Baldwin, a first-year law stu-dent, made general references to his campaign theme of Universit cooperation and teamwork and an emphasis on students' rights.

Baldwin also attacked the Loh-man administration for what he called a "misuse" of student fees spent on trips to conventions and SGA cups sold in the Student Center.

But Lohman responded that the allocation of SGA funds for student government trips was approved by the Senate and "all of these are important."
Lohman, who was one of the youngest SGA presidents when he was elected as a sophomore last year, said his experience in student government and working with the UK administration and his lobbying efforts in Frankfort makes him qualified for a second term.

But the scars left on base-ball diehards may take a while to heel. At UK, fans of Americas's pastime are left wondering why.
Why were the two sides bickering over dollars and cents when player salaries have gone through the roof and nearly every team in the league set revenue records in 1989? And why did it take so long for them to come to an agreement?
"It should'we never hap-pened in the first place," said Jon Hughes, a Resident Ad-visor at Haggin Hall.

spring," Curry added, "What matters is where our players line up on Sept. 1."

As to date only three major position changes have been made during the winter workouts. Senior tail-back AI Baker, who finished third on the squad in rushing last season, will be switched to fullback.

Redshirt freshman Terry Samuels will also move to fullback from his tight end position. Defensively, sophomore Dean Wells moves from an outside linebacker position to "strike," which is basically a defensive tackle alignment. Offensively, the Cats will operate from a "Pro-multiple" set. The UK staff will scratch the "widetackle six" scheme for a "multiple" alignment. The other major change on defense will be in terminology. Familiar defensive terms such as tackle, end and outside linebackers have been lifted for position names such as "strike," "bandit," "hit," "mike," "will" and "rover."

"What we want to do in the spring is find out who our winners and champions are," Curry said. "Secondly, we want to teach sound fundamentals to our team. And thirdly, we want to progress toward all of our goals that have to do with being champions in everything we do."

NCAA regulations allow each Division I member 20 practice dates in 36 consecutive calender days. All practices with the exception of the Blue-White Game will be closed. The Blue-White Game scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on April 21 at Commonwealth Stadium, will mark the end of spring practice.

Baseball fans upset, happy over short spring training

By JIM LITKE Associated Press

PHOENIX — It wasn't quite the reassuring thwack of but meeting ball, but it was the next these thing. And so, Warren and Bernie Bates sat in the stands at Municipal Stadium and listened to the buzz of lawnnowers and he hiss of sprinklers readying the playing field.

The scene was repeated at major league training camps across Florida and Arizona yesterday, one day after owners and players reached agreement on a contract and salvaged some spring training, one day before practices would begin.

"I'm still so mad I could burst," Bernie said, her hand resting on her husband's shoulders. "But we're suckers for baseball. That's why we're here."

Warren, 74, a retired car salesman, and his 71-year-old wife have migrated to Phoenix each spring from their suburban Sacramento, Calif., home for the last 15 years. This year it cost them $225 plus electricity for a month to rent an apartment in nearby Mesa.

"And the way things work out,

Mesa.

"And the way things work out, we're going to have to pick up one more day's rent just to get one game in," Warren said. "Two days ago, we traded in season tickets at $183 and a parking pass, which set me back another $45, because we figured there wouldn't be any games.

COMMENTARY

"By the time we got here today, all the good seats were already gone," he said.

As of yesterday, only hree home games had been scheduled for Municipal Stadium, the training site of the defending world champion Oakland A's. But fans began showing up at 8 am. under a desert sun to buy tickets.
The confusion over the spring training schedule and the 32-day tockout had so soured Warren Bates on baseball that he didn't put on his Oakland A's cap until he arrived at the ballpark this morning.

"We were just getting so bored," Bernie said. "We went shopping. We went to the zoo.
We went to the museums. We spent most of the money we were saving for baseball."

In the Oakland duyout, meanwhile, A's manager Tony LaRussa looked out over the field and tried to assess what damage had been done to baseball by the lockout.

"The game is bigger than everybody, I think the fans remember that. They know the owners and players take a stand at times and they may not understand all of what's involved.

"But the gate's open," he addod, "they! Il forgive and forget."

back to his family and catch up with his daugher's afternon tennis lessons.

