ary science department, and in that year uniforms of the standard type used in professional bands were purchased and worn with the addition of a blue and white cape, the same uniform that is worn at present. However, next fall, the band will be outfitted in new uniforms that will be snappier in appearance, and the old uniforms will be discarded.

The Kentucky band was given the rating of "The Best Band in Dixie" in 1925, when, at Atlanta, Georgia, it was the center of attraction at a football game being played there. The story of the game published in the Atlanta Journal the next morning centered around the performance of the Kentucky band, and it was this paper that created the new title. Since that time other institutions in the South have done considerable work on their bands, but the Wildcat musicians still carry the rating given them nine years ago. The Atlanta trip is representative of the trips taken by the band, the latest long trips being to Washington, D. C. in 1931 and Birmingham, Alabama, in 1933.

In 1928, Lambert in the music department became such that Professor Dupres was forced to give up the band work and Elmer G. Sulzer was made director. He directed the band through the height of its growth until 1933 when he resigned. At that time, John Lewis Jr. was employed as director and in his one year of service the band has shown splendid results. Mr. Lewis, a graduate of Kentucky Wesleyan college, has been outstanding in Kentucky as a musician and as a director.

Each year there are a number of scholarships given to high school graduates who have distinguished themselves as musicians in high school and have shown themselves to have outstanding ability as players. These scholarships are given to persons who play orchestra instruments as well as band instruments.

Each year the band plays a series of twilight concerts, performs at football and basketball games and goes to the Mountain Laurel Festival held each May at Pineville. At present there is a plan being considered for the band to make an extended concert tour of Kentucky cities next year.

Other musical organizations at the University are an orchestra of symphonic proportions directed by Professor Lambert, and five clubs for both men and women students. A four year course in music is offered leading to the degree of bachelor of science in music.

Typing Room Aftermath
Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their fraternity and figure out something goofy to enter in the May Day parade!

Claiming 500,000 members for his organization throughout the country, Gaetano Asome, who described himself as field commander, admitted that he was engaged in fascist activities and that his group was called U. S. of American Union of Fascists. Asome said there were headquarters in several states. The field commander served in the Italian army during the war and was an active fascist in Italy before coming to the U. S.

At Washington college the co-eds, after a stiff fight, were granted permission to smoke in classes. When several came to a class the next day smoking corn-cob pipes, the professor maintained his composure, and ordered that all windows be kept closed. In a short time the dear girls began to excuse themselves rather informally.

Raynham Townshend Jr., Yale '34, platoon commander of the Honor Battalion of Yale, received the honor of an inscription on the battalion silver cup for excellence of performance during the academic year. Mr. Townshend is goal guardian of the Yale hockey team and former Yale half-back.

Memorial to Patterson Is Being Constructed

By DAVID SALVERS
"In Memoriam, James Kennedy Patterson, first president of the University, 1899-1910."
In the quadrangle which lies in the center of the main older buildings which James Kennedy Patterson loved and was responsible for, and which constituted "his university," the $20,000 James Kennedy Patterson Memorial bearing the above inscription will be placed, a fitting tribute to the man without whom our University would not be in existence today.
The cast for the statue which will be placed in the center of the memorial has been brought here by a committee of which Alexander Boussyman of Knoxville, former President of the University, is chairman. It is the work of the famous sculptor Augustus Lukermann of New York, and if approved will be cast in bronze.
Excavation on the site of the memorial has already begun. It will occupy a plot about 100 by 25 feet in the south end of the quadrangle. A replica of the completed memorial is now on display in President McVeigh's office. It will consist of a rectangular court of brown tiling and white marble, surrounded by hedges and furnished with concrete benches at each end. In the center rear will be the bronze statue of President Patterson seated in a chair mounted upon a pedestal. The entire space around it will be beautified with shrubbery and benches.
Funds for construction of the memorial have been collected entirely from contributions of private citizens, some of them graduates and former students of the University. The will of James Kennedy Patterson provided for $1,000 to be used in starting a memorial and Walter Patterson, his brother, who died two years ago, provided $5,000 for the same purpose, thus giving the fund a $6,000 start. This fund has been enlarged to its present size by private sums.

