

STANLEY JONES SPEAKS BEFORE CAPACITY CROWD

Noted Missionary Introduced At Special Convocation By Dr. Frank L. McVey

THREE ADDRESSES MADE DURING STAY

Morton Potter, Tom Spragens Perform In Memorial Hall

The challenge which science offers to religion today, religion's ability to meet the challenge of the part American youth can play was discussed by Rev. Dr. E. Stanley Jones, world-famous missionary to India and author of a new book in an address to a special University convocation Tuesday afternoon in Memorial Hall.

Dr. Jones pointed out that the numerous things we do during the day that are "acts of faith" and went on to show how the scientist must have faith in a God.

A capacity audience filled the auditorium. President Frank L. McVey presided at the convocation and introduced Dr. Jones. Tom Spragens, Lebanon, president of the University "Y," delivered the invocation, and Morton Potter, Lexington, accompanied by Ruth Eston, sang a hymn.

The meeting Tuesday was one of a series of three featuring Dr. Jones, who will soon leave for his mission post in India.

Dr. Jones addressed a dinner meeting Tuesday evening at Woodland Christian church on the subject, "The Church of Christ in America." Here Dr. Jones drew a comparison between the church organization and the organization of the state.

Final meeting of the series was held Tuesday night in Woodland auditorium, with approximately 2,000 persons in attendance.

Dr. Jones' subject was "The Kingdom of God on Earth." The speaker pointed out three outstanding ideas in the world today: Communism, Fascism and the Kingdom of God.

Dr. Jones was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. McVey at the University. He left Wednesday morning to speak at Asbury College, Wilmore, of which he is a graduate, and at Berea College.

43RD DISTRICT TOURNAMENT PLAYED IN ALUMNI GYM

Midway Blue Jays Favored To Gain Way To Regional Of Annual State High School Meet

FINAL TO BE PLAYED SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Bryan Station Selected As Strong Contender For Title

By MACK HUGHES

Although lacking the polish and experience possessed by college players, some of the best and most interesting basketball played on the Alumni gymnasium floor is shown by high school players who cavort annually on the University court.

The 43rd district high school tournament, which is now being held in the Euclid arena gym, has as entrants several teams which promise to display such ball playing.

Participants range from teams which have showed up poorly all season to those which are expected to be strong contenders for the State title. The games in this tournament promise to be as exciting and colorful as any previous years' contests.

Midway's Blue Jays, who are expected to take up their bid for the title when it was terminated in last year's tournament, are top-heavy favorites to win the district crown. Midway has won all of its 14 scheduled games, in which they scored 770 points to their opponents' 518.

Favored to win the other bracket and meet Midway in the finals is Bryan Station, who lost but one of its 14 games this season. They have scored 464 points to their opponents' 318.

Other teams entered in the tournament are Picadome, Athens, who meets Nicholasville at 9 o'clock tonight; Henry Clay, who plays Wilmore at 8 o'clock; and Midway played Picadome last night, but the results were not obtainable when the Kentucky basketball season was terminated at that time.

The semi-finals of the meet will be played Saturday morning, starting at 10 o'clock.

'HELL-WEEKERS' HOWL AND GREET WRONG TRAIN

With the same devotion into the eyes of one of the court heroes later on, but did her present big moment have to know what he? A loud hurrah arose from the throng and resounded through the depot, as the gleam of the headlights of a locomotive flashed along the rails. The victory hymn once again challenged the glories of the heavens. Four hundred persons surged as one man toward the train that was pulling up to a stop. Loud cheers and shouts of "Hell-weekers" pulped car and amused business men smiled from the windows of the day coach.

But where were the champions? Surely they would not miss this great moment of the celebration. They had not missed the train. But where were they? Suddenly a dead silence enveloped the throng, and then a titter swept through the wrong files. They had met the wrong train.

CAMPUS GEOGRAPHY IN 1915 MUCH DIFFERENT FROM MODERN LAYOUT

By MALCOLM PATTERSON
"What's that, freshman?"
"Oh, you want to know where the College of Law and the Mens' dorm is located?"

"Well, the College of Law is on the third floor of the Natural Science building — you know, the building where the department of Journalism is located."

