Vogel testifies before grand jury

PHIL VOGEL, the Lexington police sergeant who shot and killed Antonio Sullivan, leaves the Fayette County Courthouse yesterday.

By Stephen Trimble
Executive Editor

Lexington Police Sgt. Phil Vogel appeared for more than four hours in the Fayette County Courthouse yesterday to testify before a grand jury that will decide whether he will face charges in the Oct. 25 shooting of Antonio Sullivan.

His testimony completed three days of grand jury hearings on the Sullivan shooting.

Vogel entered the courthouse around 2:30 p.m. yesterday, guarded by several police officers. Inside the courthouse, a large police presence was obvious as several guards stood just inside the lobby and others were stationed around the building.

As he entered, Vogel ignored questions by reporters and walked swiftly inside.

The shooting death of Sullivan, an 18-year-old black man, sparked rioting and three days of unrest in Lexington. Vogel, a 22-year veteran of the Lexington police force, and four other officers were trying to arrest him at his girlfriend's apartment on charges of assault and warrant endangerment in connection with a street shooting.

The grand jury will have 17 days, including today, to reach a decision, but could announce as early as this morning. The jury can either dismiss the case against Vogel or indict him on charges of murder, first- or second-degree manslaughter, or reckless homicide.

In addition to Vogel, Sonora Clay, Sullivan's former girlfriend, made a second appearance in two days before a grand jury yesterday. Afterward, her attorney, Brent Austin, told reporters he could not comment on the case, but added there are no plans for Clay to testify again.

Several black youths maintained their peaceful three-day vigil outside the courthouse. They waved signs with Sullivan's picture on them at vehicles passing by.

NATION Congress OKs unfunded mandates bill

WASHINGTON — House Republicans took a big step forward on their Contract With America agenda yesterday, pushing through a bill restricting the federal government's ability to impose unfunded mandates on the states.

Negotiations to settle minor differences between the House and Senate versions of the measure and final votes in both chambers were the lone remaining obstacles to getting the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act to President Clinton's desk.

Clinton to name new surgeon general

WASHINGTON — Dr. Henry Foster Jr., a medical school leader known for fighting teen-age pregnancy in Tennessee, is President Clinton's choice for surgeon general, officials said yesterday.

Foster, 61, former acting president of a predominantly black medical school, will replace Dr. Joycelyn Elders, an outspoken Arkansas pediatrician who was fired in October after saying school children should be taught about masturbation.

White House aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the announcement is scheduled for today. They said Foster would lead a national campaign to combat teen-age pregnancy.

Friend: O.J. dreamed of killing ex-wife

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson confided after his ex-wife's slaying that he had had dreams of killing her, a friend testified yesterday. But the witness said he didn't tell police for fear it would hurt the football star.

"I loved this man for 26 years," Ronald Shipp, a former police officer who retired from the force five years ago, told jurors.

"All of a sudden my thought processes ... like I say, I wanted nothing to do with it."

"I thought it was very, it was harmful," he said.

Kerrigan skates into more endorsements

LOS ANGELES — Nancy Kerrigan is teaming up with Arctic Cat and Tigershark.

The Olympic figure skater from Stoneham, Mass., confirmed yesterday that she has signed a deal to endorse Arctic Cat snowmobiles and Tigershark watercraft made by Minnesota-based Arctco Inc.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Kerrigan won a silver medal at last year's Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

Atchley has spent life beating the odds

By Beth McKensie
Contributing Writer

Never say never to Eddie Atchley.

Since he came to UK almost four years ago, he seems to have done it all. He is a political science senior, active in student government and a member of Alpha Phi Alpha social fraternity — a group dedicated to community service.

He speaks proudly of his fraternity and the role it plays in the community.

"People can say they do community service - but do they know 'em? Do they know how they think and how they feel? We're consistent with it," he said. "Every week we go back to the same spot. They know us by face and name."

"That's why he is involved. It's important not because of any award," Atchley said, "but to bring someone else up. That's how I look at it."

He said he decided to get involved with the Student Government Association as a senator because he wanted to make some changes.

Erica McDonald, a graduate student, close friend and former campaign manager for Atchley, said his SGA involvement shows his dedication to community improvement.

"He's just a real go-getter," McDonald said, "and I think we both believe if you don't stand for something you'll fall for anything."

Edward L. Atchley is one of three children. He was born and raised in Louisville where he, his twin brother and younger sister were raised primarily by their mother and grandmother.

"When Eddie and his brother were 7, their father left them."

"It was one of the roughest times in my life," Eddie said, adding however that the experience ultimately brought the family closer together.

While his mother worked two jobs, Atchley attended St. Ignatius Martyr, a predominately white Catholic school in Louisville.

His eight years at the school instilled discipline, but Atchley also credits the former director of Louisville's Newburg Boys and Girls Club, George Unsel, for keeping him on the right track.

"Mr. Unsel was really my father figure when I was younger. If I needed anything, he was always there to help me," Eddie said.

Unsel's support helped shape the boy into the man — not that the road was always an easy one.

Atchley said there were several times in school when he was told he'd never make it.