James Kennedy Patterson led an interesting and dramatic life. Born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1833, he came to America soon after with his family. He attended Hanover college in Indiana, where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree. In 1875, he received his doctor's degree from that same institution, and in 1886 was awarded an L.L.D. at LaFayette college in Pennsylvania. After teaching in several other states, he came to Lexington in 1861, as principal of Transylvania High school. A few years later he became professor of Latin and Civil History at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky, and in 1869 became its president.
It was at this time that his heroic fight for state-supported higher education in Kentucky began. In 1880, he obtained from the legislature of Kentucky a one-half cent tax on each $100 of taxable property in the state for maintenance of the State University. For two years he fought for the tax when it was assailed by denominational schools. He appeared before the legislature and before appellate courts and finally won his fight. Through his influence and assistance the institution succeeded in obtaining additional endowment from Congress in 1890 and also in 1907, and from the state legislature in 1900, 1904, and 1908.
Thus it was that James Kennedy Patterson was almost entirely responsible for Kentucky State University, which in 1914 was changed to the University of Kentucky as it stands today. Surely the greatest memorial is none too good for such a man.

Watch out for the signs of jangled nerves

You've noticed other people's nervous habits—and wondered probably why such people didn't learn to control themselves.
But have you ever stopped to think that you, too, may have habits just as irritating to other people as those of the key juggler or coin jinger are to you?
And more important than that, those habits are a sign of jangled nerves. And jangled nerves are the signal to stop and check up on yourself.
Get enough sleep—fresh air—recreation—and watch your smoking. Remember, you can smoke as many Camels as you want. Their costlier tobaccos never jangle the nerves.

It does not promote leadership; it conforms to one's age. Leadership is not to those who rise above their age.

The highest living is in response to ideals first in the heart. The one who is in response to these ideals is inspired by a force within.

Walter Lippmann, in the conclusion to his "Preface to Morals," presents "the religion of the spirit" as the highest type of living, and by the religion of the spirit he meant devotion to the highest impulses of one's own being.

The standard dictionary defines morality as "conformity, or degree of conformity, to conventional rules, without or apart from inspiration and guidance by religious or other spiritual influences."

Writer Discloses Unique Facts on Past Derby Days

By HOWARD L. CLEVELAND
"Did you ever see a horse walking? Well, I did; Did you ever see a horse balking? Well, I did; Did you ever have a horse kill you, with 'Will he run last?' Well, he did; And the horse that was walking, and the horse that was balking, and the ticket in my fist won't cash."

We know that you are going to sink your molars through half an inch of cigar butt when we ask you this question, but please go easy on the household furniture and try to refrain from any serious destruction. Now, do you know how to pronounce the word "Derby" correctly? ("To which we can hear you reply: "So you're going to start that again, eh?") No, we're not asking for your pronunciation; as far as we are concerned you can call this turf classic of the year "Durbee," but we have got to arouse your interest some way and the question of the correct pronunciation never has failed to start an argument.

Now that we've started this thing, if you'll string along we'll try to tell you something that you don't know, and have forgotten, want to know, et cetera.

Fifty-nine times this great classic has thrilled thousands. They run 'em rain or shine. They have sloped around that Churchill Downs oval when it was raining so hard it was impossible to see the horses from the grandstand. They have sped around the mile and a quarter distance when the track was lightning fast—the time of less than two seconds over two minutes. Close to 50,000 persons witness this test of strength and stamina in horse flesh. The rich and the poor mingle together ("mingle" is the polite term). Kentucky Derby is not limited to Kentucky. It is known the world over.

Do you know any thing about the past Derbies? Do you know what a filly is? Well, a little nag named Regret once came romping home to greet the judges. Regret was the only filly ever to win the Kentucky Derby. And if anyone asks you who Regret was (meaning parents, you ninnys) you can nonchalantly reply that Regret wasn't by anybody's horse when that race was run; you see this was one horse who broke a length on top and showed 'em a clean pair of heels from start to finish.

The longest priced winner of any Derby was Democrat who paid off $1 to 1. That was before college boys had learned to climb the fence. But what the pari-mutuels say are not interest people as much as the Derby, the great race itself.

The majority of these 50,000 people would see the Kentucky Derby if they didn't have a cent to place on an entry. The tremendous enthusiasm manifest over this classic is surprising. They tense up and yell if they are only judging by the silks the jockeys are wearing.

Above all don't let anyone try to tell you what horse will win. This is one race where each and every owner is trying for the $30,000 added. Just pick the one you like— if it's for no other reason than the fact that you know the jockey's girlfriend's aunt Minnie—and pull like blue blazes!