"Why, yes. The department of Journalism is in the basement of the Natural Science building."

"Oh, you mean the other mens' dorm—not Neville hall. Well, that's White hall."

"No, the writer has not had a 'dream' or 'nightmare,' nor did the foregoing conversation take place in 1926 or 1927. Conversations similar to it did occur during the first decade of this century. It all came about while discussing where this department and that department may be located when the present building program completed in January, 1926. Speculation arose as to the number of prospective changes and there crept in the nature of moves made in the various departments and colleges in the past, and the following facts were noted:

Before 1917-1918, Neville and White halls were mens' residence halls. New halls having been built in 1920 and White hall in 1922. First places, now closed, in every room of Neville are evidence of this past use.

Smith hall, the Womens' building and the Research laboratory building, having been demolished and subsequently were remodeled. The Womens' building, as generally known, was the home of James K. Patterson, president of the State University of Kentucky from 1889 until 1910. Maxwell place, President McVey's residence, was built on land which was originally part of the claim staked off by John Maxwell, pioneer Kentuckian and one of the settlers of Lexington.

When construction was completed in 1922 Barker hall, now housing the military science and womens' athletic departments, and the Y. M. C. A., was considered an "athlete's paradise," so up-to-date was it compared to gyms of that day.

The Administration building, White hall, and the heating plant, all built in 1922, are the oldest structures on the campus. A quaint tower was on the front of the Administration building, and an apparatus operated by the U. S. weather bureau was on the roof of that building in the days when it was used mainly for classrooms and assembly.

The present Law building, due to change its identity this year, was built originally to house the agricultural experiment station and the department of chemistry in 1889. Later, the department of chemistry took over the whole of the building, and remained there until 1925, when Kastle hall was erected.

Before moving to its present location, the College of Law was in the Natural Science building, which was constructed in 1888. Prior to the completion of the new College of Education and training school, Frazer hall, built in 1907, housed the department of education, which was then a part of the College of Arts and Sciences, not having grown to the status of a separate college.

Mechanical hall is the oldest portion of the College of Engineering quadrangle, having been completed in 1892. The Agricultural building, erected in 1908, is one of the earlier buildings which has kept its identity through the years.

Unsuspecting persons seeking comic papers may still wander into the old library, which still bears that nameplate over its entrance, and find themselves among skeletons and relics of prehistoric time in the Museum.

Quickly reviewing past shifts of locations, one can easily picture oneself returning to the campus, if one ever gets away from it, in years to come, and having to ask a slightly bored undergraduate where the office of the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences is located, for in all probability it will not be in the present Administration building.

'Save Their Hair' Warns President In First Kernel

By FEM
"Don't cut and shave the hair of freshmen heads," warned the President of the University in the first issue of The Kentucky Kernel.

In strange contrast to the present-day situation, when the majority of the presidents of social fraternities on the campus oppose continuation of "Hell Week," 22 years ago all main seniors had to be told by letters, copies of which were sent also to their parents, that certain "hazing" practices were contrary to University rules.

One of the many steps taken in the long-fought battle against barbarian practices, the letters were mailed by President Henry S. Baker on September 6, 1915, prior to the opening of school.

In the communication he declared that pleading ignorance of the law when confronted with charges of "hazing" would not be an alibi.

In the first issue of The Kentucky Kernel, J. Franklin Corn, the editor-in-chief, placed a reproduction of the letter in a prominent position on page one, devoting approximately 15 column inches to the article.

Prior to the school-year 1915, the official student newspapers had been The Idea. The Kentucky Kernel emerged on September 15, 1915, as a weekly. The paper contained eight pages, each of which had five columns.

In the text of his letter, President Barker stated that the male seniors should not regard the letter as a threat, but should think of it as a warning, expressed sincerely, that previous "hazing" practices would have to be stopped.

The shaving off of freshmen hair was the "hazing" practice which brought greatest presidential condemnation, but he also lashed out at "hazing" in general, which extended throughout the school-year at that time, rather than being concentrated in one week, "Hell Week," as today.

Saying that the sporadic outbreaks of "hazing" were unlawful, President Barker declared that offenders could count upon certain punishment when apprehended.