"Some of my old teachers used to tell me that (because of) my math skills and all. So I told my mom

GETTING INVOLVED Political science senior Eddie Atchley says giving back to his community is important to him. Last year, he successfully campaigned for a spot as senator at large in the Student Government Association Senate.

I wanted a tutor, and she got me that tutor. Then all through high school I made As and Bs in math."

He also was told that he would never play football.

One of Eddie's best memories is his sophomore year when he was a finalist in the homecoming court.

"That was a big accomplishment for me. I remember when they drove us around in the cars during half-time."

"Everybody was waving at me. People I didn't even know, and I thought, 'Here we go!'"

He lives his life to the fullest in every regard, one of his closest friends, Senator at Large Shelli Freeland, said.

"He's such a genuine person, outgoing and very sincere. He always wants to help others," she said.

And Atchley credits his friends for their inspiration.

"They spiritually and mentally challenge me," he said.

"They really mean a lot to me."

In fact, when he and his friends were freshmen, they made a pact in writing to reunite in 10 to 15 years, and he has every confidence that they will.

"People say the friends you make in college are your best friends — and these are my best friends."

In the meantime, Atchley has applied to law school.

"It's not about being a lawyer and having money," he said.

"It's about going home and takin' care of business. You gotta go back to where you started from and bring somebody else up the same way. That's what Mr. Unsel did for me. He brought me up. And now it's time for me to take his spot."

He's always smiling and cracking jokes, McDonald said, but he has a serious side.

"He's very focused. Maybe the world isn't ready for people as real as Eddie is," she said.

"Some people aren't prepared for people who don't play games," McDonald said.

"And with Eddie, there's no hidden agenda. What you see is what you get."

University continues push for National Merit Scholars

By John Kelly
Campus Editor

Eighty-one National Merit scholars enrolled as freshmen at UK last semester, ranking the University eighth among the nation's public institutions and 18th among all colleges and universities.

"These students challenge each other. They challenge fellow students, and they challenge the faculty to teach at the highest level of intensity," said Robert Hemenway, chancellor for the Lexington Campus. "They kind of set an academic tone for the entire institution."

The 81 new scholars bring the total number of undergraduate National Merit Scholars to more than 200. That accomplishment is a product of an aggressive, six-year effort to bring those students to UK, Hemenway said.

"We are very aggressive about recruiting National Merit scholars," Hemenway said. "When you add it all up, the people realize that UK is as good a place as they can go to get a first-rate education."

"When we started in 1989, there were only 12 National Merit scholars in our incoming freshman class," Hemenway said. "We set as our goal that we were going to have more National Merit scholars in the incoming freshman class than all of the other Kentucky institutions combined. Now, we are trying to have as many as the top five in the country."

Harvard and Radcliffe colleges were first overall, successfully recruiting 393 new National Merit Scholars this year. The University of Texas was second overall and first among public schools with 251.

The other five public institutions that lured more

National Merit scholars than UK were Texas A&M University (189), University of Oklahoma (159), University of Florida (134), Georgia Tech University (108) and The Ohio State University (91).

The closest state university to UK was the University of Louisville, which enrolled 15 National Merit Scholars. Transylvania University had six and Centre College had two.

Asbury College, Georgetown College and Murray State enrolled one each.

Last year, UK recruited 67 National Merit Scholars, and ranked eighth among public schools. It ranked 22nd overall last year.

"We are very pleased that highly gifted students who tend to be very selective in their college choices are enrolling at UK," President Charles Wethington said.

Student shot near campus

Staff report

UK senior Jewell Mae Melhiser was shot about 7:50 last night after getting out of a red, two-door Honda in a parking lot behind Pizza Hut at 545 S. Limestone St., Lexington police said.

Melhiser, 20, told police that she was going to visit a friend who lived above the restaurant when she was approached by a black male. She tried to run, but the man shot her, police said.

UK Hospital officials said Melhiser was in fair condition after being admitted to the hospital for gunshot wounds.

Police said they have no suspects, but a witness near the scene saw two black males running from the scene, Lexington-Fayette Urban County Police Officer Kevin Kelly said.

According to UK and Lexington police reports, this incident is the fourth assault to occur between the 500 and 800 blocks of South Limestone since Dec. 15.

All four incidents have involved two black male suspects, and two have involved guns.

Most recently, on Jan. 24 at 9:30 p.m., Mike Bezold, a civil engineering senior, was robbed of his wallet at gunpoint while walking near the SuperAmerica at 819 S. Limestone St. He said the assailants were two black males.

Bezold said a thin man about 6 feet 4 inches tall brandished a small .22-caliber, non-revolver-type gun after a second man hit him over the head.

Bezold said he also was involved in the Dec. 15 incident when he was walking past the same SuperAmerica and heard a woman scream.

Bezold said the woman filed a report with Lexington police, stating that the suspects, two black males, attempted to rob her, failed and then hit her in the eye and fled.

On Dec. 23, two Kentucky Clinic employees were assaulted while walking to their vehicles in the Press Avenue parking lot, located across the street from the SuperAmerica.

The women were leaving work at about 2:50 p.m. when each was attacked by a different black male, according to police reports.

Lexington police would not comment on whether they believe the assaults to be related.

