OVER BERA IN SECOND BATTLE

Wildcats Defeat Mountaineers 58 to 10 in Extra-Scheduled Practice Game

KENTUCKY MACHINE GETS SLOW START

Garland Lewis Leads Wildcat Scorers With Nineteen Points

Getting off to a slow start in the first period, Kentucky's basketball team came back with a last half rush to overwhelm Berea College, 58-10, Tuesday night in the second game of the season.

Hampered somewhat by a slippery floor, the Wildcat offense was raged in the first ten minutes of play. Berea's Mountaineers gave the Cats plenty of opposition in the early stages of the game and managed to hold their own with the Kentucky shooting until just before the half closed, when the Blue team lengthened its margin.

Wildcat defense started off the evening by dribbling in for a short shot and a few moments later "Red" Hagan rebounded a shot to give the Wildcats a lead which they never relinquished. Major Gardner counted first for Berea with a field goal from out beyond the foul line, but Garland Lewis, Donohue and Ralph Carlisle added baskets to set the score at 10-3 after five minutes of battling.

The Mountaineers never gave up, however, and capitalized on almost every scoring opportunity. They closed the big gap slowly and within two minutes left in the first half, trailed 16-10.

Hagan cut across in front of the hoop to sink a one-hander and a minute later scored again on a rebound. Coach Rupp put in the Wildcats made good their comeback under the hoop and took approximately twenty tries before Hagan made the first shot of the second half. Coming back after the intermission, the Cats went to work immediately to pile up the counting lead. Lewis counted first with a crisp and Andy Anderson came through with a strong rebound. Wright made good his shot for Berea. Hagan rebounded and then Lewis went on a one-man scoring spree, scoring three straight hoops, all from in close.

Kentucky was never in danger in the second half and midway through the period, Coach Rupp put in a whole new team, consisting of G. W. Hill and Edgerton at guards, Walker at center and Spicer and Ellis at the forwards.

This new combination had a scoring punch but lacked the offensive punch of the first combination. Big Jim Goforth ran up two long tries and Billy Spicer made good on three of his efforts.

After the game, Coach Rupp expressed dissatisfaction with the showing of the team and said he got in several tough practice sessions before the scheduled game with the Mountaineers, here, Monday with Pittsburgh here, Monday night.

The line-up and summary:
Kentucky pos.—(1) Gardner Hagan (12)... (2) Clark Lewis (19)... (3) Wright Donohue (4)... (4) Spicer (10)... (5) Anderson (2)... (6) Roberts Substitutions: Kentucky—Spicer (6), Biles, Craig, Walker (2), Goforth (7), Edgerton, Berea—H. Gardner, Everole (2), Adams (2), Referee—Shively (Kentucky).

Elvis Stahr is Recipient Of Rhodes Scholarship
SCHOLAR

Perfect Standing, Many Activities Comprise Un-usual Record
By GEORGE M. SPENCER
When Elvis Stahr was informed that he had received a Rhodes Scholarship, he immediately wrote friends in Lexington: "I got one. Am really surprised and thrilled." This telegram is expressive of the attitude that Elvis has carried during his life at the University. "Certainly it's the biggest honor I ever made," he says, "but the reason for that is because it helps the school, too. It was my turn to do something for the school."
A couple of months before he entered the University, Elvis J. Stahr Jr., Hickman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elvis J. Stahr Sr., had probably never heard of the Rhodes Scholarship. Then one of his most intimate friends, who went to school at Vanderbilt, took the examination for the scholarship. Although he didn't get it, it set Elvis thinking just what a wonderful thing those scholarships are.
Although Elvis says he really didn't think seriously of the scholarship until he heard of it, he is now, in fact, to make all A's—a perfect 3 standing, besides getting into all the better campus activities and becoming known for his diligence and conscientiousness.
About this time, Elvis began participating in many meetings that he had to have some method of meeting his obligation. The rest (Continued on Page Four)

McVEY TALKS TO DINNER MEETING
Framework of Our Accustomed Social and Economic Life Must Be Maintained, Says President

Dr. Frank L. McVey, president, spoke to a dinner meeting of the International Relations study group at 6:30 p. m. Monday, Dec. 16, in the University Commons, on the subject, "International Trends."
Approximately 150 guests attended this first meeting of the International Relations group which was given in honor of the Cosmopolitan Club at the University. Mrs. Walter Allen Price, president of the University Women's club, presided and introduced the members of the Cosmopolitan club.

