HERE SHALL THE KERNEL ALL STUDENT RIGHTS MAINTAIN

KENTUCKY PROFESSOR HONORED

An integral part of every institution of higher learning is its faculty, and all recognition of distinction gained by the professors tends to raise the rating of the institution to a higher plane.

The society, which was founded in 1883 by Herbert Spencer, carries out its program each year with the assistance of regents, who are outstanding authorities in their respective fields.

Professor Lampert, as head of the music department, carries on many phases of the work, but that which won him the recognition by the society was his work with the orchestra, which rehearses regularly twice a week and gives frequent concerts at Memorial Hall.

CASH OR CULTURE

Many learned men have in recent years devoted a great deal of labor to comprehensive studies of the American collegiate education.

Dr. William Leonard, who directed the six-year Pennsylvania study for the Carnegie Foundation, has summarized very briefly and thought-provokingly his conclusion arrived at as a result of this impartial scrutiny into the advance of higher education.

"American education," says Dr. Leonard, "is administered in isolated packages of specific ideas, segregated for the time being in self-contained 'courses,' elected semester-wise and cut off by examinations and 'credits' from any other living thing."

While his viewpoint may seem harsh to the graduate successful in terms of happiness as well as financial gain, it must appeal to that horde of alumni who have no jobs and to those others, equally numerous, who have not meshed well with life although "success" has come their way.

THE SITUATION IN SMALL COLLEGES

When individuals appeal to the nation for increased support of the 600-odd small liberal colleges in the country, characterizing them as the seed beds of leadership and "among the principal sources of high character and noble ideals without which any purely economic system would collapse," they voice opinion in which leading impartial educators strongly concur.

The small liberal arts colleges have usually had to travel a road of thorns and obstacles. Their endowments at best have been meager. They possess only one-fourth of the capital funds behind all higher educational institutions, large and small, in the United States, and they include in their cloisters one-half of the students.

Distinctly American in nature, the small liberal arts college truly plays a most important role in the American educational system. Amid the growth of state-supported institutions and highly-endowed universities, the smaller college has held on as one of the strongholds of a truly cultural education.

the value of the small-unit education. The recent inclusion within several large institutions of a number of smaller divisions, such as the colleges in the quad plan, is a recognition of the advantages of the small college over the large educational plants.

Regret is naturally occasioned by the fact that America's larger institutions cannot secure all the financial backing they could use to increase the salaries of faculty members or to erect luxurious Gothic and Gregorian buildings.

THE QUALITY POINT SYSTEM

The present senior class will be the first one to graduate under the quality point system. Under this system, which was inaugurated in the fall of 1933 when the seniors were sophomores, a student must have the same number of quality points as credits in order to graduate.

The first real test of the validity of the system will be met when the time comes to consider the seniors as candidates for graduation. The question arises as to what the faculty will do about those students who have passed the required number of credits but have not amassed an equivalent number of quality points.

It is said that a faculty member here has estimated that as many as 40 or 50 students will not have the required number of quality points next June. What will happen to these seniors? Will the faculty refuse them degrees?

A large number of seniors are strongly protesting against this system. They claim that, since they entered under another system, they should be allowed to graduate under that same system. They argue that since they were sophomores when the ruling was put into effect, legally, it should apply to students in the classes of 1937 and those following.

The Beacon is neither defending nor attacking the quality point system. It is merely raising an important question. This question is very important to a large group of seniors. Many of them would like to know definitely just where they stand. Whether a large group will be denied a degree and whether the seniors will be held to a ruling which was made a year after they entered is important to all of us.

U. S. EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

Establishment of a federal department of education, headed by a presidential cabinet member was declared the next important step towards better education by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, at a recent gathering of educators in Providence, R. I.

Dr. Hutchins scored the "neglect" which education has suffered through so-called "economy" programs of politicians, large taxpayers and cranks in general. He placed direct responsibility for national education on the federal government. "Responsibility to equalize educational opportunities in the nation's schools must be in the hands of the federal authorities," he said.

Four thousand New England educators agreed that a cabinet officer would have "forced" the national government to give more attention to education in the last few years. They agreed that local and state budgets were cut because it was easier to do so than to "dislodge the politicians who were actually squandering the public funds."

The entire educational program is far from being in a unified state. Even in closely allied sections of the country, methods go from one extreme to another. Staid old New England is particularly harassed by a lack of unified educational standards. Some states even lack a standard of education within their own boundaries.

No federal supervision of educational methods and teachers themselves is provided for in any way. Agriculture, commerce and labor are all integral parts of the governing system. Is not education as important as these?—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Credit toward a degree may be obtained by Alfred University students who participate in certain extra-curricular activities.

Six thousand miles from home is Douglas Davis, Ohio Wesleyan frosh. He lives near Peking.

Leaflets advertising a Nazi book were found inserted into a standard German text at CCNY recently. They were removed and ordered destroyed.

Indication of returning stable business conditions is seen in the increasing amount of gifts to colleges and universities.

Hoi Polloi

By BOB HESS

Here I sit on the club car of the famous Pan-American of the L. & N. road. We (the team, managers, coaches, stowaways, et al) entrain...

We have just pulled out of Bowling Green... I sit at the table in the club car with Bob Davis, who had to have three teeth pulled as a result of the melee; Pete, the most ardent fan a football team ever had, and Abe Ayers, looking over Abe's shoulder...