LexTran financial woes could hurt service

By John Kelly
Campus Editor

With funding decreasing and operating costs increasing, LexTran's leaders are prepared, if necessary, to make a decision that would mean an end to public bus service in Lexington — and a problem for UK. "If we do cease service, (campus service) will be stopped too," LexTran general manager Steve Rowland said. "We have to consider all options. The service is just not very good as it is. It's skeletal, and further cuts would make it useless to even those people who depend on it most." LexTran has asked the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Council for increased funding to deal with an expected $390,000 shortfall in the upcoming fiscal year. "The board will be planning to deal with a worst-case scenario, which would be what to do if we have to try to continue to provide this level of service with significantly less funding," Rowland said. "So we have to look at ceasing operation." UK parking and transportation director Don Thornton said the University isn't making any plans for starting its own bus service, but said that would be one possible solution if LexTran closes. "At this point, it's too soon for us to start worrying about alternatives," Thornton said. "They have to rely heavily on local and federal subsidies and those funds are being cut. But we have to wait and see what happens. We have to be concerned, but it's too early to get overly worried."

Money problems are usual with public transportation, but the year ahead is going to be stingier than usual, Rowland and Thornton both said. LexTran already has learned that the federal government will give it $147,000 less in the upcoming fiscal year, which begins in July. A company providing special service for riders with disabilities wants LexTran to pay $220,000 more for that service next year. "That leaves us $390,000 short of what we need just to provide the service we are providing right now," Rowland said. "If only parts of service are cut, UK probably is safe because of its deal with LexTran. In exchange for managing the bulk of campus bus service, UK gives LexTran a $356,000 grant each year. The grant pays for the campus service and to "help support mass transit on campus and in the Lexington Metropolitan Area," Thornton said.

LexTran loses money on the UK deal, but less than it loses on its regular routes. "UK is one of our best situations," Rowland said.

Without LexTran, UK would have to find an alternative. One other universities have employed is starting their own bus services. UK already runs the C.A.T.S. bus service, but it is nowhere near capable of providing the service LexTran does, especially at a comparable cost, Thornton said. "The cost of running those full-size coach buses is much, much more expensive than our C.A.T.S. buses," he said. LexTran received $2.2 million, including a one-time $500,000 allotment for capital purchases, from the council for the current fiscal year, said Dottie Bean, press secretary for Mayor Pam Miller. Next year, the transit authority is asking for $4.2 million.

Debaters arguing for top spot

By John Kelly
Campus Editor

UK's top debate team won the Glenn R. Capp Debates at Baylor University last weekend, keeping itself in contention for a No. 1 seed in the national debate tournament.

UK's first team, seniors Paul Skiermont and Jay Finch, beat a team representing Harvard in the finals. Skiermont finished second overall in individual speaker awards.

"They certainly have a good chance (at earning the top seed)," coach J.W. Patterson said. "They aren't in as good a position as they were last year at this time, but they have a good chance."

To lock up the top seed, Skiermont and Finch would have to finish well at the next major tournament, the Wake Forest University Invitational Debate Tournament in Winston-Salem, N.C. That tournament, which is the last major tournament of the collegiate debating season, begins the weekend of Feb. 11. Last season, Skiermont teamed with senior Jason Patil to win college debate's highest honor, the Rex Copeland Award. The team drew the top seed for last year's national tournament. Skiermont won top individual speaker honors, but his team lost in the quarterfinals of the national tournament. This year, Patil is debating with junior Jason Renzelman. That team made it to the quarterfinals at the Baylor tournament last week, where it was to meet UK's first team. In tournaments, however, when a school's two teams meet, one usually forfeits, Patterson said. Skiermont and Finch were chosen to advance and eventually won the tournament, Patterson said. "Harvard is usually one of the national powers," Patterson said.

They aren't in as good a position as they were last year at this time, but they have a good chance.

Groovezilla roars its way to fame

By Eli Humble
Staff Writer

Start with a steady, tight, swinging drum track. Then, add an equally rhythmic and slightly funky bass line. Now, throw in some metallic, chunky guitar riffs and razor-sharp solos. To finish it off, insert a combination of social consciousness and hyperactive fun.

You now have a good idea about the Groovezilla sound.

While the above recipe is a fair indicator of what the Lexington quartet sounds like, a few changes have warranted an explanation of the band's current situation.

Former lead singer Jerrod Phiggs and saxophone player and back-up vocalist Vee Platt are gone. Taking Phiggs' place is a man who goes by only "98."

So, the current lineup stands as: drummer Chad Gravitt, bassist Scott McEwen, guitarist Wendell Rodgers and singer 98, a UK alum.

"He's very similar to us," McEwen said. "He's just a regular guy. (Ninety-eight's arrival) is a change for the better."

Groovezilla will play Sunday at the Wrocklage and Feb. 11 at Lynagh's.

The band's new album on Mausoleum records (titled Groovezilla) has received several positive reviews from music magazines all over the country. Groovezilla's single, "Survival," also is registering high on alternative radio charts.

Groovezilla's first album, Search for Noverland, was released in 1992.

When a band shifts its members, the overall sound usually undergoes a change. While this theory often has proved to mark the steady decline of a few good bands (Van Halen, Black Sabbath), Groovezilla is intent on not letting it happen.