Asked what contingency plans he had made because of the compressed spring training shedule, he said, "We're going to play it by ear."

That meant, among other things, a shortend "welcome to spring training" speech, more work on fundamentals like base running and fielding. But he said he didn't plan to try and fit the normal six-week regimen into the less-than-three weeks left before opening day.

"When the guys start to get glassy eyed," LaRussa said, chuckling, "you've got to stoy. You won't accomplish much from that point on."

Tell that to the Bates.
"What would I like to tell the people behind this lockout?"
Warren Bates asked, then pause.
"There's lots of things, but you couldn't print any of them."

'Blue Steel' is a disappointing and flawed film

"Blue Steel" may not be the worst film released in the last couple of years. But it has to be close. I say that because I haven't seen every film in that time period, so I can't speak with authority. Kathryn Bigelow's cophysycho pseudo-thriller wastes the talents of Jamie Lee Curris, excellent in "A Fish Call Wanda" and the televison sit-com "Anything But Love," and Ron Silver, a Tony Awardwinner in David Mamet's play "Speed The Plow" and star of the new film "Enemies, A Love Sto-Ty".

State lawmakers should not burden education bill

When the Kentucky Supreme Court declared June 4 that the state's school system was unconstitutional, lawmakers were faced with drafting a tremendous piece of legislation that ensured equal education for all of Kentucky's students.

The 900-page bill currently before the House of Nepresentatives represents thousands of hours of work by scores of committees, education groups and lawmakers. As House Speaker Don Blandford told the House Education Committee lat week virtually anyone who has wanted to gi Committee last week, virtually anyone who has wanted to give their two cents about education reform has had the opportunity. While lawmakers did not have much time to restructure the state's school system, the final package worked out by the reform committee is promising.

The most encouraging aspect of the plan is that it does not give the state's school systems mandates from Frankfort.

Rather, local schools are allowed to decide the best way to educate students and be judged by the outcome. The idea of letting Boyd Countians decide the best way to educate their Boyd County students is long overdue in Kentucky. In addition to eliminating troublesome mandates from Frankfort, the idea gets local communities more involved with their school System. The education reform bill was passed through the House Education Committee last week relatively unscathed by amendments that would have watered it down. As Blandford told the committee last week, lawmakers should not try to make the bill look like a "Christmas tree" — the name for a bill with amendments

Hopefully the final version of the bill passed by the General Assembly will not have anything but a few "mini-lights" on it. The future of Kentucky's schools are too important for lawmakers to decorate it with their special interests.

Lawmakers have a chance to prove to the citizens of this Commonwealth that they can look past their petty political differences and do what's best for the state. Remember, despite political alignments or disagreements about procedure, we all want the same thing - an educated Kentucky

Lets hope good intentions are enough to save our schools.

Census not helping homeless

So, the U.S. Census Bureau is making a seemingly valiant effort to count the homeless. Bravo, United States, for taking such an interest in a small fraction of the underprivileged. If the U.S. were sincerely interested in helping the homeless they could put some for the census towards helping the underprivileged. They could put some towards financial aid, vocational education, food, shelter, et. Howeyer, when our government does get ucation, food, shelter, ee: However, when our government does get the census results (which will be so inaccurate as to be useless), it will claim to not have enough funds to help the homeless. It will say we need to raise taxes in order to help those we just counted, but the figures will be so low that the raising of taxes for this purpose will not seem justified.

There is no possible way the Census Bureau can even begin to find the homeless because more are shall tell you, from experience, why people don't realize it.

I did not consider myself to be a homeless person at the time I had no home. Why? Because I had a car and homeless people don't have cars, right? Wrong.