Coach Wynne just looked in the car. He certainly is a downcast fellow, and why shouldn't he be? He earnestly believes that he has a better ball club than Tulane, and everyone else thinks so.

Down at the end of the club car sits Moo, staring at the cover of the game for the Kernel and the Louisville Herald Post. He's pecking away at his portable noo, much to the chagrin of those around him.

Bob Sherman, who's covered the game for the Kernel and the Louisville Herald Post. He's pecking away at his portable noo, much to the chagrin of those around him.

Bo McMillan just walked by kidding Frank McCool about last year's annual—"Among Kentucky's Finest." (Insert, after getting back to Lexington, Congratulations, Bo, on the election Saturday night. Guess Frank will be able to kid you back now.)

New Orleans Squibs We are now on the special train from Louisville to Lexington. We stopped off in the Falls City for a hurried dip in the feed-bag. Some gal met Duke Ellington at the station, so why should he eat anything. He's always thinking of something to eat, anyway. Smoke Joe (Red) Hagan is yelling at the top of his voice, the same way he has yelled during the whole trip.

Gates McCauley is a rotten Cromwell player... Jack Crain, who didn't miss a lick the whole trip, spit on the carpet on the special. Captain Jimmy Long asked him just what the idea was. Jack's only reply, "Shucks, fellows, I thought I was in the Kappa house"...

Friday morning two bus loads of Kentucky gridiron race horses were taken for a sight-seeing trip... I truly believe that New Orleans is the most historically interesting city in the United States...

rich women of the city may get together with the snailie college boys. Rates are $5 an hour and 15c extra if the occasion calls for dress clothes. Nice way for a guy to work his way through college.

Tulane certainly has a fine cheering section, but a rotten band when compared with "The Best Band in Dixie." They have a hombra and femme section, and really make the noise. The bass drum and cymbals accentuate the rhythm of the yell.

Gates McCauley, Jack Crain, G. Sheehan, Tick Scholtz, and Moon Garring all payed a fellow fourths apiece to have him mentioned all the dens of iniquity. What a time they had. Jack and Tick tried to uproot a palm tree to take home as a souvenir.

In his sleep, Sam Powell was heard to say, "Honey, don't call me a bum. Nobody else ever called me that." Guilty conscience, Sam?

Collars distinguish the man—or so Graves-Cox and Kaufman's say! Graves-Cox is featuring a "special for young men" by Arrow—a wide-spread collar which buttons down and buttoned cuffs—in checks and solid colors.

I've noticed the Duke of Kent collars suggested by Esquire are going well this fall, so if you haven't tried them out yet, you'd better tear down to Kaufman's for one right now. Oxford cloth, with collar blue or white, is the thing for shirts, too. And they do say cold weather is coming, so how about getting well this fall, so if you haven't tried them out yet, you'd better tear down to Kaufman's for one right now.

DUKE UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Four terms of eleven weeks are given each year. These may be taken consecutively (graduation in three years) or three terms may be taken each year (graduation in four years). The entrance requirements are intelligence, character and at least two years of college work, including specified courses for Grade A Medical Schools.

And now for the girls—Mitchell, Baker, Smith is having a sale of the $5.00 purses for $3.00. For dress, there are French antelope, and mat mail with chain handles or maracate clasps. For the street or campus, tailored seal, grain leather, or Savoy calf is good. For you who like wire-haired terriers, Martha Lynn has created a clever bag of Prisse cloth with a ferrier's head clasp of unbreakable Prystel.

Baynham's is showing a new style of little oxford called Bromley squares, a British brogue. They are of calf, perforated throughout, including the kiltie, and are made in all colors, Burgundy, ginger brown, brown, grey, and green.

The pleats in the back are stitched from the waist to hips, giving the effect of a very short court train guaranteed not to be under foot when you're dancing. The best part is the long red shoulder throw which lies serenely across your shoulders and matches the belt buckle.

INDEPENDENTS GET SOMETHING INSTEAD OF NOTHING

SEEN FROM THE PRESS BOX

BY JOE QUINN
Kernel Sports Editor

Your regular Monday morning quarterback was not among those present at the recent New Orleans gridiron get-together...

What a time we had on this trip! The train was about a block away from the Union station in Lexington...

Soon after the train had got under way that Jack "Vinegar Pass" Crain and "Doc" Endcott were stowaways. They were underneath a pile of grips...

Every time the conductor passed through the car these two lugs would dive under one of the seats. One time Crain went under a seat and came out with his shirt half gone...

We found that the Club Car was the most interesting place to be on the train, and thus we spent most of our time in that spectacular. There was a radio, card table, magazines, desk and writing paper...

The afternoon dragged along rather slowly. We made stops at Bowling Green, Nashville, and Birmingham before it was time to hit the hay. When we hit Nashville the first thing McCool did was rush to a telephone...

We arrived in New Orleans about 8:30, 35 minutes late. There were three buses waiting there for us, and we were taken to the Bienville.

We pulled out of New Orleans about 8:15 Saturday night. Quite a few of the players immediately went to bed, because the berths were made up when we got on the train...

Alumni of the sixty-four state universities and land grant colleges in the country number more than 1,250,000.