"We're expecting our new reception to be incredibly good," Gravitt said. "If people liked us over the last five years, they'll love the new stuff."

"Ninety-eight has a different approach to songwriting," McEwen added. "He doesn't use cliches, and his writing is very intelligent and socially conscious."

The band's sound boasts an increased level of heaviness. When Vee left, she took with her the horn section, which is a funk element of Groovezilla's former sound that the members chose not to include.

Funk, while still a fairly present ingredient in the mix, is not as prominent as it has been in the past.

The steamy, slow-burning reggae, however, is still around.

"I think we're just maturing as a band," McEwen said. "It was time for a change."

"Our roots are hard core," Gravitt said. "We like playing like this. It's a lot of fun, and there's so much energy."

Playing live is a top priority for any up-and-coming band. Groovezilla has been around, and the band will be heading back out on the road within the next few months.

Groovezilla has had a successful West Coast tour and will probably soon be booked to open for a major act, according to McEwen.

"A press clipping described Groovezilla's sound as "power death jungle groove" music. While many artists claim that they don't like being labeled, McEwen said the above description is accurate.

"I think it's a good example," he said. "It shows that while we have many different influences, many of them are the same, too."

It's in the cards: Tarot offers wisdom

By Tara Anderson
Contributing Writer
Garnie Morrison
Staff Editor

The club scene has become too noisy, and there is no movie that looks the slightest bit appealing. A cozy evening in a warm room with a bunch of friends is the best alternative. But how to keep conversation interesting?

Some UK students have all the answers.

Have the answers to weekend boredom and to something much more — the future.

Dabbling in the occult, despite its sinister sound, can be entertaining as well as very spiritual, two UK students say.

The mythical wisdom of the tarot deck originated in 14th century France, when members of the royal court amused themselves with card divination.

The classic deck of playing cards used today was derived from tarot cards.

Clay Blankenship, a psychology junior, first became interested in tarot card reading at a summer program during high school, where a friend offered to do a reading for him.

At that same summer program, he took a class on "A Jungian Approach to the Tarot" that introduced him to a deck called "Mythic Tarot," which draws its symbolism from Greek mythology.

There is some debate as to whether the person having the reading should have a specific question in mind before beginning.

"It's best to have a focus, even if it's just focusing on your present state," Blankenship said.

Blankenship approaches the tarot as a "psychological tool" to assess a situation, rather than the complete and whole truth about a problem. Skeptics complain that it's too vague to really be useful, but Blankenship said the ambiguity sometimes can be an asset.

"If you get a reading that doesn't seem to fit and you try to make it fit, you can have new insights."

He bought the "Mythic Tarot" deck in August 1991 and gave it away in December 1994.

Now he wants the "Cards of Wind and Change," which are based on an Arctic Indian tribe's cosmology.

"I felt that the Greek and Western focus was becoming too limited for me," he said.

Tarot cards are divided into two sets — the Major Arcana and the Minor Arcana.

"The Major Arcana represents the primal, significant and grand elements of our reality," said Miles Sledd, a Common Grounds Coffee House employee and tarot card reader.

"The Minor is the lesser distinctions."

The Major Arcana, numbered 0 through 21, feature figures like the magician, the high priestess and the fool.

Each figure represents an aspect of how a person was, is (and sometimes will) respond to his environment.

The cards also represent personal strength, Sledd said.

The Minor Arcana is shown by symbols: swords, wands, pentacles and cups (associated with the spades, clubs, diamonds and hearts of a modern deck).

"Tarot is a psychological tool that gives you a look at where you are in the scheme of things and gives you some things to think about," Sledd said.

Sledd, an English junior at Transylvania University, picked up the skill of tarot card reading through books, but does it only for fun.

Although Blankenship does not give any religious significance to the cards, the person who introduced him considers reading "a prayer to the gods," as does Dwellyn Myrddin.

Myrddin, a classics, art studio and history senior, considers tarot card reading a sacred duty in connection

Film seeks Ludwig's lost love

By Matt DeFoor
Senior Staff Critic

Movies and their accompanying soundtracks have become popular with flicks like "Singles" and the more recent "Higher Learning" and "Ready to Wear."

Each of these movies had music written specifically for its subject matter. For Bernard Rose's latest, "Immortal Beloved," the music was written 200 years before the movie's release. And rather than an aside to the story, the music of Ludwig von Beethoven is an important element in understanding this misunderstood man and a tale of love.

"Immortal Beloved" director Rose's interpretation of Ludwig von Beethoven's life and loves reaches deep into the wells of human emotion to bring forth a stirring tale about the deaf composer. "Immortal Beloved" attempts to resolve the identity of Beethoven's famed love who still remains unknown.

Music historians have quibbled over the true identity of Beethoven's "immortal beloved," and Rose's account is just one of the many theories that exist.

The movie begins with the death of Beethoven. His secretary and friend Schindler (Jeroen Krabbé) soon begins the search for the woman identified in a letter only as "my Immortal Beloved." The movie takes the viewer and listener on a journey through the life of the enigmatic composer from the tales of his three loves (portrayed by Isabella Rossellini, Valeria Golino and Johanna Ter Steege). Of these three, Schindler must find which had won the eternal affection of Ludwig von Beethoven.