A Forgotten Guy Starts Something By Inventing Type

By MALCOLM PATTERSON
More than 800 years ago Johannes Gutenberg was born in Mainz, Germany.

"So what?" you ask.
Well, here the "guy" who enabled later embryonic and full-fledged newspapermen to tell you each year that Washington was not "all he was cracked up to be," that Lincoln would have "fumbled out" in college, that Valentine day is an old, old custom, that every general in history was greater than was estimated in his life or has been mal-treated in subsequent years by historians, and that "Christmas is 294 days off."

Yes, Gutenberg "started something," as "undoubtedly" Johnny Dabestine "started something" when he revamped "jazz," and gave it a new name, calling it "swing."

Gutenberg merely invented the process of movable metal-type printing, and now historians are saying that he did so in 1438, or in 1437. They all agree that he did so prior to 1480, therefore, this year they are celebrating the 500th anniversary of his work.

Declaring that the public should think of Gutenberg as a vigorous, determined man who fought successfully for an idea, invented printing, and thus contributed to the rise of a new civilization, his-

Miss Myrtle Weldon Honored At Meeting

Miss Myrtle Weldon, state leader of home demonstration work and a member of the home demonstration section of the College of Agriculture, was presented with a life membership in the Associated Country Women of the World at a recent meeting of the executive board of the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers at Bowling Green.

The membership was purchased by a donation of one cent by each member of the homemakers clubs in the state.

The state program for the year was discussed and plans made for the annual district meetings the first week in May.

Because there was no meeting of the Federation this year, due to the cancellation of the Farm and Home convention, the executive board voted to continue the present officers and directors in office.

REPORTER INTERVIEWS DEAN W. S. TAYLOR ON EDUCATION PROBLEMS

By MARJORIE RIESER
"Institutions of higher learning must be responsive to the needs of the public schools if they are to serve public education helpfully," stated Dean W. S. Taylor, College of Education, who has just returned from the National Education Association which met in New Orleans, La., during the week of February 21.

"When the elementary schools and high schools incorporate a new feature the colleges must be held responsible for the education of the teachers to carry out in an intelligent and helpful way the new part of the program," continued Dean Taylor. "This new part of the program is given to adult education and the great emphasis placed on safety education. A decade ago these subjects would not have been mentioned."

"Adult education is generally recognized not only as desirable but essential if there is to be increasing richness of life for the men and women in America. As a matter of fact," Dean Taylor remarked, "many people are saying today that adult education is essential if democracy is to survive. The average education of the American citizen is still just a little bit beyond the sixth grade. If the average is sixth grade plus, then fifty per cent of our population in this country have little basis for intelligent choices in a democracy."

Dean Taylor went on to say that administrators are beginning to realize that their responsibilities for education do not end with that period of the individual's life between the ages of six and eighteen. Education is being extended both upward and downward.

"If the public schools," concluded Dean Taylor, "are to incorporate adequate programs of guidance, safety education, adult education and similar types of education, then institutions of higher learning must concern themselves with all of these issues. It is the responsibility of the colleges and universities of America to educate teachers for their responsibilities in public schools."

Longfellow's Work Exalted on 130th Birth Anniversary

By DON IRVINE
One hundred and thirty years ago Saturday, Feb. 27, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born at Portland, Me., and 23 years later was head of a department in one of America's great universities.

Despite his youth at the time, the great poet, then unknown, flatly refused the trustees of Bowdoin University when they offered him an instructor's post. He would be head of a department or nothing. So the trustees yielded, and Longfellow became professor of modern languages at Bowdoin, where at the age of 15 he had entered as a freshman. His salary in the headship was $800 a year, good pay in those times for a boy of 22. Besides that, he received $100 a year for his services as librarian of the university. However, he did not remain at Bowdoin long for within five years he was offered the Smith professorship of modern languages at Harvard, which position he held until he was 45.

It was after his resignation from Harvard that Longfellow published what is perhaps his most successful poem, "Hiawatha." In the month of his birth, February, he finished the first draft of it. On Nov. 10 of the same year, 1885, "Hiawatha" was published, and 30 days later it had already sold over 11,000 copies. However, Longfellow did not get his highest price for "Hiawatha," but for "The Hanging of the Crane," which brought him $3,000. For "The Village Blacksmith," one of the most famous of his works, he received only $15.