The program was opened by the singing of Christmas carols under the direction of Miss Helen Farmer, after which Dr. McVey itemized the different stages of a revolution as (1) presence of discontent; (2) consolidation; (3) centralized groups maintained by force; (4) centralization of uniform groups; (5) a program of action. The speaker also grouped the main political divisions as: Fascist form in Italy, Communists in Russia, Socialists in England and the religion of the United States.

In this country we are attempting to retain the framework of our accustomed social and economic life and to build within it a stable and progressive state. We desire equality and justice in economic life. May it not be said that in the United States we have passed over the earlier phases of revolution and in fact have now reached the last stage of the revolution, that is, disorganizing, bloody stages of the earlier periods in a revolutionary movement."

AT CONVOCATION

Dr. McVey Talks on Campus Problems at Annual Pre-Holiday "Between Us" Gathering

CHRISTMAS SINGING FEATURES PROGRAM
Recent Class Election, Student Union, Cuts Are Discussed

General convocation of the University was held yesterday in Memorial Hall at 10 o'clock, at which time President McVey made his annual Christmas address and spoke of problems and affairs of the campus, under the title, "Between Us."
The program was opened with selections by the Mens' Glee club and the student body. Invocation was made by Doctor Miles of the First Presbyterian church. Then the entire assembly sang Christmas carols.

Following the singing, Dr. McVey took over the program and spoke to the students. He lauded the Glee club for its fine conduct at neighboring towns. "Students bodies get reputation and name for their fine conduct of a group but from individualism. Keep in mind the fact that the Mens' Glee club is a group of individuals and are a blot on the University. It is the students' obligation to remember this."
He also discussed the recent class election mentioned that there were 50 stolen votes. For which reason the election was declared void by the Mens' Student Council.
"The right of suffrage is a very valuable, important one of which we should be exceedingly careful." The past election resulted in the principles of democracy and students should object strenuously to such irregularities.
"We have an Anglo Saxon heritage of democracy given to us through thousands of years, coming from struggle and revolution. Are we going to throw this aside. If it, devoid it, leave it in a worse position than we are. We must start with ideals that are high enough or else we come to the end of life's journey of ideals and principles."
Next a discussion of the Student Union building was undertaken.
"There are many problems connected with the Student Union building. Most argument has been about a site. As the amount of money to build a room, which is a project, there is the question whether there will be enough to build the building. We want a Student Union building which will be a home for students from nearby towns and counties, as well as a place where various student organizations may meet."

UK Student As Santa Claus Gets Whiskers
Pulled By Doubters; Co-ed Wants Limousine

By BELMONT RAMSLEY
"Sligh bells may be ringing for some people but the Eastern State hospital bells are ringing for me," declared Joe Deick, sophomore in the College of Commerce, who for the past ten days has played Santa Claus in the toy section of Lexington store in downtown Lexington.
Dressed in a bright red suit trimmed with white fur and wearing a tasseled cap Joe's job was to tell the kiddies all about the North Pole and what he was going to give them for Christmas.
On the surface this appears to be a lot of fun but according to Joe, playing Santa Claus has its catches. "A number of kids don't seem to believe in Santa Claus and to prove there is no such person they pull Joe's whiskers and kicked his shins. And acting the part of jolly old St. Nick to perfection he received a lot of abuse."
One observing youngster put two and two together and told Joe, "Heck—you ain't Santa Claus. I can see the stitches in your beard."
Another kid, trying to figure out this Santa Claus business, asked, "Say, Santa Claus, I saw you down at another store just now and then on the street corner, and now here you are in here. How do you get around so fast?"
Probably the greatest deduction of all was performed by a seven or eight-year-old boy. He saw a ring on Joe's finger and wanted to know, "Hey, Santa Claus, what fraternity do you belong to?"
The most disconcerting kids, though, were those who took one look at Santa Claus, alias Joe Deick, and immediately began to cry. Joe couldn't figure out whether they were crying because he wasn't what they wanted for Christmas or because they were looking at him just like they were a fellow common student, who worked in the toy department at the same time, insisted on being paid for his services.
Some were evidently doubtful about how he stood in with Santa and did their best to make favorable remarks. "You ain't what Christmas" and another sang "Santa Claus is Coming to Town."
A university coed—brunette, by the way—is reliably reported as having dropped in on Santa Claus one afternoon. She impressed him by sitting on his knee and before

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

On and around December 25th of each year springs from the hearts of those influenced by Christianity an enthusiasm and expression of good cheer known as the Christmas spirit.

How often parents say that Christmas means nothing to them but work; that they go to a lot of trouble just for the children. But they were once kids; had that self-same faith in Santa Claus.

