KFA Presents Marriage Equality Matters with Evan Wolfson and David Rush

On October 7th, the Kentucky Fairness Alliance will host its annual fundraising dinner at the Hyatt in downtown Lexington. The event will feature keynote speaker Evan Wolfson who is the executive director of the nationally acclaimed group Freedom to Marry. Wolfson will address the important issue of marriage equality. To lighten things up a bit, the comedian Jade Esteban Estrada will perform at the dinner as well. Interested parties can find additional information on Wolfson and his organization at www.freedomtomarry.org and further information on Estrada at www.getjaded.com.

The dinner, organized by Sen. Ernesto Scorsone and Debra Hensley, has already proven a huge success for KFA. In fact, it is sold out. However, those who want to hear Evan Wolfson speak will still have the opportunity. The Bluegrass Chapter of KFA will host a free educational forum called Marriage Equality Matters with Evan Wolfson among others during the day of Saturday, October 7th at the UK Law Courtroom at 620 S. Limestone.

Marriage Equality Matters will begin at 1 p.m. with the reading of the play Tying the Knot by David Rush, a theater professor at Southern Illinois University. The play follows two gay couples and one lesbian couple through their relationships. The audience will get to explore what happens to the couples as a result of not having been allowed the same marriage rights as their heterosexual counterparts. After the reading, executed by volunteers from UK's theater department, the author David Rush will participate in a question and answer session.

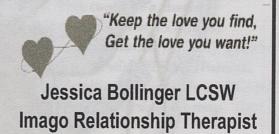

Immediately after the question and answer session with David Rush, the audience will have the chance to meet Evan Wolfson personally during a meet and greet with refreshments. Wolfson will give a short presentation on his work with marriage equality and moderate a panel of selected guests during a community dialogue after the meet and greet. The audience will have ample opportunity to ask questions of and receive answers from Wolfson and the panel at large.

The Bluegrass Chapter is extremely excited about hosting this educational forum. "This forum is an excellent opportunity to fulfill the part of our mission dealing with educating the general populace about LGBT issues. We hope that bringing Evan Wolfson and David Rush to the community will produce a huge turn out with lots of audience participation," says Cindy Downey, Chair of the Bluegrass Chapter.

"Since the event is free, I hope to see many members of the community in attendance," says event organizer Paul Brown. For the latest on the educational forum, go to www.kentuckyfairness.org, and check out their Get Active section or call Paul Brown at 859-227-5004.

KFA, our state wide activist organization, is celebrating the progress we have made in the state toward domestic partner benefits in state universities. Even the Family Foundation of Ky proclaimed on the cover of their September/October Citizen, "The homosexual agenda is apparently on the move in the Commonwealth." Thanks for noticing. We think so too.

The University of Louisville Board of Trustees voted in July to extend domestic partner benefits to faculty and staff. Within a week the University of Kentucky's spokesperson Jay Blanton said UK would consider the issue. By the end of August, officials at Northern Kentucky University joined the conversation. Faculty Senate President Bill Oliver said making those benefits happen is his goal for the year.

In September the U.K. Board of Trustees human resources committee gave the go-ahead for further consideration of DP benefits, and the Faculty Senate endorsed UK's plan by a greater than 2-1 margin. Western KY University President Gary Ransdell said WKU's University Senate, Administrative Council and other groups were likely to address the topic in the coming months.

KFA thanks and congratulates the campus leaders who recognize a fair workplace is essential in the 21st Century. We are definitely on the march.

RELIGION GONE BAD

Review of a new book by Mel White

The Reverend Mel White, bestselling author of Stranger at the Gate, has just published a new book, Religion Gone Bad, an exposé of the Christian Right. Before coming out as a gay man, White served the evangelical movement as pastor, professor, filmmaker, television producer, author, and ghostwriter for fundamentalist leaders Pat Robertson, Jerry Falwell, and Billy Graham, all of whom he got to know well. He writes, "These are not just Neocons dressed in religious drag. These men see themselves as called by God to rescue America from unrighteousness. They believe this is a Christian nation that must be returned forcibly to its Christian roots."

Religion Gone Bad documents the thirty-year war that fundamentalist Christians have waged against GLBT people. But that is only part of the story. White states: "I also hope I can persuade you that the struggle for "gay rights" is the next stage in the broader struggle for civil rights in this country. Consciously or unconsciously, fundamentalist Christians are using their anti-homosexual campaign to test how much intolerance the American people will tolerate."

White believes that the true goal of today's fundamentalists is to break down the wall that separates church and state, superimpose their "moral values" on the U.S. Constitution, replace democracy with theocratic rule, and ultimately create a new "Christian America" in their image.