Longfellow was acquainted with all the great writers of his period.

He went to school with Hawthorne, was an associate of Emerson, Holmes, Poe, Dr. Eliot of Harvard, and many other famous writers. Charles Dickens in England, and according to one author, spent his time "rushing about London purchasing new garments, boots, hose, trousers, and coats, all of the latest fashion...and listening to the chatter of the novelist."

Longfellow died in 1882 at the age of 75. He was buried in a vaulted chamber, a kinsman among the funeral services. Ralph Waldo Emerson, feebly standing near the coffin, said vacantly to a mourner standing near him, "I cannot recall the name of our friend, but he was a good man."

Officer Kelly Apparently Needs A New Flashlight

By MARTHA MOORE
"In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love—a new flashlight!" So declares Kelly, one of the University campus policemen, when questioned about his plans for patrolling the Botanical garden this spring.

"In patrolling the garden I find some fellows looking at the moon, some studying botany, and some are just there. Some have a girl, others do not—but regardless of why they are there I put them all out at 11 o'clock."

This botanical garden, located directly behind White Hall, has proved to be one of the most popular "courtship" spots on the campus. The favorite spot of campus sweethearts in this romantic haven according to Kelly, is down by the garden spring. However, Kelly says that another popular rendezvous of the amorously inclined students is in a parked automobile behind White Hall.

As a smile stretched across his broad Irish face, Kelly teasingly said, "The summer students are the worst about their courting. Probably this is due to the weather here. The abundance of school teachers here for the summer sessions.

"However, I'm not like the motor-man who goes for a street car ride on his night off—because I never use the garden myself. On Nov. 10 of the Spring of 1937 draws near, Kelly will patrol Botanical garden for his twelfth consecutive year. But as to his plans for his night watch, all Kelly would reveal was: "It'll be the same old routine of course. I'll need a new flashlight."

Former Methods Of Reporting News Shown In Old "Idea"

By E. H. MUEHLER
Way back in 1911, when The Kernel was known as the Idea, the Seniors wore turtle-neck sweaters with corduroy pants, a yellow cane, and a bowler. The girls wore long hair, ornate plume hats, voluminous skirts and said "Oh goodness!"

When the Open House was still in its glory as "the best one night stand in America," the Ben-All had just been built; the Journalism department was still in its infancy, and the news stories were sensational—that was the time, the absolute peak beyond which civilization could not, possibly advance.

Never the less, after reading a few articles in the "Idea" of 1911, the style and content of them might prove amusing. Here are some of them:

FIRE IN HEAVEN

Blaze Breaks Out On Senior Floor But Damage Is Small
Last night, about 1:15 p. m., a fire broke out on the senior floor, otherwise known as "Heaven." The fire was caused by hot coals rolling from the grate in Tinsley's and Untley's room on to the floor. When the fire was first discovered by one of the seniors, it was making considerable headway, and as the door to the room was locked, and neither Tinsley or Untley were at home, it was several minutes before the volunteer firemen could put it out. Meanwhile someone sent a fire alarm, and the whole city fire department was rushing to "Heaven." The water had been cut off from the building on account of the ex-

COLOR-BLIND FASHION HOODLUM EXPLAINS SPRING HABERDASHERY

By FIFF FISHAW
Fashions for the male college students have a decidedly modernistic trend this spring, according to Kelly, one of the University correspondents in the psychopathic wards of large Eastern hospitals. Slightly bowing to the surrealistic influence, and with gay, bright colors dominating, men's campus clothes are more individualistic and daring than they have ever been before. Originating in the East, the style trend has swept the North, South and West alike, and clothes manufacturers all over the country are catering to the demand for ultra-modern dress.

For the Ag students, a ducky little outfit consisting of pink canvas overalls trimmed in aqua-blue lace is quite the thing for spring plowing. A bunch of carrots worn over the shoulders and a hoe stuck nonchalantly in the lapel give him that "chic" appearance. A light weight Panama hat with a crown and broad brim complete the ensemble.