Rose's account of Beethoven's life is highly emotional and romantic. Given the film's topic, a composer during the Romantic period, it is understandable that the film has a highly romantic edge.

Beethoven's music fills the minute details that even spectacular performances by Oldman and Rossellini cannot accomplish. With the last impassioned strains of the 9th Symphony and the images of the young Beethoven fleeing the wrath of a drunken father, Rose captures the essence and relationship of music and life in a stirring flurry.

Then, as the last note dies out, Beethoven stands on the stage, deal to the applause around him.

Most importantly, the audience is oblivious to the pain that wrought such a masterpiece.

In "Immortal Beloved" there is the sound of an agitated soul, a man torn apart by love, scorned by the public and death, except in his own mind, to the music that he

While some people use the tarot cards for any question, or for no particular reason, Myrddin will only consult the cards for help in making serious, life-

Myrddin spends a considerable amount of time discussing the problem with the person asking the question before he agrees to do a reading.

He said that if someone comes to him with a question like, "What major should I choose?" or "When will I meet someone?" he will encourage the person to look inside themselves for the answers rather than consulting the tarot.

felt so deeply. Oldman's depiction is as arresting as the music. As Oldman rested his head on the cool wood of a piano, one could imagine the vibrations of the notes shivering through the wood and finally into the ear of its designer. Despite the sweet melodies of his music, through Rose's rendering of Beethoven's life, "Immortal Beloved" lends an ear to the anguish of a man whose body of work is mesmerizing.

Weekend full of free arts events

Staff report

Tomorrow, the Peal Gallery in Margaret I. King Library North is offering two cultural treats — for free.

At noon, as part of the Gallery Series, the Swan Salon Troupe will perform a demonstration and program of historic ballroom dancing. The dancers are Caroline Fahrner and Merrel Fuson of the Lexington Vintage Dance Society.

The series offers concerts and performances by members of the UK School of Music as well as lectures and presentations by regional authors and scholars.

At 4 p.m., Regina Schwartz, a professor from Duke University, will lecture on "Milton and Problematies of Identity."

The talk on the famous author of "Paradise Lost" will feature a display of some of Milton's works. These pieces, part of the Peal Gallery Special Collections, will be exhibited for the rest of February.

Schwartz has written several respected books, including "Remembering and Repeating: Biblical Creation in 'Paradise Lost,'" "The Book and the Text: The Bible and Literary Theory" and "Desire in the Renaissance: Psychoanalysis and Literature."

The Milton program is being sponsored by The Graduate School and the English department.

On Sunday, the ArtsPlace Gallery at 161 N. Mill St. will have a poetry and short fiction reading by Charlie Hughes and Leah Kendrick. The readers are the publishers of Wind, the literary magazine of the Lexington Arts and Cultural Council.

Hughes and Kendrick will read from their own works. The free event begins at 7 p.m.

Delk goes down in Wildcat win

By Jason Dattilo
Assistant Sports Editor

The South Carolina Gamecocks were like a nagging cold last night at Rupp Arena — you just couldn't get rid of them.

UK, which never quite made its characteristic second half run, still managed to win going away, 90-72, over the lowly Gamecocks.

"We didn't come out and play with great intensity," said UK forward Rodrick Rhodes, who finished with a team-high 19 points. "We were just kind of waiting to get our spurt."

The victory was a costly one, however, as UK's Tony Delk, the team's leading scorer, injured his shoulder.

Delk, who was coming off a career-high 31-point effort against Arkansas on Sunday, sprained a ligament in his left shoulder at the 4:00 mark of the first half while fighting through two South Carolina screens.

UK head coach Rick Pitino said Delk will not play Sunday against Syracuse. Pitino said he wants to get Delk ready for next week's game against Southeastern Conference rival Tennessee.

Before going down, Delk managed to pitch in 9 points, including two treys.

(Syracuse) will be a game that we'll have to reach for all our reserves to win without Tony," Pitino said.

Perhaps South Carolina was able to catch the No. 6 Wildcats (14-3, 8-1 SEC) looking into the future.

After all, a clash with the Gamecocks, who came into the game at the bottom of the SEC's Eastern Division, is not quite the same as the much-anticipated clash with Syracuse.

But Pitino said it was the strong play of USC and not his team's looking ahead that allowed the Gamecocks to stay close for so long.

"We had lapses because South Carolina played so hard," Pitino said. "They played as well as any team can play."

Defensive breakdowns plagued the Cats all night long. UK allowed South Carolina to knock down 44 percent of its shots for the game, the most by an opposing team in Rupp Arena this season.

"We did not do a good job with our man defense tonight," Pitino said. "We allowed a lot of penetration and dish-offs by their guards. They did by far the best job this year at handling our defense."

At the beginning of the second half, it looked like the Wildcats were set to blow out USC. In fact, when guard Jeff Sheppard slammed down an alley-oop at the 17:01 mark, one of Anthony Epps' career-high 12 assists, UK had its biggest lead of the game, 52-34.

But the Gamecocks managed to cut the UK lead to 11 on a Malik Russell three-pointer at the 10:23 mark. The Gamecocks would get no closer as UK called a time-out to kill the USC momentum.