My mother lived with her best friend, and I was welcome to store my stuff in her house. So, I had a car and a place for my stuff. But where to lay my head? Fix and where to lay my head? Fix and the where to lay my head? Fix and I had to, as I did several nights, but I did not want to impose by overstaying my welcome. I could have snot invited, and my stepmother makes me feel unwelcome cover when I call him on the phone. Luckily, I had several firends and acquaintances who needed house-ing house-to-house. I had no address, no phone number, no bed to call my own. I was homeless. By choice, perhaps, but homeless nonetheless. With a month left of summer, my best friend's parents invited me to live with them until I moved back into the dorm (thank goodness for financial aid). At last, I had a home where I was welcome. But for two months I was homeless, by choice (fi guess) because I. less, by choice (I guess), because I did not want to impose. Neverthedid not want to impose. Neverthe-less, I was homeless. It wasn't until the recent publici-ty about the homeless that I real-ized I had been one of them. So I can imagine there are many others like myself who did not or do not consider themselves homeless be-cause of similar circumstances and because, as a result of these circum-stances, they chose to be homeless rather than impose. If I, as a sophomore in college and still considered by society to be rightfully dependent, could not bring myself to stay where I was not welcome, I can imagine why the elderly refuse to impose. Al-not welcome, I can imagine why the elderly refuse to impose. Al-though many, if not most of the elderly homeless, have children who could take them in they refuse to go where they are not invited.

Although I am sure there are many exceptions, I believe the homeless are a proud, independent people who are homeless not so much because they have nowhere to turn, but because they choose not to be an unwelome burden on family and friends because of love pride or both. However, they do turn to those who welcome them — the Salvation Army, Community Kitchen and many other such places.

places.

If you really want to help the homeless, fight such senseless, wasteful things such as the homeless census and demand that your tax dollars go straight to the homeless facilities. You might even want to volunteer your time and/or money to help these people. After all, they are people just a little less lucky than we are.

Self-esteem is our personal eval-uation of ourselves. It is our opinsatire section is our opinion or judgement about personal characteristics that we have identified in ourselves. This evaluation can make a tremendous impact on our lives and our relationships with others. In making this evaluation we may ask ourselves many questions. Am Ia "good" person? Do I like how I look? Do I have a "good" personality? Do I have a "bad" temper? Am I too critical? Sometimes we answer these questions ourselves. In contrast, people with lower self-esteem do not think highly of themselves. They may get involved with people who treat them unkindly. They may remain in abusive relationships because consciously or unconsciously, they don't believe that they are worthy of better treatment. They may become involved in alcohol abuse, drug abuse or other self defeating behaviors. They do not have a strong sense of themselves and are overly sensitive to the opinions of others. People with lower self-esteem tend to be self-critical. They may have trouble secing themselves realistically with a critical. They may have trouble sec-ing themselves realistically with a tendency to focus on negative traits while overlooking or minimizing positive traits. These patterns can lead to a lack of self confidence, a fear of failure and ultimately poor performance which further enhances feelings of low self-esteem. An in-terruption of this cycle is necessary to begin raising self-esteem.

Although low self-esteem may begin developing during childhood or adolescence, it can be perpetuated by internalizing faculty messages, engaging in negative self-talk or ac-cepting a pessimistic attitude. In order to change self-esteem, you must take an honest look at yourself, acknowledge your positive skills and put them to good use. You must give yourself credit for the good things you do and the positive traits that you have. Look for ways to use these skills and traits often. This can help provide some successes which can help you feel better about yourself. It is also important to admit the things you don't like about yourself. You may be able to change some things by setting realistic goals and taking steps to achieve them. Some characteristics may not be amenable to setting realistic goals and taking steps to achieve them. Some characteristics may not be amenable to change. ing games could be made up. Doubleheaders, playing on open dates or extending the season a few days are among the alternatives being considered. A final determination was not made Monday and still may be a few days away.

If games were added at the end, it would push the postseason back.
CBS-TV, which has contract fishis for the playoffs and World Series, would have to give its approval.
"We're all trying to work togetherf or the best possible solution," CBS' Susan Kerr said. "We are an element of the puzzle."

Either way, the season will start in Fenway Park with Detroit at Boston. The Cincinnati Reds, who traditionally start the major-league season at home, will open on the road for the first time since 1966. "We had everything planned," Reds owner Marge Schott said. "It's a very big disappointment to me. The big thing is, it cost us our opening day."

me. The big thing is, it cost us our opening day."
The spring-training schedule may be just as tough to juggle. With the exhibition season now set through April 8, several teams are trying to rework plans that had included road games in places such as Des Moines, Memphis and Oklahoma City.

City.