Engineering styles have undergone a complete change this spring with the rule. The up-to-the-minute engineer steps out in green corduroy riding pants, red leather riding field boots and blue suede swaggar coat gathered at the waist. A tape line necktie of practically any color may be worn with a white shirt and a T-square adorns the breast pocket of the coat. A transit carried in the hand adds a touch of the ultra-modern.

A successful law student will win his practice cases this spring attired in a white gabardine frock coat, trousers of rust brown chifon, and a wine-colored waist-coat of light-weight crepe. On his brief case tucked loosely in the hip pocket gives that air of nonchalance so sought after by the college barster.

The smartly dressed commerce student will go his mercenary way garbed in a double-breasted business suit of pale yellow taffeta, with patch pockets edged in red tape. A light-weight crepe one-dollar bill and a telephone carried in either hand will give him that "first vice-president" look.

In this little football outfit extremely popular at Vassar and Sweet Briar is all the rage among college players for one-dollar bills and a telephone carried in either hand will give him that "first vice-president" look.

An amusing incident happened during the excitement—one dignified Senator, commonly known as "Pretty," discovered that the water was out of, grabbed two buckets and hid himself to a neighboring hydrant to get some water. Hurrying with his buckets, he started back to the scene of the fire, but on his way he met another fellow who stopped him and asked him a question. The question must have been the Senator's particular hobby, for he set his buckets down and started to explain to the questioner forgetting all about the fire, and it was not until the other fellow started to yell at him that he remembered what he had started out to do.

Another Senator who was outside the building did not get excited, but merely asked his room mate to throw his collar buttons and his girl's picture out the window to him. The damage was very small, but the occupants of the room were inconvenienced by the smoke permeating all their household goods.

tone shoes complete this stunning little outfit. Referees will add a touch of color to the game dressed in cardinal-red calico bench pajamas hung with numerous green whistles. The 1937 football will blaze through the sky in an orchid cover laced with old ivory imported French ribbon.

The "man about the campus" will delight the hearts of his feminine admirers at the Saturday night "hops" clad in emerald-hued tails. Lappels of orange cambric are the very latest thing, with a boutiere of cauliflower giving the wearers that "certain touch."

KENTUCKY's basketball season is closed. Although the smooth running team Coach Rupp developed, slipped a cog several times during the playing season, they finally stepped into high gear and won the Southeastern Conference championship in convincing style. Carlisle, Donohue and Goforth also finished the season and their collegiate basketball careers in a blaze of glory.

Carlisle was named the best player of the tournament by virtue of his high scoring in the Georgia Tech game and other all around plays. Donahue gained considerable acclaim and landed a place on the all-tournament team. Goforth played some of the best ball of his career and helped the 'Cats put the Tennessee game in the bag by running the score up in the final few minutes of the contest.

Bowser Ches, one of the officials of the game, claimed that it was one of the cleanest games he had ever officiated, despite the fact that there was a total of 40 fouls committed in the game. Figure that one out!

The district high school basketball games are swinging into play all over the state this week, and on May 20 will end up here in the Alumni gym for the state finals. Tomorrow night the finals of the local district will be played off in the U. K. gym to decide the winner of the 43rd district. All students will be admitted for 25 cents and judging from the good games played last year they should be worth the price of admission.

Kentucky's football team is rounding into better shape, and more bodily contact work is taking place, now that the boys have worked the kinks out of their muscles. "Red"

Hagan, captain-elect of the team, and Bob Davis have not yet reported for practice, but are expected to be in uniform by Monday.

Now that Warfield Donohue is through with collegiate basketball, he is expected to come out for the varsity tennis team. Donohue is one of the best tennis players in school and was one of the finalists in the Tri-City tennis matches held at Louisville.

Many of the students of the University are interested in starting a baseball team in the spring. This idea could be carried out very easily, as some of the best players in the Middle West are going to school here, and during the summer months play ball throughout the state. With all this wealth of material we could put out one of the best teams in the state.

Coach Wynne announced recently that the annual state inter-scholastic track and field meet will be held at the University on May 22. Last year the meet was held at Louisville and was won by Louisville. Now that our new track is completed, many new state high school records should be made.