Russell, who led the Gamecocks in scoring in the teams' first meeting, once again paced his team. Russell pitched in a game-high 22 points while collecting 10 rebounds, six on the offensive end. "Malik Russell was hell on the offensive glass," Pitino said. "He's playing a lot better than the last time we saw him."

The Wildcats seemed to come out flat in the first half, and UK's lackluster play allowed the Gamecocks to keep the game close. To make matters worse for UK, the Gamecocks scored the nets for 51 percent shooting and out-rebounded the Cats 16-9.

In fact, with just 3:05 left to play, South Carolina cut the Wildcat lead to 31-29 on a Melvin Watson basket. Watson was called for charging, but the basket counted.

Watson, a freshman guard, finished with 10 first-half points.

It took a Rhodes three-pointer with 3:6 to play in the half to cap a 9-3 run and give UK a 40-32 half-time lead.

UK's Andre Riddick, however, was one offensive bright spot for the Cats in the first stanza. The senior from Brooklyn, N.Y., had 8 first-half points. Riddick finished with 12 points for the game.

Football Cats nab 23 on first signing day

Curry says class is 'special group'

By Brian Bennett
Editor in Chief

In the best of situations, the aim of recruiting is to fill specific needs.

But in a situation like UK's, the coaching staff does not have that luxury.

"We need everything," Coach Bill Curry said.

What they'd gotten by yesterday, the first day of the national signing period, was 23 recruits — players who lack high-profile names and incredible size but do not lack quality, Curry said.

Of the 23, six are from in-state and eight are from Florida, a region where the UK staff has emphasized efforts. Despite last season's 1-10 record, Curry said recruiting was not as difficult as one might imagine.

"Today's players are attracted by the opportunity to play, and a lot of them want to play early," Curry said. "That is much more prevalent today than it was even five or six years ago. So that was a help."

Noticeably missing from the list of signees is extreme bulk. The three biggest Cat recruits each weigh in at around 260 pounds, small by Southeastern Conference standards.

"As always, it's difficult to find enough big guys," Curry said.

Topping the list of signees:

▼Harold Bell and Eddie Blakley, a pair of 6-4 defensive linemen from Los Angeles Southwest (Junior) College. That college has produced NFL linemen Chris Mims of the San Diego Chargers and Bernard Dafney of the Minnesota Vikings.

"Harold Bell is a big defensive lineman, and that would be a specific need that we obviously have," Curry said. "Eddie Blakley has tremendous quickness."

▼Another junior college transfer, 6-2, 225-pound linebacker DeJuan Pringle, Pringle injured his knee and was redshirted last season at San Bernardino Valley College, so he will have three years of eligibility at UK. He chose UK over Miami, Florida and Arizona State.

"Pringle is an outstanding athletic linebacker with a lot of range and agility," Curry said.

▼Felix Louwinski, a 5-11 receiver out of Southwest DeKalb High School in Decatur, Ga. A speedy back (he posted a 4.43 in the 40-yard dash), Louwinski returned eight kickoff returns for touchdowns in his high school career. He picked UK over Florida.

▼Quarterbacks Jeff Sneedegar and Greg Hergott.

Sneedegar, 6-2, 210 pounds, also played linebacker in leading Buckeye Trail High School to an 11-2 record last year. In doing so, he earned USA Today honorable mention All-America honors.

Sneedegar, a 6-4, 202-pounder from Ft. Mitchell, Ky., led Beechwood High School to four consecutive Class A state titles.

▼The biggest Cat signee, Jason Walker, a 6-5, 260-pound lineman from Woodville, Fla. He chose the Cats over Cincinnati, Tulane and Florida State.

"The Cats' last three signing classes have been highly touted by the recruiting 'experts,' but each has failed to produce significantly on the field. Perhaps for this reason, Curry was hesitant yesterday to evaluate the current crop before it has performed."

"We believe that these are good players," Curry said. "There are times when a class becomes a very highly ranked class and really doesn't deserve it, and then there are times when a class does not get a high ranking and ends up being a great class."

"I will say this about this class: This is a special group of young men who would make the commitment to turn down other offers and come here at this time."

Politics of race poisoning justice in Sullivan case

I am amazed at how quickly the public formed its opinion about Sgt. Phil Vogel, thanks to the media's support of the popular perception that the slaying of Antonio Sullivan was racially motivated.

As a result, Vogel will never be known for his service in Vietnam. He will not be remembered for his 22 years of service in the Lexington police force. And few will view him as the family man he was, nor will they give an ounce of regard for the fact that he not only condoned interracial relationships in his own family but was loved by many in the black community for the protection he gave them.

Instead he will be remembered as "that racist cop who shot Tony Sullivan."

Never mind that he has to live with the fact that through no will of his own he has taken a human life.

Never mind the jeers, dirty looks and death threats, or the sleepless nights spent asking the Almighty why this had to happen.

That's why regardless of the outcome of the grand jury proceedings or the public's response, I remain convinced that Vogel is an innocent man.

I agree that he should be discharged permanently from his duties as an officer, not as a punishment, but because a procedural error of that magnitude, even if completely accidental, can not even be left without consequence.

But that certainly doesn't make him a murderer.