It usually is customary for a columnist to blow off with his suggestions as to the winner of this great contest of horse flesh. We always put ours at the bottom of the story because if part of it has to be cut off when it goes to press, we can say that we gave everyone the winner, but that we got "done wrong by the press room." This year we are sticking with the Bluegrass—in fact we like a filly. So here she goes: To win, Bazaar; to place, Calvacade; and to show, Sir Thomas. Now don't come storming around The Kernel office about us being all wrong about this thing; everyone to their own opinion, because that's what makes racing.

Now that we've started this thing, if you'll string along we'll try to tell you something that you don't know, and have forgotten, want to know, et cetera.

U. K.-Ohio State Basketball Game Filled Men's Gym

Sure, we all remember the night that Ohio State's basketball team, favorites in the Big Ten, were to meet Kentucky's five, favorites in the Southeastern conference, in Lexington. And that match brought the largest crowd that ever jammed into the Alumni gymnasium to witness a basketball game. They consumed every aisle, completely filling the space at the ends of the court, and still continued to pour in. As the game started, a mad rush was made on the door and gatesmen were pushed aside as the mob surged into the already crowded gym. Ohio State's larger team was superior to the Kentucky outfit and took home a 46 to 30 victory, but the game showed the possibilities of basketball as a money making sport.

KENTUCKY'S PRIDE AND JOY

That was Kentucky's largest basketball crowd, but to pick the most thrilling home game ever played at Kentucky we have to go back several years. It was in 1928 in a game against Miami university from Ohio. For several years this game was one of the most interesting on the Wildcat schedule and this year was no exception.

The game was tied at the end of the regular playing period and an extra period was necessary. The teams fought desperately and at the end of the extra session each had scored two points. In the second overtime period neither team had any luck and a third one was started. The crowd had gone wild by this time and about the middle of the period Miami scored on a free throw. Time sped by for Kentucky fans and dragged for the Miami routers as the one point margin remained good. With less than a minute to play Captain Jenkins of Kentucky took the ball from a Miami "freeze" and shot from the center of the floor. The crowd held its breath as the ball sailed through the air and passed into the basket without touching the rim. It was over, the Kentucky boys held their slight margin for the remaining seconds of the game and the 1934 tie should be given this honor. This game marked the longest ever played by a Kentucky team.

To try to pick the most outstanding team ever produced by Kentucky would bring about considerable argument, but all fans probably will maintain that either the 1933 or the 1934 tie should be given this honor. In most respects the 1933 team has the edge. It is true that they lost three games during the regular season while this year's five went undefeated until the tournament but the fact that the '33 team played 19 games instead of 15, that the schedule was a more difficult one with losses to Ohio State and Creighton, which were not included on this year's card, and the fact that they were able to win the conference tournament while this year's team was eliminated in their first game by Florida must be taken into consideration.

The selection of any man as the outstanding individual player would cause such an argument that we should not attempt it, but certainly it is easy to name a group of persons who have undoubtedly been exceptional basketball men. "Aggie" Sale is the only All-American player produced by Kentucky. He received this honor two years in succession in 1932 and '33. Kentucky has had several all-southern players with the outstanding honor coming last year when every man on Kentucky's five made this team. These were DeMosey, Davis (both of whom repeated this year), Sale, Johnson, and Darby. Some of those who have been given this honor in the past are: Paul McBrayer; '29; Sale, Louis McGinnis and Carey Spicer, '31. To this list should be added the names of Andy Anderson and Dave Lawrence who have proved able reinforcements of the 1934 team and who probably will make all-southern next year.

Coch Rupp, who came to the University for the 1930-31 season, has proven himself to be a successful coach. In his first year he sent a team through the regular season with only two defeats and to the tournament to be beaten in the finals by Maryland, 27 to 25. The 1931-32 season would have been a perfect one except for a loss to Vanderbilt by a one-point margin in the final contest of the season. This team was eliminated in the second round of the tournament by North Carolina by a 43-42 count.

The 1933 season found the Wildcats losing three games during the playing season but taking the Atlanta tournament by four decisive scores defeating Mississippi State in the finals. Last year's team set the best record for the playing season of Rupp's four years, winning 16 straight games, only to lose an off day and lose in their first tournament game against Florida, 38 to 32. Wildcat teams under Coach Adolph Rupp have an offensive average of 43 points per game and a defensive mark of 26 points.