A few sport oddities: In Cincinnati tonight there is going to be a wrestling match between a half ton of flesh or just 945 pounds to be more exact. Martin Levy, 625-pounder, meets Chief Osley Sunoco, 320-pound Cherokee Indian. Levy measures 7 feet around his abdomen, which surges up and down until it almost flops between his knees while he is wrestling. You can imagine the tough time you would have getting a leg scissor on his stomach.

In the district basketball play-off at Columbus, Ohio, one team beat another 27 to 26 but the margin of victory was provided by the other team as one of their players accidentally threw the winning shot in the wrong basket. Their coach must be in great need of a strong strait-jacket. Up in Lafayette, Ind., one coach is repenting the day he dismissed a certain basketball player from his squad. The boy's father became so enraged over the incident that he beat up the coach and put him in a hospital. Wouldn't Wynne and Rupp have a time if some of the local crowd papers came after them en masse?

The B. S. U. Council will hold an important meeting for election of officers at 6:45 o'clock Monday evening in the Administration building. All members please be present.

INTRAMURAL

Five contests will bring the third week of the tenth annual intramural basketball tournament to its conclusion tonight in the Gym Annex. The following games are up for decision: SN vs KS; LAC vs ASP; Tartar vs Refugees; Lawyers vs UK Band, and RDR vs Chipman. KS, one of the few undefeated fives, should have little trouble in downing SN. The LCA quintet will probably lose its third consecutive game when it faces the strong ASP team.

Tartar will rank as favorite over the Refugees who have lost their first four encounters. Two powerful quintets will face one another when RDR and Chipman meet in what should be a nip-and-tuck struggle. The Lawyers may have trouble in their game with the up-and-coming Band.

KA had little trouble in winning its third consecutive game Tuesday night, defeating ATO 28 to 10. SAE surprised by coming through with a 19 to 17 win over DK.

In three independent games played Wednesday night, RDR upset the UK Independents 35 to 25, Band fell before Tartars 36 to 14 and Chipman returned to the win column by triumphing over the Lawyers 24 to 16.

W.A.A. News

At the last meeting Rosemary Clincales, basketball manager, reported that from 18 to 20 girls are reporting for basketball daily and urged that more girls come out for this sport.

The rifle squad has been out to 30 and it is now shooting its matches. Last week it fired against Ripon College and Carnegie Tech. The University of Cincinnati has invited the W. A. A. to a play day on March 20. We have been asked to send teams for deck tennis, basketball, volley ball, and swimming. All girls interested in going to Cincinnati, please sign in Miss Arevill's office immediately and designate which sport they wish to participate in. A bus will be chartered if enough girls wish to go.

In April the University W. A. A. is going to sponsor a conference of all athletic associations in the colleges of Kentucky. More plans for this conference will be discussed later, but it sounds like it is going to be very interesting and worthwhile. Ruthie Palmer and Eleanor Sneider are in charge of the arrangements for this party.

"Advised by my singing coach, I changed to Luckies"

"In my new picture 'Swing High, Swing Low' I sing a song for the first time since I have been on the screen. To do this, I spent months taking singing lessons. And with this added strain, my throat was not in good shape. My singing coach suggested that when choosing cigarettes, I select a light smoke. And so I changed to Luckies. Since then I've found that a light smoke and my throat get along together just fine."

BASKETEERS ARE EXUBERANT OVER TOURNAMENT TRIUMPH

By MACK HUGHES
So exuberant over winning the Southeastern net crown that they could give only praise for their fellow team members, the Wildcat basketeers, when interviewed yesterday gave as their chief reason for the victories in Knoxville the extreme confidence which they had in themselves and the team as a whole, all during the tournament.

Coach Adolph Rupp said that no amount of praise could be paid the boys for their fine playing. He stated that he was confident all season that he was tutoring another excellent team but that until the tournament they had not been able to play their best ball.

"They played the best ball they have shown all season and I certainly am proud of them," was his final statement.

"I thought all along that we would win," said Captain Warfield Donohue. Although his chief interest at the time was getting his measurements for his sweater cleared up, the fact that he had played his last game for the Cats cast a shadow on the conversation.