I still remember the signs plastered on the exterior of the New Morning Coffeehouse, with such childish slogans as "civil disobedience," "political orgy" and, of course, "Vogel is a murderer."

Perhaps the purpose of these signs was to promote justice, but I believe real justice came when the signs disappeared and the coffee shop closed down.

What I don't understand is how so many are continually duped into racial closed-mindedness by those who claim to promote racial open-mindedness.

After all the work of the civil rights movement and the integrationist message of Dr. Martin Luther King, why weren't our own local media sources able to look beyond a white police officer shooting a black suspect? and see the irrelevance of race in the matter? Why didn't this community see it as it was — the tragic end to Tony Sullivan's life of crime?

Shouldn't crime, in fact, be the issue here, instead of race?

Instead of demanding that Vogel be drawn and quartered, civil rights leaders ought to be demanding harsher penalties for violent criminals and those who lead youth into crime.

Of course, a true liberal would complain that the inherent racism of society, which keeps blacks in the ghettos, is responsible for Sullivan's turn down the wrong path.

But I have to ask (as I've asked before and never gotten an answer) where in the world is all this oppression taking place? What have I, by working for some small amount of success, done to keep anyone down?

Perhaps it's the lack of pigmentation in my skin, and the fact that so many in higher positions have the same lack of pigmentation, that psychologically terrifies blacks to the point that they don't even dare trying to succeed.

Perhaps the "whiteness" of the education and business environment creates an air of hostility that prevents blacks from achieving all they can.

Newspapers and think-how ridiculous that is. In my own experience, a hostile environment motivates me to work harder. But maybe that's just me.

Japanese-Americans, for example, have been one of the most mistreated ethnic minorities in this country, but that didn't stop their success. Why wasn't there rioting in the streets when a Japanese-American youth was gunned down for trick-or-treating on the wrong doorstep? Or for that matter, when a Korean man was gunned down last week on a Tennessee highway for displaying a confederate flag in his truck's rear window?

Right now, I'm sure many smug pseudo-intellectuals of both black and white ilk, reading liberal persuasion are reading this and arrogantly shaking their heads thinking, "Felice, you just don't understand."

Well, if there's something to be understood about the logic behind creating the myth of the century, stirring people into a fatal frenzy, over it, and feigning intelligence and a sense of superiority over those who refuse to believe the theory, then I guess they're right. I just don't get it.

"SHE SAID that O.J. had slapped her, bit her with his fist and kicked her and pulled by the hair."

Detective John Edwards, testifying about what Nicole Brown Simpson told him after he responded to a 911 call from the Simpson home on New Year's Eve 1989. Edwards said O.J. Simpson claimed he only pushed his wife out of bed.

I also experienced the displeasure of watching Rush Limbaugh one afternoon, hoping for a good laugh. Rush proudly showed a clip of Gingrich denouncing the merits of affirmative action.

It happens to find this racist because an attempt to eradicate affirmative action constitutes an attempt to again set the clock back. Affirmative action serves as a safety measure so that blacks will not suffer discrimination in the work place.

Therefore, as long as racism exists in this country (and it does) affirmative action will continue to safeguard minority rights.

It's quite ominous in retrospect — no one paid much attention to Gingrich when he served as a congressman from Georgia. When he found himself secure and free from the threat of usurpation, he really began to voice his cure-all solutions for those poor military women who can't shoot guns because they menstruate or those demoralized blacks who depend on government policies for jobs.

Thinks, Newt, but I don't need your charity.

In addition to his proverbial assault on women and minorities, Gingrich's hidden agenda remains unnoticed as he hides behind the Contract with America. However, as the smoke clears from these initial days of policy-making, the time inevitably will arrive when novel legislation is proposed.

Consider the before mentioned statements made by Gingrich. Do we want a man like his heading the Republican party and holding so much power in Washington? I sure as hell don't and I challenge! Americans to truly consider the merits and abilities of this man.

The facts present a clear picture of what lies ahead and the prospects are indeed grim.

Our only hope resides with the people of Georgia. I hope the women of Georgia will band together for the next election and knock Newt off of his "mighty-thor" throne.

For a little perspective on the 1995 governor's race, let's flash back to last semester when students flooded the Patterson Office Tower square to protest tuition increase, marched on the Administration Building and then proceeded to block South Limestone Street for more than 30 minutes.

For those who saw that outpouring of emotion over the rising costs of higher education, it was just a taste of the power college students can bring into the debate over higher education. Although the increase still was passed by the Council on Higher Education, UK students still sent a message to the UK administration and to Frankfort that the campus cannot be ignored like it has in the past.

This November is another chance to put that power into action during the gubernatorial election. This is the chance to put someone in the governor's mansion who can care about what happens in higher education. We have seen what having a not-so-education-friendly governor can mean for state-funded universities. (See Wallace Wilkinson.)

Now let's imagine a scene with a governor who has a spine and can use it to back higher education. We need someone who can stand up to the legislature and fight for the future of the Commonwealth. That could mean more funding for the universities, which might mean keeping tuition costs at a minimum and allowing students the opportunity to get a college education. Then, maybe the state would see a return on its investment, instead of watching students leave for more profitable areas.