Youngest Sport On U. K. Campus Is Scottish Game

A survey of the athletic history of the University of Kentucky indicates that the youngest sport on the campus is golf, founded in the spring of 1890 by Couch J. C. Jones. At that time, it was extremely difficult to organize a winning team, but through ready cooperation from the team's coach and the players, it has been possible to place forward a winning team.

When a golf team was first put into effect at the University, it was rather difficult to eliminate the good from the bad; however, a team was selected carefully from the best material. The first golf written were Kenneth Larnee, Captain William Lusky, John Buskie, and William Maxson.

The team, in 1931, gained rapidly in skill, and presented a strong combination at the Southern Conference; however, they did not succeed in coping the championship. Kenneth Larnee again was elected as the captain of the team, the remainder of the members of the team being as follows: John Buskie, William Lusky, William Meredith, Hogan Watson, and C. C. Jones, coach. The games that year were with Dayton university, at Dayton, Ohio; Ohio State university, at Columbus; the University of Georgia, at Athens; Dayton university, here; Indiana university, at Bloomington, and a return game with Indiana, here; and the Southern Conference meet, at Athens, Georgia. The conference lasted four days, after which they arrived in Lexington after playing two hard fought battles on their way home with Dayton university and Ohio State university.

At these two schools, they ran into stiff opposition and were beaten badly. Hogan Watson was the only one of the Kentucky men to qualify, but he was defeated by the Schultz of Tulane university. The Southern Conference championship was awarded that year to Vanderbilt, and Tulane was the runner-up.

In 1932, a team was organized from the following: Freddie Hardwick, Bob Hickey, Willard Meredith, and Evan Settle. The games played that year were with Ohio State here, Dayton university at Dayton, Cincinnati here, and a return game with Cincinnati at Cincinnati. Games were lost to Ohio State, by the score of 17 to 1, Bob Hickey being the only one to score for Kentucky's team. When the Cincy team played Kentucky's team at Lexington the Wildcats team pulled through, by winning, 11 to 7, at the Lexington Country club. But on the return game with Cincy at Cincinnati's Ridgewood Country club, the Wildcats were beaten by a close score of 9 to 8. The stars of the two games with Cincy were Bob Hickey, with a 78; Freddie Hardwick, also with a 78; Evan Settle, an 83; and Willard Meredith, following with an 83. On competing in the foursomes, Hickey and Hardwick came through successfully, making a low-hand score of 69, but Meredith and Settle lost their foursome match.

The 1933 team followed right along John Davis Haggard, Freddie Hardwick, Willard Meredith, Jack Steele, Evan Settle, and J. C. Jones as coach of the team. Games were scheduled with many teams outside the state and with nearby schools, but no record or statistics have been kept of those records.

The 1934 team is composed of John H. Eversole, John Davis Haggard, Jack Steele, and Evan Settle, and the coach for this year's team is Prof. C. A. Lamper, of the music department.

M. A. EXAMS TO BE GIVEN

This and That Concerning Our Commerce Dept.

By JAMES L. BERSOT
The youngest college on the University campus concerns itself with the study of one of the oldest and most important industries in the world. This reference is made about the College of Commerce located in White Hall.

The College of Commerce was established in the fall of 1923 under the supervision of Dean Edward West. Professor West came to the University in 1918 as the head of the economics and sociology department. With the establishment of the new Commerce college he became its first dean.

The first enrollment was 187. During its nine years of existence the enrollment has increased steadily to the present number, 340. The period of depression which has caused a decline in enrollment in other colleges has witnessed an even steeper rate of increase in the College of Commerce.

The passing period has brought to us the need of a college education with some depth; an education that has both technical value and cultural value. Commerce has solved the answer to this question for many students.

One of the unique features of the college is its Student Maintained Employment association. At the plea of a group of students about three years ago, Lloyd Averett took charge of the employment work as graduate secretary of the Senior Commerce Employment association. Mr. Averett has worked hard and creditably in this capacity. Last year 95 per cent of the graduates had permanent jobs at the end of school.

Mr. Averett, who is an instructor of business organization, having the quick acting mind of an entrepreneur, is the originator of the entire idea. He has, at present, conceived the idea of incorporating the association to make it permanent. The board of directors and officers already have been elected. The work of the agency is to get out the annual booklet entitled "Bargains in Brains" containing the picture, activities, qualifications, and type of work desired. Then the organization assists in making contacts and placing the students.