He suggests ways we can resist these efforts by educating ourselves and our communities, by becoming effective activists, and through simple conversations we have with our friends and co-workers.

The Architect Karl Rove's Gay Connection

Another recently published book, The Architect, by James Moore and Wayne Slater, reveals that Karl Rove, Pres. Bush's chief political strategist, was raised by his gay stepfather. After realizing that he was gay, Louis Rove was divorced from Karl's mother in 1969. According to this book, Karl and Louis continued to have a warm and respectful relationship.

Karl Rove has been working his entire life to put Republicans in office and one of his favored techniques has been the exploitation of homophobia. Carl accepted his step-father for who he was but has no problem using GLBT people as scapegoats in his strategies to ensure Republican power. Sadly we are not surprised.

EX-GAY ORGANIZATIONS

some ideas about curing lesbians

The National Association for Research and Therapy of Homosexuality (NARTH) is a non-profit, educational organization "dedicated to affirming a complementary, male-female model of gender and sexuality."

NARTH was formed partly in response to the American Psychiatric Association's decision to remove homosexuality from it's list of mental disorders in 1973. Some mental health professionals voiced opposition; they continue to see a need to "help" GLBT people "straighten up."

This organization's web site differs from other ex-gay organizations in that it is not as religiously oriented and has more articles and studies written by educated men and women. They also include articles from a wide variety of sources, including The Advocate.

The scientific tone and inclusive approach is little more than a veneer, however. From their web site "NARTH is composed of psychiatrists, psychologists, certified social workers, professional and pastoral counselors and other behavioral scientists, as well as laymen from a wide variety of backgrounds such as law, religion, and education." Their stated mission: "Helping clients bring their desires and behaviors into harmony with their values."

I find this site disturbing because of the scientific veneer and because I know it is part of the larger attempts to portray us as sick and to slow our progress towards equal rights and acceptance.

Andria L. Sigler-Smalz is a Clinical Pastoral Counselor and the founder and Director of Journey Christian Ministries. She wrote a paper posted on the NARTH web site titled Understanding the Lesbian Client which I find particularly disturbing. She pathologies lesbians (presents us as mentally ill) in ways that could sound reasonable to some lesbian women who turn to her or other therapists for help.

She discusses issues such as enmeshment, that could be said to be true for many people whatever their sexual orientation. And she presents these issues as problems inherent in all lesbian relationships. The following paragraphs are taken from her article.

"For the female homosexual, "emotional attraction" plays a more critical role than does sexual attraction. ... holding and affection may be more highly valued than sexual relations.. The propelling drive in the lesbian relationship is the woman's same-sex emotional and nurturing deficits," Why does she assume that a desire for affection is based on a deficit? Don't many people want affection in their relationships?

'Within (lesbian) relationships there appears to be a capacity for particularly strong attachment. However, a closer look reveals behaviors that indicate a fragile relational bond ridden with fear and anxiety," Falling in love with a woman could certainly provoke fear in a woman raised as a fundamentalist.

"While lesbian partnerships generally are of longer duration then male relationships, they tend to be fraught with emotional intensity and held together by the "glue" of jealousy, over-possessiveness and various manipulative behaviors. Excessive time together, frequent telephoning, disproportionate card or gift-giving, hastily moving in together or merging finances, are some of the ways separateness is defended against. In such relationships, we see the counterfeit of healthy attachment--that is, emotional dependency and over-enmeshment."

"There is often a desperate quality to the emotional attraction in women that struggle with lesbianism. It is not unusual for a lesbian couple to increasingly reduce contact with family members and previous friends. This gradual withdrawal serves to insure control, and protects against separateness and perceived threats to their fragile bond."

If one partner in any relationship is pushing for reduced contact with others, I would suspect that this was part of an emotonal and perhaps physical abusive relationship. Some gay and lesbian relationships are abusive, we learned it from our heterosexual parents. Or, it could be that a couple withdraws from non-suppoortive family members.

"The therapist must assess her (client's) personality organization. For example, does she have the separation-individuation conflicts of a borderline, the fragile self-esteem of a narcissist, or the attachment fears of a schizoid? Understanding the core conflicts will provide the therapist with the meaning behind her behaviors." So many fun ways to label us!

"Also important to notice is the degree of the client's compulsive or obsessive feelings, thoughts and behaviors. The higher the compulsivity, the more anxiety and/or depression may surface as the client begins to separate from her lesbian partner or chooses to not "act out" their same-sex emotional attractions. This is often the most difficult part of treatment and strongly resembles the treatment required with a person struggling with substance addiction.