Santa Claus is the symbol of cheer and unselfishness. He brings dolls, trains, little toy soldiers and candy. Over 1900 years ago a poor carpenter's son brought rich gifts to men and these gifts constituted a new and happier way of life.

Once more candles flicker in the windows; Christmas carols fill the frosty air; happy mothers and fathers secure boys and girls in the pleasant land of counterpane; stockings hang over the fireplace; and in other dwellings afflicted by poverty, vice and sickness may be found frail bodies in rags awaiting a charity Santa Claus.

By a card, by a gift, by our very presence we seek to bring cheer. But how silly we mortals sometimes are; how helpless and artificial; but still how human. To keep up with the Jones' we must have those cards engraved and we don't need to send the Smiths' one because they have been out of work for so long.

It is the stupid that scoff at Santa Claus; it is the fool that thinks he can purchase his Christmas at the market place; and it is the infidel that denies it altogether.

To wish a man a Merry Christmas is to wish him the greatest heritage of mankind. It is an invitation to him to be joyous in his endeavor to do something sacrificial for others rather than merely giving something incidental to caring for his own welfare.

STANDARDS FOR TRADITIONS

The new rules passed by the University Senate and the changes in former regulations represent the adoption of a more liberal attitude on the part of the governing body of the University, and deserve the appreciation of the students.

The new social rules have taken cognizance of one outstanding maxim—"An idle mind is the devil's workshop." Allowing the Wednesday night dances to continue solved this problem in a number of ways. The student body now has a definite place to go for a good time on Wednesday nights.

The attacks on these dances are being the immediate cause of negligence in studying and class attendance was generally unwarranted. These bi-weekly affairs are not the prevailing distraction. It is the other events, activities of various natures, intramural contests, music rehearsals, etc., which take up the time of the student which otherwise might be used in study.

are possibly more so because of the customary "mid-week let-down" and the fact that very little studying is done after fraternity and sorority meetings.

The reduction in the severity of the absence before or after a holiday penalty removed a very outstanding hangover of rigorous discipline. The old rule was much too severe when enforced and for this reason considerable leniency was exhibited in its enforcement.

The Kernel heartily endorses and encourages this spirit of liberality, and desires to show its appreciation to the administration on behalf of the student body for these worthwhile changes in regulations.

"ISMS" AND MARTYDOM

The American press bears witness to an increasing interest of the college student of this country in world affairs. This phenomenon has been commented on amusingly by a writer in the New York World-Telegram, who says: "The college boys and girls aren't getting a fair break. For years we've been accusing them of wasting their time and their parent's money, rah-rahing and petting. Now that large groups of them are beginning to think and talk seriously about such momentous subjects as war and peace, they are either slapped on the wrist by some college administrations or accused by some publicists of indulging in 'emotional sprees.'"

Basic economics and social changes are commanding the attention of all mature people who are intellectually alive, and college men and women have the right and more than that—the duty to equip themselves with knowledge of challenging and penetrating problems of the greatest importance.

The entrance of the United States into the League of Nations was made the topic of a poll prepared by the Association of College Editors and conducted last February by the Literary Digest. The problem of preparedness as means of insuring national peace, of the strike method as asserting the sentiment of college youth on the war question, of compulsory R. O. T. C. in the colleges, of the socialist and communist programs as means of averting the "capitalist crisis"—these and other problems fundamental to our national and world social structure have elicited more than passing interest in the colleges.

To insure a clear-headed, definite attitude on the part of the college student in his investigation of world politics, the answer to one leading problem should be imbedded in the minds of the college youth. This question is: Can a man acquire enough information during the four-year college period to justify his embracing a cause? In other words, should the college man restrict his interest in world peace, communism, socialism, and all the other "isms" to intellectual curiosity?

A definite answer to this question in the minds of the entering freshman can do much to clarify his reactions to various youth movements. It is easy to lose one's balance in a survey of the many answers to the world's ills. In almost any discussion group of young people, there is sure to be one or more who think they are socialists or communists. Perhaps it is a sign that they have done some thinking about major problems. But at that stage of development it is easy to miss the broader aspects of the entire subject, easy to see all the favorable sides of one's own viewpoint to the exclusion of the unfavorable.

The scientific method has a lot in its favor as applied to politics as well as in the laboratory. If a man has clearly assimilated in his own mind reason for becoming a martyr in the cause of communism, for example, then, we can believe his sincerity in giving himself to that end. It is extremely doubtful whether the college student can graduate from the experimental stage into the realm of martyrdom before he has been through the mill and had a few years in the world of realities.—The Tech, of M. I. I.

