ways the very young who are "wild" but some are those who feel the shackles of age closing about them.

Persons who point with apprehension to the youth of today as those most likely to be demoralized by legal use of liquor are, to use a trite expression, "barking up the wrong tree." Modern young people have seen the world shaken by two catastrophes—the World War and the world-wide depression. They are beginning to see with clear eyes. They suspect that the condition of the world is the result of blunders committed by their elders. The fallacy of the idea that only age and wisdom go hand in hand has been revealed to them.

Young men and women know now that the fate of civilization rests with youth as youth, not as the men and women they will be when they grow older. With casual observation, they see that their contemporaries are shouldering the burdens so long carried by their elders and are attempting to work out solutions left to them as heritage.

Consciousness that the affairs of the world are in a perplexing condition has sobered the thinking youth of today. They have become "old young" men in that they realize as they are, through the rosette glow of sentimental idealism.

Considering the fact that the imbibing of intoxicating liquors has not been decreased by prohibition, it is unlikely that repeal will lead to less drinking. However, if it does say undesirable effects at all youth will not be responsible.

THE UNIVERSITY BULLETIN

The first issue of the Bulletin, official publication of the University of Kentucky, was published in 1918. The Bulletin, which is published every Friday, includes brief announcements of meetings which will be held, and events that have been scheduled to take place on the University campus. Mimeographed copies of the University Bulletin are sent each week to the offices of the faculty members of the University; to local newspapers; out of town newspapers; school papers, and to The Kentucky Kernel.

The announcements appearing in the Bulletin are all authentic, coming directly from the various offices and departments of the University. Announcements should be sent to the bulletiners, Mary Chick, Jane M. Hamilton and Virginia Bosworth in care of the Journalism department.

"DADDY"

Death again stalked across the campus Saturday night, claiming "Daddy" Newman, professor of civil engineering in the College of Engineering. Professor Newman passed away after an illness of several weeks, during which time he gamely fought for life.

Being actively connected with the civil engineering department of the College of Engineering, "Daddy" was widely known among the student body for his personality, kindness and foresight. He was a personal friend to those students who sought his advice and counsel on diverse problems. He will join his friend, "Jack" Dickler on the road to the eternal life.

The Kernel extends the sympathy of the student body to Professor Newman's family. We will miss him, too.

SOBER YOUTH

Present indications point to the ultimate discarding of the Eighteenth Amendment. It is likely that by the end of November the three states needed to insure repeal will have voted in favor of it. Die-hardists who are bitterly opposed to any retreat from strict prohibitionism have made constant use of the stock argument that it will result in more "wildness" in the ranks of "flaming youth."

The fixed idea of some older people that all young people are headed for perdition is as old as history. Our primitive ancestor, the cave man, probably viewed the antics of his off-spring with alarm and apprehension. In his dull mind, the time-worn phrase, "What is the younger generation coming to?" or an equivalent question must have originated. This is the history of the past, from antiquity to our own times, reflects that pessimism concerning the fate of youth.

Surely no college course should be complete which turns its students loose with no practical knowledge of how to assist in running their country.

"THE BEST BAND IN DIXIE"

Many have been the compliments which have been heaped upon the band and glee club since Saturday for their excellence in executing the formations at the Duke game.

We believe that the majority of students and townspeople realize and appreciate the long hours of work necessary for the successful performing of these maneuvers. We also feel that the people in the stands should be complimented on the rapt attention with which they receive the changes of the club at the half. It would have been nothing short of a tragedy if the fans had appeared oblivious of this organization's first appearance at a football game. This group certainly should be encouraged to appear in company with the band at future games.

The band is somewhat smaller this year, and with a large per cent of first year men it has been necessary to put in more than the usual number of hours for the perfection of the formations. The group meets three times a week. The first hour is spent in rehearsing the music to be used, and the second hour (quite often extended to an hour and a half) is devoted to drill.

Moreover, the band has had a change of regime this fall, which newness caused some difficulty at first in spite of all attempts to prohibit this. Lieutenant Criswell and his staff have control of the organization during the drill period. The lieutenant was determined not to utilize any formations that had already been worked out in the past, and so doubtless spent some sleepless nights figuring out ways and means of forming the band on the field. Many times changes had to be made when the drill period was over, and thus it became necessary for more time to be expended. But in the end it appears that things have worked out to the best advantage.