"I sure feel fine," was Ralph Carlisle's words. Ralph, one of the two seniors on the squad, said it "was the best tournament I ever played in." He contended strongly that he knew all along that they would win. "Cab" Curtis, sophomore star of the tourney who filled Carlisle's shoes so well when he was called upon to sub for the senior forward, said that he had never enjoyed playing so much in all his life.

"Barney" Opper, while telling about the final game with Tennessee, said, "When Goforth made that goal with just two minutes to play increasing our lead to five points, I said 'We're going now' and just a second later, swissish, Jim put in another beauty."

Jay Rice Walker, who just missed making the all-tournament team by one vote, commented, "If that other judge had just voted for me I would have gotten a new car." The fiery headed Joe Hagan stated that they

Dantzier Discusses Life of Hauptmann

Dr. L. L. Dantzier, head of the department of English, discussed the life and works of Gerhart Hauptmann, German writer at the bi-weekly meeting of the fine arts division of the Lexington chapter of the American Association of University Women Tuesday night at the Lafayette hotel. Approximately 25 persons attended the meeting, at which Mrs. D. H. Starns, chairman, presided.

Discussing the background of the writer and dramatist, Dr. Dantzier summarized the influences that affected the work of Hauptmann. All his life, according to Dr. Dantzier, Hauptmann was confronted with problems of philosophy that contributed to making the type of play that he wrote.

had "an awful battle, but I'm sure glad we won."
Walter Hodge merely said, "Tennessee had a pretty good team." Goforth, who started the rally which gave the Big Blue such a safe margin, and Bob Davis could not be found to be interviewed.

All of them were appreciative of the fine reception that was given them when they returned and of the messages of good will which they received while in Knoxville. None of them had any complaints on the refereeing, but Donohue remarked, "They acted like it was a high school tournament."

For Digestion's Sake—Smoke Camels

Smoking Camels, you enjoy a sense of greater ease while you're eating, and afterwards too!

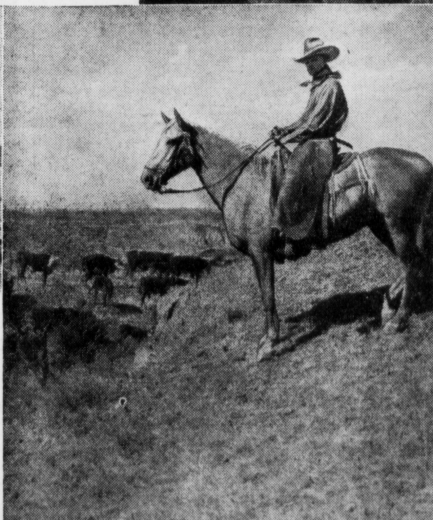

WHAT Fred McDaniel (below) says about Camels is backed up 100% by baseball's "Iron Man," Lou Gehrig — by Frank Buck, of "Bring 'em Back Alive" fame — by Eleanor Tennant, the outstanding woman tennis coach of the U.S.—and by millions of other Camel smokers in all walks of life. Enjoy Camels at every meal. They speed up the flow of digestive fluids. Increase alkalinity. Help you enjoy food. Camels set you right! They're the cigarette for steady smoking. Light up a Camel and get a "lift."

TEDIOUS STUDIES tend to drag on the nerves, often penalizing digestion. But Camels help in two specific ways: You get a "lift" in energy with a Camel. Again, smoking Camels with your meals and afterwards helps digestion run along smoothly. And Camels don't get on your nerves or tire your taste. Camels are mild!

"AFTER RIDING HERD from sun-up to sun-down, the chuck-wagon looks mighty good to me," says Fred McDaniel (above, also right). "But I'm sure I wouldn't enjoy my 'chuck' half as much without the pleasure I get from smoking Camels with my meals and afterwards. After a good meal and Camels I feel plenty O.K. Camels set me right! They're throat-easy, and they never get on my nerves."

BUSY SECRETARY. "I smoke Camels—nothing else!" says Josephine Libby. "Camels put more fun into eating and smoking too. So many girls feel the same way that I do—so they smoke Camels."

COSTLIER TOBACCOES!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOES—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.