With all its draw backs life is still a splendid adventure.

The book, "Why We Behave Like Human Beings," had a big sale in spite of the fact that most of us don't.

Let changes come. Without changes there is no progress.

The directive principle of education should be directed toward a more efficient parenthood, says Dr. William A. Shimer, secretary of the United Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

No one is rich enough to do without a neighbor.

STUDENT OPINION

Dear Editor: My attention was recently called to a letter in the last edition of The Kernel concerning "The Student League for Industrial Democracy."

This "I.L.D." blasted "the present social and economic order" for all it was worth, and damned the University administration for refusing to recognize them. They felt hurt because the President of this institution and the University Council would not permit them to take root here.

The present is not the time for this government to plunge headlong into "a new economic and social order." Since the advent of William the Conqueror in 1066, the principles of the Anglo-Saxon race have always been based on individual liberty. From the signing of the Magna Charta in 1215 to the Declaration of Independence and our Constitution the history of the progress of our democracy can be summed up as being a steady procession of incidents all founded on the same fundamental principles of individual rights.

Look at the other nations of the world. France is harassed by riots; Germany, Italy and Russia are dominated by dictators; Japan is under an absolute monarchy; the South American 'republics' are in continual upheaval, and China has no government at all. A well-informed authority recently said that the United States and England have the only democratic systems of government remaining in the world.

These countries have no solid background on which to base their policies. They have repeatedly turned from monarchy to republic—dictatorship to imperialism—and back again. They revert from chaos to order, and then to chaos as before. Never heeding their course—never following any scientific methods—never reasoning why or where they are going, they are merely turning around and around in one huge meaningless circle, to find themselves back at the beginning again.

The history of the Anglo-Saxon race has been different. There have been no revolutions and uprisings in our past. The Revolutionary War was not a revolution; it was merely a conflict to insure the blessings of Anglo-Saxon liberty that were being denied by aristocratic rulers. We have not twisted from one political predicament into another, but have made a steady forward progress towards a greater freedom.

It is true that we have passed through many crises—but that is all the more to our credit. Our administrations have changed many times—but our policy has been the backbone of our political liberty for more than one thousand years. Every major and political document since the Magna Charta has been based upon it.

Why should we discard our heritage that has rested on a firm foundation longer than any other civil principle in the history of man for more than one thousand years? We do not need to experiment. Our foundation is tested, and we need only to build upon it: if we discard it now for an unknown structure of weaker build, we will be lost. If there are changes to be made, we can remodel our own securely-set structure—not begin a new one on an untried foundation.

Let the person who wrote his letter for the "I.L.D." reply to these charges. Let him openly proclaim himself and present sound arguments for his plan, instead of making a deliberate and unprincipled attack upon the policies of this government and the men of this institution. I defy this student "I. D." and all who are connected with such a disoriented and radical organization.

Stahr Is Awarded Rhodes Scholarship

suit was that he decided to make out a schedule each night for the following day. This worked magnificently.
At the beginning of his junior year, however, he definitely decided that if it were humanly possible, he would be a Rhodes Scholar. During that year his ability began to be awarded. Campus honors piled up on him. He became president of this and that. Everywhere he was looked upon as a leader. As a leader he was skillful, understanding, and as in everything else, a hard worker.
Stahr admits that when he began his senior year, he wanted four things: The cadet colonelcy of the R. O. T. C. regiment, president of the Beta Beta Beta Kappa and the Rhodes Scholarship. He got all four.

At Oxford, he will probably take that in his stride as he has all other things. There he will be ranked as an undergraduate senior. It usually takes American college A. B. a two years to get a bachelor's degree from Oxford. "But," Elvis intimates, "some get it before that time." For six months each year he will study jurisprudence, a cultural and fundamental course of law, and for six months, he will travel and study on the continent.
"It's the keenest thing that ever happened to me," he says. Incidentally, one of the men he won over at the tryouts was the top man at the United States Military academy.
Right now, though, Elvis is thoroughly enmeshed in campus affairs. Keeping up a 3 standing is job enough for one man.
Every year, his fraternity, Sigma Chi, awards a trophy to the outstanding undergraduate of all its chapters. At this moment, Elvis has his eye on that.

Many Trout For Pershing Rifles

Competition among Pershing Rifles try-outs has reached a new high now that the beginning of the second semester is only a month away.
That is when the final cut will be made and only the "fittest" will survive. Those selected at that time will continue to drill three times each week until the annual competitive drill meet, which will be held next spring.
Pershing Rifles so far has enjoyed a successful year. A large number of freshmen try-outs reported for drill at the first of the semester, thus assuring an abundance of material from which to choose.