Another outstanding campus figure of the Commerce college is the ever alert and debonair, Prof. R. D. McIntyre, expert in marketing, salesmanship, and advertising. Before coming here Professor McIntyre was prominent in the merchandising department of a prominent Chicago mail-order concern.

Another form of service offered is the Bureau of Business Research, which is always glad to give the public its services. It has assisted in the state tax programs. Its most recent work was in connection with the T.V.A. project.

All these features, an offer of a concrete education, and hard working faculty of high intellectual standards serve to make this College of Commerce one of the South's outstanding and most interesting fields for cultural and business training.

Buildings, Grounds Dept. Functions Are Numerous

By JOHN D. BARNELL

The functions of the Department of Buildings and Grounds are as important as those of any other department of the University. This department not only keeps the buildings in repair, the plumbing in proper condition, and the furnaces stoked, but tries to make the physical appearance of the campus as beautiful as possible for the benefit of the students, by putting forth every effort to keep the shrubs, gardens, and trees well cultivated. In a number of colleges and universities throughout the nation, even in some schools larger than the University of Kentucky, there is no well-established department to care for the campus. Consequently, there may be one professor of engineering who takes care of the furnaces, another to care for the plumbing, and another professor to superintend the grounds. The work is not, and cannot be done satisfactorily by this method.

The University of Kentucky, with seven colleges, has realized the importance of this fact and has made this department possible.

This department is in charge of all extra-curricular activities which are brought on the campus. All of the labor for the arranging of stages and lighting is furnished by the employees.

During High School week, this spring, a member of an eastern Kentucky band lost his helmet. Through the promptness and cooperation of the employees of the department, the hat was at once located and mailed to its owner.

One of the greatest results of the department is the establishment of the four University gardens: the Botanical garden, the Darrill W. Hart Dahlia garden, which was given to the University by Mr. Hart, the Art Center garden, and the rock garden to the south of Mechanical hall, which is proposed to be made into a memorial to the late Dean F. Paul Anderson of the College of Engineering, under whose leadership the garden was begun.

About six years ago the first gardens were founded, through the gifts of friends of the University. Landscape architects from central Kentucky aided in the garden planning. As flowers are given to the University they are added to these gardens, and it is hoped to have, in the near future, a tree and flower of every species that is native to Kentucky.

These gardens, which are taken care of by the Department of Buildings and Grounds, not only add to the beauty of the campus, but are used as outdoor laboratories for students of biology and botany.

The Department of Buildings and Grounds was organized in 1918, shortly after Dr. Frank McVey became president of the University. A. C. Whipple was the new department's first head.

Maurice J. Crutcher was appointed superintendent of the department in 1925, and has since served in that capacity. He was graduated from the College of Engineering in 1917, having served as a member of both the football and track teams, and as captain of the football team of 1916. He is a member of Sigma Nu social fraternity. After his graduation he was employed by the Ford Motor company, and by other engineering firms. He served in the Field Artillery in the World War, and has returned to the campus to serve his Alma Mater. Through his keen interest and his love for the University, Mr. Crutcher has done a worthy service to the students of the University.

In order to give to the students every possible service, the department employs about 75 persons, 12 of whom are University students who work their way through college by acting as janitors, furnace tenders, and gardeners.

A large number of people do not know, or are indifferent, to the functions of the Department of Buildings and Grounds, and do not appreciate the service which is being rendered.

Authority Gives Etiquette Lesson No. 123456789

By WALTER GIRDLER

This time of year the imbecilian mind wanders to the navigation of the deep blue (this doesn't mean blue alky, Oscar) and it is quite appropriate that we write upon this subject.

If you happen to be invited on a yachting (pronounced yatching) party be sure to go with these instructions well in mind. The proper thing to wear, of course, is overalls over your last year's bathing suit, because these affairs always require old clothes.

Upon reaching the pier wait until the host is well seated in the shore boat and then show the crowd your knowledge of boating by a long jump into the boat, thereby upsetting it and determining whether or not your host can swim, which he or she undoubtedly can if the water is deep. Swim swiftly to the bank by getting a good push on each of the swimmers if your host can't swim stop to give him a ducking, then stand on the shore and laugh at the others' predicament to show what an old devil you can be if you want to.