Some years ago the band acquired a reputation, that of being the "best band in Dixie" and has since been striving to maintain. Nevertheless, we believe that it has maintained it and that it will continue to do so in the future.

CAN YOU KNIT?

The most recent fad to appear on the campus is knitting. Enter nearly any lecture room and you will find four out of five of the co-eds displaying their needles for dear life. They say nearly any, because a few of the professors have had the courage to refuse to compete with the clicking of the needles—and have demanded that the knitting be given up, rather than the lecture.

This knitting, if hung upon a line, would resemble a very modern rainbow. New and lovely shades are being offered, and one need not knit just a "red sweater" or a "blue sweater"—the obvious things that knitters have been making for years—but may choose different, subtle shades, such as taupe, bottle green, and rust.

However, we are not trying to increase the ranks of the knitters, but rather to point out that from the most trivial sort of thing, valuable lessons may be learned. Do not impudently cease reading because you think you will sooner or later run across a moral, because we mean to introduce it very gently and take you unaware.

When one is knitting, it is quite common to discover that three or four rows behind one has made a mistake, either dropped a stitch or tangled up several threads. Sometimes it is so far behind that one is tempted to overlook it and go on. Perhaps the garment will be completed without further mistakes, and it is very properly taken off and admired. However, the more perfect the garment is otherwise, the more glaring the fault is. An otherwise perfect piece of work is ruined or marred because someone was too careless or lazy to take out their mistake.

So it is with life. We go along with our eyes on the future, and then we find that we have made a mistake. Perhaps we have adopted the wrong attitude towards something, or maybe we have jumped to a conclusion and later found out that we were wrong. Many of us are too lazy or careless to try to undo what we have taken. We let it slide along, until finally we find that we have gone too far to correct it—for the farther we go in both knitting and life, the more difficult it is to undo what we have done. Perhaps it would have been quite simple at the time it was done or soon after-

conducted by JANE ANN MATTHEWS

Conscious of the tendency of students in their enthusiasm for literary reading to pass over many good books of recent but not "latest" publication, I am presenting in this column a review of "Count Luckner" by Lowell Thomas. This book, besides finding favor with grown-ups, is especially interesting for young people. If you have read the book read the review, it will be fun to recall the story. If you haven't read the book read the review, you might like to read the book. "Count Luckner" is in circulation at the University library.

SUNSET

I'm watching the sun set and deep in my heart I'm feeling the longing that can not depart. Until I find somewhere the words to reveal All the joy and the courage, and then they will leave me. I must pour those words into heart, into mind I try not to mention those eyes and those souls now are blind. I'll paint such a picture, so they too will know. Rays of hope from those colors, no artist can show. Their eyes will be opened, and then they will see. How near is the woman or man they would be. Dear God, I am praying, I'm asking you For words to express it so they'll know, somehow. Oh God, let me tell them before I shall die. Of the message you send, when the sun leaves the sky. —VIRGINIA ROBINSON.

Count Luckner: "The Sea Devil" by Lowell Thomas.

(Reviewed by Jane Winslow) In an account thrilling as any old tale of privateering days, Lowell Thomas recaptures the glamour and romance of the sea in his stirring biography of Count Luckner, better known as the Sea Devil. His daring, his never to be forgotten cunning, his grim determination to succeed in breaking the English blockade, his gallant sea-faring ways make this book excellent entertainment.

Wafted on a sea foam of adventure, the reader is taken to that thrilling episode of the World War in 1916 when Great Britain sought to bar Germany's path to the sea with a fleet in the Channel, the North Sea, and the Atlantic. Then it is that the rollicking adventures of the Sea Devil, better known as the Sea Devil, his daring, his never to be forgotten cunning, his grim determination to succeed in breaking the English blockade, his gallant sea-faring ways make this book excellent entertainment.

What is there about me now, my dear, that makes you think I am a fool? Close and bar doors about you when I enter? Has my coming suddenly brought a smile to your lips? Have I somehow trespassed upon your silent halls? Your lips still smile, but your eyes are dark; Your hand still stretches forth in greeting, but your voice seems oddly faltering, strained.

Students Converse on Steps

Eds and Co-eds Discuss Week-end Experiences Monday Morning Between Classes

By STARR MENDEL The feeling is intense! The sweat stands on many a brow! Someone has just told a seemingly unbeatable yarn!

