF
Sports Editor

It's business as usual for the Kentucky Lady Kats.

UK opened its season with a 74-62 win over Bowling Green State Friday and countered with a 78-70 victory against Illinois State Saturday to capture the Lady Kat Invitational tournament at Memorial Coliseum.

But it's usually that way during the Thanksgiving holidays.

The Lady Kats almost always win their tournament. Since the tournament started in 1977, UK has only failed to walk away with the team trophy twice.

And as long as they've been walking away with the crown, there always seems to be a dominant player leading the way.

Not this year. There are plenty of players to fill the void left from graduation, but a dominant force is lacking.

All during preseason, Lady Kat coach Terry Hall was looking for someone to step forward and take charge. And even before the tournament started, there was talk that UK might lose its opener.

Over the weekend, not one, not two, but three players stepped forward for Hall and showed signs of taking over for the graduated Leslie Nichols, the team's money winner for the past three years.

There was junior Bebe Croley leading the way with 20- and 27-point nights. Croley pulled down nine rebounds Friday and six more Saturday.

There was senior Debbie Miller

"This is the best we've shot the ball," Hall said. "I've said all along we had a good shooting team."

"We just proved it."

Friday UK scorched the nets, hitting 33-of-56 for a blistering 58.9 percent. Saturday the Kats cooled down, hitting only 33-of-62 for a solid 53.2 percent.

"I think our shot selection was good," Hall said. "And we had good foul shooting, too."

Against Bowling Green, the Lady Kats connected on 8-of-12 from the charity stripe and 12-of-15 in the championship against Illinois State.

And the defense wasn't too shabby, either.

UK held its opponents to shooting nights of 40.6 percent (Bowling Green State) and 43.5 percent (Illinois State).

In the turnover department, however, the Lady Kats were ahead by a wide margin.

Against Bowling Green, UK coughed up the ball 23 times. Saturday the Lady Kats committed 18 errors.

Hall attributed the team's "lacksadaisical play" to the inexperienced players on the squad.

"In my opinion, we have no inside game whatsoever," Sutton said. "Our inside game is not getting us much."

In the past, UK had All-World Kenny Walker and Winston Bennett to spark the Cats' inside game. But Saturday the front line consisted of Rob Lock, Richard Madison and Irving Thomas.

With this lineup, UK's lack of experience nearly caused an early season disaster.

"We throw it (to the frontline players) and we either fumble it out of bounds or miss the shot," Sutton said.

The three combined for nine turnovers and 9-of-20 shooting from the field.

A few positive signs for the Wildcats showed in the strong play of guards Ed Davender and Rex Chapman. Davender paced Kentucky with 20 points and the freshman Chapman knocked down 18 points, while dealing out six assists.

"Our best offense was Ed coming down on the 1-on-3," Sutton said.

But overall, the second-year coach "was not pleased with the way we performed."

"But that's the way it's been in "Playing in spurts" now might prove crucial later for Kentucky as it entertains Texas Tech tomorrow night and travels to Indiana Saturday.

Patriots slip by Saints, 21-20

The Associated Press

Just when it looks like the New England Patriots are finally going to lose, they find another way to win.

The Patriots scored touchdowns on a blocked punt and a fumble recovery in the final four minutes yesterday and defeated the New Orleans Saints 21-20. New England's seventh consecutive victory pulled them into a tie for first place with the New York Jets, both with 10-3 records.

It was the third straight week that the Patriots won in the late going. They defeated the Los Angeles Rams with a last-play pass into the end zone and rallied to beat Buffalo with a scoring drive in the last two minutes.

MONOVALENT FLU SHOTS (SUPPLEMENTAL) will be given to UK students, faculty, and staff and their spouses at the Student Health Service Medical Plaza Building across Rose Street from University Hospital.

(These shots are recommended for persons UNDER 35 years of age and will NOT be given to pregnant women or anyone who is allergic to eggs).

More information: 233-6461
Parking: Medical Plaza Structure
Time: 8-4 p.m. Mon. thru Fri. Thru Dec. 23rd
Charge: $5.00 per vaccine

The monovalent flu shots are now available at the Student Health Service. It is recommended for person under 35 years of age who:

1. Have long-term heart or lung problems which cause them to see a doctor regularly.
2. Have been admitted to the hospital or been treated regularly over the past year for kidney disease, cystic fibrosis, diabetes, low blood or severe asthma.
3. Have cancer or are being treated with a medication that lowers the body's normal resistance to infection.

Persons who need the supplemental vaccine and have not received the trivalent vaccine offered earlier this fall may receive both vaccines at the same time.

NOTE:

1. If the trivalent flu vaccine has already been received you should wait at least 4 weeks to receive the new monovalent vaccine.
2. If you are receiving both vaccines they may be given in opposite arms at the same time.