If you make the yatch (watch your pronunciation of this word; it should be pronounced "atch" with Y on the front) be sure to shuffle over the varnished deck with your hard soled shoes because the owner will have to get the thing refinished anyway and you can help him decide when. Remark about the apparent unseaworthiness of the boat and put on a life saver and refuse to take it off so that everybody will see how cautious you are.

Ask the host if there is sufficient food aboard to make the trip and if no reply is given immediately, then go and see for yourself, and if the larder is not to your taste tell the host about it so that the right things will be added next time.

If you feel sick when out on the open water, go immediately to the windward rail (ask the captain; he knows which one that is) and promptly empty. If you can't make the rail grab a pail marked fire (they just mark them that way to avoid confusion) and do business.

If you happen to catch one of those two-ton mammas near the rail, give her a shove (playfully) toward the outside and laugh as she howls and about the color water and tell the crowd that's the way it is done at home.

If the yatch has engine trouble, go below and ask the mechanic at work just what is wrong (this will be a help to the host) and all about every part he removes. He'll get perturbed with you but keep it up because it will speed the work, and when the engine is fixed claim all the credit for the job because you really did help to do most of it.

To put your own finishing touch on the trip, gain possession of the steering wheel and beach the boat at the point nearest to your home, thereby saving your driver the trouble of calling for you. Tell the host that you didn't like the trip, while his boat pounds apart on the rocks, because it didn't rain and you were expecting rain.

Following these instructions should put you in great demand as a yatching (I caution you about the pronunciation for the last time, guest.

DOROTHY CURTIS

Miss Dorothy Curtis, Maysville, sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, member of Kappa Kappa Gamma social sorority, was elected sponsor of Company B for 1934 by sophomore and advanced military men. She was sponsor for the Pershing Rifle unit last year, and enacted the role of Ming Feng in the recent Stroller production, "Hit the Deck."

Strange Interlude

The latest crack from the movies seems to be an outgrowth of the depression (long since passed). You know how it is; the rich are suddenly poverty stricken, and themselves in a hole, and have to start sneaking valuables out of the mansion. Then—"Came the Pawn."

Intramural

By CHARLES DUNN
This week brought a hull in intramural activities, especially in diamond ball. Competition in the four branches of sport moved slowly in comparison with last week's play.
There were no games scheduled in diamond ball until Thursday, which of course was too late for this edition. However, one game which was rained out last week was played. In this contest the ATO sluggers locked horns with the SAE team and came out on the long end of a 19 to 13 score. The game began as anticipated and for the first two innings there was little scoring. However, in the last half of the second, the ATOs slammed the ball for six runs. With one out, Fish drove one down the left field line which eluded the fielder and went for a home run. Yamanan, next up, duplicated this feat, hitting a ball almost identical to Fish's. Hutchinson, SAE pitcher, then blew up and before he could retire the side, six runs had crossed the plate. Harvey, ATO ace hurler, apparently under wraps and despite frequent wildness was steady in the pinches. Bryant, due to his hitting, and Garling, because of his work around the initial sack, stood out for the losers.

The third round bracket of tennis has finally been filled and play for the quarter finals is in the offing. Crowden, by virtue of his straight set over Smith, is the sole occupant of the quarter finals. In doubles, two teams have reached the semifinals. These are Heath and Vannaman, and Crowden and Brooks. Boland, Sigma Chi, has out-distanced all other divot diggers and has reached the semi-finals of golf with a win over Pall. Quarter finalists are Hund, Kirk, Jackson, and West. Boland and Bush, because of their win over Blythe and Byrnes, have reached the semi-finals in the two ball foursome.

The play in horsehoes has drawn the greatest number of contestants this week. In doubles, Coffman and Endicott defeated Hanna and Howard; Nichols and Mansfield defeated Angelucci and Murphy; and Irvine and Woods defeated Galtskill and Jackson. In singles, Nichols defeated Gotshall, Martin defeated Coffman, Franz defeated Wellburn, and Ward defeated Butler.

U-HI TO PRESENT 'DULCY'

Luckies use the mildest tobaccos—for Luckies use only the clean center leaves—and these are the mildest leaves. They taste better. Then science plays its part in making these choice tobaccos truly kind to your throat. "It's toasted"—for throat protection. These mild, fine-tasting tobaccos are cut into long, silky, full-bodied shreds and fully packed into every Lucky—so round, so firm, free from loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out, an important point to every smoker. You see, always in all-ways—Luckies are kind to your throat.