Anguished foreheads are furrowed as a dozen acute minds, keyed to the highest point, struggle vainly with the mighty task of bringing forth a bigger and better story. The tension is almost unbearable! Something is bound to snap. Suddenly the silence is pierced by the ringing of a bell! And the completely fatigued students file silently to class. The above little drama ladies and gentlemen is enacted almost any balmy morning on the middle steps of Science building. Why the middle steps are chosen no one knows. Tradition, perhaps has made it a slight habit. All that you need is a slight basis of fact and a few imaginations. A great deal of experience, and a gift of oratory similar to that of Professor Sutherland. Equipped with these slight requisites, you may someday hope to obtain the distinction of being a full-fledged member of that sacred club (famously known as the "bull session").

These exchanges of experiences are by no means confined to this special campus or any special country, or any special time.

However, at dear old U. of K. this is an ancient institution always maintains a certain high standard of preparation, but it's on Monday morning, when the episodes of the past week-end are foremost in the students' minds, that the excitement reaches its highest point and the boys strain every fiber of their beings in their efforts to silence each other.

Such is life on the Science hall steps! Boys, you wouldn't feel so cheerful when your date tells you that you are nice, if you only knew that according to the dictionary, nice can mean ignorant, silly, or weak.

Although we did not completely destroy the Wade jinx, we'll bet that ghost was shaking in his boots several times during the game.

Jest Among Us
Now that all of our University co-eds have seen Max West's latest movie, they will know just how to conduct themselves until her next one is released.
And then there was the college wit who said that the name of this column should be changed to "Jest Among Us."
The fact that a certain sports scribe has been seen lately with only one key dangling from his container can be explained by the recently published statement which said that to great man ever carried more than five keys.

Scandal Snickerings

The THREE DIRT DIGGERS

The Three Dirt Diggers having been assigned to this column have put in a week's concentrated digging, and have the following to offer you. They might not be as good as that which our pal the Coffman wrote but bear with us.

The news has just come to us of the marriage of Elizabeth Evans, Kappa Plebete and Rice Smith, official Sigma Nu pinner. It seems Deanie the Blandring pursued them in the few hours, but we don't know whether she nabbed them or not. What is this, a marriage epidemic? Well one more Sigma Nu has bitten the dust for the last time.

The Big Blue turned sissy and was suffering from a campus last week for not winning the W. & L. game. We suppose now they will have their social privileges jerked. Tsh, Tsh. Too bad, all you courties of the pigskin carriers.

One of the new organizations on the campus is known as the NBSA. Translated it means, "Nobody But Squatters Allowed." They work under the NRA code. The club was instituted and organized by Bill Kappas and the Southern Gentlemen (in case you don't know of any on the campus they are supposed to be the Kays!). The chief organizers being Betty Ann Pennington, Rissa Heteromyous, Cook Danner, Frank (Honey) Paulk, Caywood, Joe Goodson, and Leslie Bell. We have investigated but can find no reason for the club existing except to give the girls a chance to compete for the campus cut. Stoddard Pickrell, Say what has this guy got? The girls seem to be running neck in neck in the competition.

One of the 31 Chio pledges handed in her pledge book. What's the matter? Wonder if she's looking for quality and found quality. The little lady is June Fairley, Sigmachi pinette.

The pin question is here again—the romance is that of Bridie Bosworth and Kappas Hunt Thomas.

Speaking of your romances which have survived the summer, one of the better which has not been given any publicity is that of Kappas Killy Reynolds and Kay Dutch Wilhoit.

Seen and heard about: After a summer on the railroad tracks the "blond bummer" Frye of the Three D stables, seems to have lost his strange power over the men. Marjorie Fieber is reported to be in

Key rose. She is the courtes of the rocks, and Miss West variety, but the geology type. She looks adorably at Jack Hirsch, Delt lab prof., Alphonso pidge, Katy Goyer and the pride of Pulaski county seen surrounded by three attentive ones. These seen were DU Miles Hardin, Phidelt, Billy Baldwin and Louis Finley. While the cat's away the mice will play, Sigmachi Pinzer Evans and Chio plebete Marie Vernon. Catch on???. Martha Buzer is reported to have gone Tridelt... Sigmachi Dodd Best, overheard saying of Katy Goyer "I wish she wouldn't look at me that way, she makes ME FEEL SO FUNNY."