Who would want to stay in a state that places a low value on the education its citizens? UK, now's your chance. Most of the candidates seem willing to appear on campus and other campuses around the state to talk about their platforms.

When they come, question them about their views on money for higher education, student loans and other program designed to improve the climate of learning in the state.

Try to look for a common candidate to rally behind and talk to other students about supporting the candidate who finally can make quality education in the Commonwealth a reality.

Disgruntled few will not slow mission of SAB

To the editor:

"Empty vessels make the most noise."

This was always one of my favorite proverbs.

How appropriate a way to describe all the allegations, insults and castigation of the Student Activities Board.

It might be true that SAB does not have hordes of conservative speakers on its schedule of events, but what everyone must realize is that we do not program just to fulfill a quota.

This means that we do not bring a conservative, or for that matter any speaker, because we had intended to bring a certain number of these speakers in a year.

Quite the contrary. Every proposal brought to the board is scrutinized on an individual basis. Every board member considers the pros and cons of the proposal as well as how feasible it is.

The students interests are always at heart. Whether the proposal is approved or not is based solely on its own merit.

None of the board members have any prejudices against conservative speakers, and if bringing such a speaker is feasible enough, the board will not hesitate to approve it.

Some of the "empty vessels" have claimed that we are wasting student money on various events. It was in order not to do this that some of the conservative speakers were not brought to campus. The board felt that the monetary demands of these speakers were unreasonable and thus turned them down.

Other proposals brought before the Board had their own problems.

Furthermore, most people seem to have it engraved in their minds that SAB operates solely on student money.

This is not true. The money deducted from every student's fees covers only part of our operating budget. The rest comes from other sources. This is not to suggest unaccountability, but simply shows that we do not "dole out gobs of student dollars to artsy-types and lecturers" as has been claimed.

One unfortunate consequence of the flak we have been receiving is that our disputants have stooped low enough to make personal attacks. The SAB president, in particular, has been under heavy fire.

It is not up to one person on SAB to decide the fate of a proposal.

Only a majority vote by the board members can approve or disapprove a proposal.

Therefore, if any one is to take blame for anything, or indeed take credit for anything, it has to be the board as a whole.

Our board members are among the finest in their respective fields.

I am a witness to their hard work and dedication.

This brings us to the question of electing board members.

I shudder to this what would happen if this was done. SAB would fall into the hands of special interest groups, seeking individual fame and they would waste their time battling each other, rather than doing their jobs.

It is easy to make promises during an election, but it is not always that easy to deliver them.

We at SAB are determined to provide the same excellence of service to UK students no matter what people say about us.

Our record speaks for itself.

All this commotion by a few disgruntled individuals will not hurt us in any way because we have had such a good response from the student body concerning the activities we have sponsored.

I only hope that people are now more enlightened on our work.

Our committees are open to any student, and we hope that more students will join them.

To the students I want to say this, "Sit back and enjoy the events we have in store for you. It is truly only the empty vessels that make the most noise."

Vinit Kuttly
SAB secretary/treasurer

Public should keep eye on GOP's agenda

The world often seems submerged by threatening oceans of injustice that virtually swallow those groups of people not blessed by excessive affluence or political power.

History provides many tales of injustice involving the oppression of women, blacks, Jews and homosexuals. However, as time progresses and political ideologies evolve, new beliefs and practices replace the old and hopefully foster equality among people regardless of their differences.

Unfortunately, some people seem to lag behind in this respect.

From the masses of American citizens a new leader has emerged who literally sends some people into fits of both laughter and rage. I can't seem to find the humor, though.

This person is short-sighted, stubborn, tunnel-visioned, sexist and perhaps racist. I suppose you may have guessed from the descriptive list of traits that I am referring to Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich.

Whether I watch the news or read a paper, Gingrich seems to pop up everywhere like a die hard jack-in-the-box. Some of the first steps he wishes to take during the initial 100 days of the new Congress involve the policies outlined in the Republicans' Contract with America.

While a few of the proposals have gained partial support from the President and other Democrats, it's the more subtle agenda of which people should remain suspicious.

I've followed Gingrich over the past few months to obtain a flavor of the kind of social and political beliefs he holds and actually boasts. Some of the most observably striking traits of Gingrich are his blatantly sexist attitudes. Gingrich asserted in a speech to a college in Georgia that women shouldn't be allowed to serve in the military because of their biology. (He says this with a straight face, by the way.)

The key word here is "allowed." He presupposes that the people in power with the right to make such a decision are men and that they shouldn't "permit" women to serve. Some feminist philosophers define the existence of oppression and sexism by outwardly discriminatory acts based solely on the fact that women are born with a different anatomy than men. Because women differ in this manner, they are marked by people like Gingrich as incapable, inferior or unworthy of the same rights men enjoy.

By making this statement, Gingrich displays his sexism while consciously attempting to dissolve women's rights to serve their country.

What is wrong with America? We should be outraged that this man attempts to set the clock back, regress and cancel all of the struggles that our mothers and grandmothers fought for.

A clarion alarm should sound in the ears of everyone, not just women, who listen to Gingrich speak. Although his arguments seem almost ludicrous to the average, everyday realist, he cannot be taken lightly, especially with regard to women's issues.