The annual Freeway Series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and California Angels, scheduled for March 30-April 1, has been switched to April 6-8. The Mets-Yankees' home-and-home series scheduled for March 31 and April 1 was moved to April 7-8.

Local economies in Florida and Arizona were hit hard by the lockout, which resulted in 362 of 410 exhibition games being canceld. All teams will play some games at their spring-training sites, but the number is uncertain. Extra "B" games and split-squad games rate being added to make up for the abreviated practice time.

Players were anxious to get back to work, even though equipment rucks had yet to arrive.

to work, even though equipment trucks had yet to arrive. Ron Darling, Mike Marshall and Bob Ojeda were among the 20 Mets who showed up yesterday at en empty clubhouse. Baltimore's Gregg Olson, Seattle's Ken Grig Jr. and Atlanta's Tom Glavine were among the early arrivals else-where.

Mike Norris, trying to make a comeback at age 35, joined Dennis Eckersley, Mike Moore and Ste-wart at the Athletics' camp.

"It feels great to be back," Norris said. "Today is my birthday, and this is a great present."

Norris and other starting pitchers are getting a break, too. Because the shortened spring training means less time to get ready, the Scoring Rules Committee has agreed, for the first three weeks of the season, to waive the requirement that starters pitch at least five innings to get credit for a victory.

"As long as a starter goes at least three innings, he can get the victo-ry," Bill Murray, head of the Scor-ing Rules Committee, said.

Madison was relieved to hear that the lockout had ended.
"I'm glad it is settled. The reason I'm glad it is settled. The reason I'm glad it is settled. The reason I'm glad is because of the thou-sands of great fans that watch Ma-jor League Baseball," he said. "They are the ones who are being cheated."

And if you're one of those people who are fed up with strikes, lockouts, and news conferences, Madison has a simple solution.
"I think the fans should come out and watch college baseball," he

"I've been a player, not a pawn," said Lohman, a history major. "The president must be familiar with the politics. Only experience can make you ready for this job."

In response to a question about a possible increase in student fees, Lohman said that while he does not excessarily favor an increase, the extra funds are needed by the Student Organizations Assembly and possible projects like a campus pub. Baldwin said that he favors an increase in student fees only if the money goes to an on-line telephone registration system, which he said students could use to register for classes or gain access to their records.

Baldwin said he opposes 24-hour visitation in residence halls, an issue that has been widely debated on campus, because it could infrigo on roommates' rights.

"I understand it's important that we have our rights as students... but we have to remember that we all have roommates," he said. "Twenty-four visitation can be a real problem."

real problem."

Lohman did not say whether he favors or opposes 24-hour visitation, saying that the University first must address the bigger problem of residence hall safety. He said he wants to implement security measures.

Both candidates said they would work to increase minority recruitment and retention. Lohman said that SGA has discussed holding a minority recruitment day, and Baldwin said he would emphasize direct interaction with minorities in recruiting them to UK. Vice presidential candidate Sarah Coursey, Lohman's running mate and SGA executive director of student services, cited her political experience as her primary qualificaperience as her primary qualification for vice president.

LCC student died of natural causes

Karen Ashley, 20, a Lexington Community College sophomore who passed away two weeks ago in her Blanding Tower dormitory room, died of natural causes, but the exact cause is still undetermined according to Norman E. Webster, Fayette-Urban County cornor. "At this time further study and investigation is necessary to determine the cause of death," Webster said.

Ashley, a two-year resident of Blanding Tower, was taken to the Albert B. Chandler Medical Center and pronounced dead when she could not be awakened March 8.

Lower prices on higher education.

Announcing new lower prices on the Macintosh SE and Macintosh Plus.

If you'd like to enhance your education and your budget, take note. We just lowered prices on two powerful members of our Macintosh® family, the Macintosh SE and the Macintosh Plus.

They'll put a world of possibilities at your fingertips. Like graphing the economic impact of Japanese expansionism. Analyzing Freud. Or just organizing that stack of notes. Better yet, once you've mastered one application you can use them all, because all Macintosh software works the same way. And since every Macintosh runs the same software and is expandable, it can grow with you as your needs change.

Considering all this, you should have no doubts about which course to take. Give a Macintosh a try, and save.