Completely in keeping with the latest trend of backstage comedy in the current musical films is the Kentucky version of the stage musical comedy that played for 52 weeks on Broadway, and which is currently playing in Chicago with Olsen and Johnson in the comedy parts.

In this picture the four featured players are, James Dunn, June Knight, Lillian Roth and Cliff Edwards, while the supporting cast is made up of Lillian Bond, Dorothy Lee, Lona Andrews and Charles "Buddy" Rogers. "Take a Chance" is the story of four carnival entertainers who come to New York, and in the process of winning fame and fortune find Broadway really isn't a crooked gambling hall, and pass through many hectic adventures which carry them backstage.

Miss Elizabeth Poole, former president of Alpha Xi Delta sorority, and her guest, Miss Ruth Phipps, Long Island, who are students at Duke University, visited the Alpha Xi house this week-end. Visitors at the Sigma Chi house over the week-end were Messrs. Raymond Alford and Billy Callison, Fort Thomas; Henry Coleman, Pikeville; Morgan Perry, Port Royal; L. G. Forquer, Newcastle; Richard Gardner, Owensboro; Henry Gloster, Madisonville; Paul Cerco and Robert Kipping, Carrollton; Conrad Rose, Georgetown; June Parleish, Hopkinsville; George Hillen, Glenn Pickens, Bill Lusk, R. E. Boyd, Ryder McNeil, and Ford Fishback, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laib, Mr. and Mrs. B. Kassar, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hagar, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Hardin, Owensboro, and Dr. D. L. Mulford, Cincinnati.

If the popularity of past numbers is any criterion, the most successful group of composers ever to work together on a picture have collaborated in writing the lyrics of this film. They are responsible for no less than five numbers, of which, at least, three should be hits. They are: "I Did It with My Little Ukelele" written by Harburg and Arlen, the latter the composer of "Stormy Weather"; "Should I Be Sweet" written by Buddy De Sylva and sung by June Knight; "Eadie Was a Lady," with new lyrics by Lawrence Schwab and sung by Lillian Roth; and "New Deal Rhythm," written by Harburg and Gorney and sung by Buddy Rogers and danced by the Chorus.

The first part of the week the Ben All is presenting "Lady for a Day," a story about an old apple seller's love for her daughter who believes her a society dowager.

May Robson as Apple Annie gives a well nigh perfect performance. Her drunk scene with the social chattering is splendid. Warren Williams, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks and Glenda Farrell, as the smart crackling lovebirds who play fairy godmother, are grand. Jean Parker is the romantic element.

Conserved from the rational and unromantic side this picture may seem a lot of hokey, but, nevertheless, it is the kind of hokey that makes the movies and a good part of the world go round. You'll scream with delight when the raffish prepare to impersonate quality folks at the reception; you'll thrill with suspense at the arrival of the real guests; and you will surely be moved by the drama in the final triumph of Anne.

The other comedy, "Melody Cruise" of the first part of this week is being shown for the last time today at the Strand. This story, which concerns the girl troubles of playboy Charles Ruggles is thoroughly enjoyable and completely funny.

Mitchell, Baker & Smith has a line of bags with the most fascinating ways to be opened. One brown bag is of the new coat cloth material. It has two silver clasps for fasteners and clasps are very new. Another bag is black with a bar which is twisted to open it. All these are nice and roomy. For afternoon there is a small, square, brown bag of fatle silk. The metal rim runs around three sides. They have leather pocketbooks, too. Alligator, by the way, is retaining its popularity.

Woolf Wile has some angora wool scarfs that are just the thing to brighten up your street outfit. They come in varying degrees of angora-ness and are sold in texture or loosely crocheted. A writer for the Chicago Daily Tribune said that plaid skirts with dark jackets are good, so you will want a plaid scarf hand loomed in France (not angora) to wear with your skirt. The plaids are very gay with much red or demure with the blendings of the same color.

Kentucky has found herself and the team is just beginning to function. The sophomores are beginning to get the hang of just how big time football should be played.

As usual, in bowing to Duke, the Cats made more first downs, completed more passes, and gained more yards from scrimmage than the Devils did.