SEEN FROM THE PRESS BOX

By JOE QUINN Kernel Sports Editor

"There's no rest for the weary" And there will be very little rest for Kentucky's basketball team now on out. So far this season, in their two games and in practice sessions, the Wildcats have been performing in a little better than mediocre fashion. They haven't impressed the critics with their play, nor has Coach Rupp been overjoyed with the way in which his charges have been working.
So it will mean plenty of practice until they begin to show up the way Rupp expects them to do. This year's team has potentialities if they can be developed.

Last season Kentucky had a really fine team, even though they did drop a couple of contests. And from that team there is left Andy Anderson, Warfield Donohue, Garland Lewis, Ralph Carlisle, Jim Goforth and "Duke" Ellington, all of whom got in a lot of action during the season.
Coach Rupp has been experimenting with two combinations with some of the men interchangeable. He has started Carlisle, Hagan, Lewis, Donohue and Anderson in both games this far and has used Bliss, Spicer, Walker, Goforth and Ellington as a second combination. The starting team has been slightly off-balance as scoring power is concerned, while the replacements have been just about as weak defensively. In the arena game, the Mountaineers rolled up 15 points against the second group in the ten or twelve minutes they were in the contest, while they had only scored 15 points against the starting team in almost 30 minutes. But the reserves had the scoring punch while they were in there.
The problem, then, which confronts Coach Rupp, seems to be in finding the right five men to work together, who will furnish the 'Cats with both offensive power and defensive strength.
This problem is going to be tough to solve, too. The 'Cats will need all the height and weight they can crowd onto the first team when they start to meet some of their more difficult opponents, starting Monday night against Pittsburgh. However, if Coach Rupp moves out some of his men in favor of others with the height and weight advantage, he may be losing defensive strength. As we said, it's a difficult problem—maybe you can figure it out. Once the Wildcats hit upon the right combination they will be exceedingly dangerous.

Two of Kentucky's most powerful opponents will be played in the next two games. On December 23, the Pittsburgh Panthers will be here for the evening. They have been playing fairly frequently in the past two or three weeks and so far have bowed only to Northwestern. Monday night they gained an eight-point decision over Butler University, another Kentucky opponent.
Two witnesses at this game were Coach Rupp and freshman coach Paul McBrayer. Both came back speaking in glowing terms of the strong Pitt offense. The Panthers use the figure eight system of advancing the ball down the court, and according to the coaches, were apparently tireless in covering the floor. Coach Carlson, a recognized authority on the game, has been developing great teams at Pitt ever since the days of Charley Hyatt, whom experts pick as probably the greatest player the sport has known. Carlson carries only a ten-man squad and gets the great majority of his material right from the city of Pittsburgh.
The teams he has developed may lose a few games each season but they are annually ranked with the leading aggregations of the country. The customers may expect to see a really fine team in action when Pitt plays here Monday night.
After the holidays and the next game after Pitt, is the New York University battle in New York, at Madison Square Garden. Most of the students will remember last year's game with N.Y.U. when Kentucky finally was recognized as one of the nation's outstanding teams.

University Senate Passes New Rules

The musical instruction of the band.

The penalty for absences before and after holidays has been reduced from three credits and three points to one credit and one point. Another ruling states that a student not a graduate of an accredited high school but who has 15 acceptable units of high school work, will be admitted upon passing tests in English and mathematics, a psychological test and deemed necessary to meet the individual need.

Inclusion in the list of rules for participation in public activities was one which stated that a freshman would be allowed to participate immediately after matriculation, except for membership in a fraternity. For eligibility during his second semester and thereafter, except as provided for intercollegiate athletics he must have gained a standing of 1.0 during the preceding semester for three-fourths of the work of that period required for graduation. This means that freshmen are no longer eligible for admission into a fraternity on the basis of having passed three-fourths of his subjects. Initiates are now required to have a standing of 1.0.
All persons likewise representing the University in extra curricular activities such as intramurals, dramas, membership on staffs of University publications, class officers, fraternity or club officers, and sponsorships, must have met entrance requirements, must be carrying a schedule of at least 12 hours, must not be on probation, and must also have a standing of 1.

Block and Bride Initiates Three

The Block and Bride club held formal initiation Monday night, December 15, in the Agricultural building for Everett Stephenson, Christine, and James White.
Prof. L. J. Horisacher spoke on the International Livestock exposition in Chicago. He urged the boys to get busy now and prepare essays for the Saddle and Siroin club contest for next fall.