Falling in love, particularly as part of coming out, can certainly feel obsessive. But it is not mental illness, it is opening a closed part of ourselves to the light. And by "act out their same sex attraction" I assume she means making love. Or maybe just holding hands would qualify. Clearly, when we express our love for each other it is seen as an addiction, when heterosexuals express love it is natural and fulfilling. Give me a break.

The duration of treatment is generally of a long-term nature, and many benefit from two to three sessions per week, depending on the level of functioning of the client. Two or three sessions per week would certainly help the brain washing process she calls therapy. And I can imagine her clients becoming depressed as she convinces them of their "unhealthy tendencies."

In my work with women, I have found it to be a slow and arduous process. Because the lesbian struggle is a symptom of a woman's inner pain, attaining the capacity for healthy same-sex relationships and opposite-sex relating is a manifestation of inner healing and growth. Or of denial and shame-sounds lovely doesn't it?

October 11 - Coming Out Day

If you have been out for a while, you may think that coming out has become easier. We certainly have more role models, more activities and "more "queer space." We are represented in films and on TV, and the characters are diverse even if sometimes stereotypical. We are making progress in our work for civil rights.

But people still may have to face internal confusion, fear and shame, religious trauma, rejection by loved ones, and many other difficulties. Every year I have worked with the ten's in our Gay Straight Alliance there has been at least one youth threatened with possible homelessness

Therefore, there continues to be a need for the GLSO Pride Center and the many activities it supports. If you are reading this by picking up a free copy, would you please make a donation to cover the cost of its production?

If 40 people became new subscribers, that would pay our rent for one month. If 100 of you made donations averaging at $20, that would pay our utilities for half a year. With over 22,000 GLBT people in this city, we should be able to have a large Pride Center with many activities and services. If you have time to donate, there is a list of volunteer opportunities on page 6.

We need your financial support to keep the Center open and to continue these community based projects.

Religious and Spiritual Resources

Jubilee Fellowship

Jubilee Fellowship of Lexington welcomes members of the GLBT community and their friends to join us in growing as a community of believers in Christ who are fanatical about loving people with God's unconditional love. We hold Sunday worship at 11 am and hold a Friday night prayer meeting at 6 pm.

If you have questions about our fellowship please contact Pastor Cori Wood at jfellowship@aol.com or call 859 5514-5518 We have a big vision and a big God. There is room for you.

Integrity

St. Michael's Episcopal Church

Integrity is a support group for GLBT people and friends that meets at St. Michael's Episcopal Church on the second Sunday of the month at 4 pm (Aug 13th). We have lively discussions about everything from current events to spiritual growth. Everyone is welcome to attend.

On the third Sunday (Aug 20), our new group Gen Y Integrity meets at 4 pm. This group is for young adults ages 18 through 30. Please join us at St Michael's, 2025 Bellefonte Dr., in Lexington. For more info call 859 243-0998 or email stmintegrity@yahoo.com. You are also welcome to attend our worship service each Sunday.

Quakers

The Lexington Friends (Quakers) invite you to our Sunday Service at 10:30 am. We are located at 649 Price Ave, between 6th and 7th, parallel to N. Broadway. Quakers have no clergy or sermons and we believe that all of us have access to spiritual truths within ourselves.

Our services are different from most religious groups - we sit together in silence until someone is lead to speak from that silence.

Unitarian Universalist Church

The Unitarian Universalist Church of Lexington is a welcoming Congregation. We do not simply accept GLBT folks within our church community, we celebrate their lives. There are two worship services on sundays, at 9 am and at 11 am. There is a Buddhist study group (Sanga) that meets in between the two services at 10 am on most Sundays.

There is Children's Religious Exploration every Sunday during the second service. We probably have more than the average number of children with gay/lesbian parents within our youth population. I am particularly proud of the teens that I work with at church for being GLBT allies, several of them are part of the GSA,s that have started inmost of our public high schools.

On Wednesday evenings there are Adult Religious Exploration classes offered. Non-members are welcome, you can drop in on any of these classes. World Religions using a book by Huston Smith will meet for 9 weeks. On Oct. we will be discussing Buddhism, followed in order by Confucianism, Taoism, Islam, Judaism, Christianity.

Expanding Compassion is a series of films chosen to deepen understanding of the interconnected web of life. On Oct 4, we will be viewing and discussing Peaceable Kingdom, which explores the lives of farm animals, farmers, and animal rescuers struggling to make our factory farm system more humane. A third film, The Witness, is also about animal rights advocacy and will be shown on Oct. 11.

For something different, there is a class offered on IFA, the nature centered belief system originating with the Yoruba people, brought to South and Central America during slavery times, and practiced today by many people. This class will start on Oct 11 and continue through October.
