My Dear Mother

I write now, to tell you that Col Morgan will call to see you on his way home, he will probably reach there as soon as this letter and possibly before. He left this place a week ago to day, intending to go to W City and from thence direct to Cincinnati and Kentucky, but the little boy who travels with ~~him~~ ^{the Col} was ^{again} taken sick with chills, and he concluded to go back to Phila and wait a few days for William to recover, I received a letter from Miss Davy written by request of the Col, and telling me to write to him at Frankfort. As I have written to you, it will be unnecessary for me to write to the Col, and a letter a few days hence would probably not reach him, before he leaves for Texas. Ma Morgan's health is about the same as when the Col left us, at times complaining a good ^{deal} of pains in his bowels.
