O. D. K.

Recognition of achievement is the one thing which, more than any other factor, provides incentive for further achievement. The university of today has become an institution whose fundamental basis is that of extending credit to whom credit is due.

Achievement along other lines than curricular work alone has been recognized by college officials as another worthy of notice. Out of this universal idea has grown Omicron Delta Kappa—an organization whose expressed aim has been to promote leadership, scholarship, and manhood.

O. D. K. as an organization has more than any other one group fostered such efforts. There are possibly chapters whose membership has become governed by fraternity interests of those in office—indeed it would be most unnatural if such shortcomings should fall to present themselves in such groups.

THE BIG BLUE

Students at the University of Kentucky expect the members of athletic teams to be sportsmen, and they hold this belief because they themselves are sportsmen.

For ten years Big Blue supporters have been hoping for a conference title and again this hopefulness seems to have ended in bitter defeat. This defeat, however, is far different, far kinder than it could have been.

As far as we know, Al Capone deserves recognition as America's most famous vice-president.

A PROMISE

A promise is an excellent thing, particularly when it is kept. Another characteristic of human beings which aids in making life much more enjoyable and profitable is cooperation.

Examples of broken promises and unkept intentions are always numerous in life. Disappointments are not unusual. But at least one can choose a comparatively unimportant time to break a promise and fail to lend their cooperation to a project when the time of the arrival of a basketball team which has done marvelous work, and of which the entire university is proud.

Yes this is what happened when the Wildcat basketball team arrived in Lexington. A parade was planned! Traffic cops were stationed along the route to be followed through Main street to the men's gym.

The decorated cars were in line waiting to be led off through town, the traffic escort was in readiness, but the promised leaders of the parade walked nonchalantly off in every direction, leaving the crowd astounded at their taking leave without any form of notice.

BY ALL MEANS, DRINK!

There is no doubt about it. There was at one time an age of virtue. Billions of people of the world over cannot be wrong. And millions of the older generation have adopted it as their theme song.

About that there is no doubt. The only hazey part concerns the exact date of that innocent, beautiful age. That age it was when children played with tops, and not fire, when the youth of the world thought seriously of the forbidding life before them and failed to get mixed up with rum parties or social sponges at 3 a. m.

Mother subtly implies with becoming modesty that hers was the age of virtue. Grandmother comes right back and indignantly replies with tops, and not fire, when the youth of the world thought seriously of the forbidding life before them.

However, that abstract age of virtue bobs up consistently whenever a group of debaters discuss the subject of drinking present-day college students. There is no reason for it. College students in other years did without liquor to an appreciable extent.

JEST AMONG US!

Since we've got so many bread lines, the government has quit yelling for a larger standing army.

The only high and dry thing about this country is its better ginger-ale.

Governor Sampson has made Knute Rockne a Kentucky colonel. Maybe Flem wants to learn Knute's technique for pulling "fast ones."

Two Cuban students recently killed a school official. Oh, this lust for a broad education!

There's no sting to a whip if you can't break it.

Now it's the Pigly-Wigly prof. He's got the goods but he can't deliver.

An increasing number of newspapers are consolidating. We've been noticing how the bunk is in more concentrated form lately.

Rita swears that, in the rush to get out of the gym after a basketball game, it's the survival of the fittest.

LITERARY SECTION

I've learned to smile upon you, As we meet at tea, and hide The sudden pain that grips me If we're placed side by side.

I've learned to laugh away the wound, Nor ever let you see That I meant just a little less to you Than you to me.

The air is filled with fragrance And the song of birds, But I can only hear Your bitter words.

Oh, must I be like this Tomorrow and tomorrow, Alone with crumpled dreams And a heart of sorrow.

COMPULSIVE WAR TRAINING SCORED

Delegation of 45 Members Representing Seven Colleges, Carries Petition to Washington

A delegation of 45 student leaders, carrying a petition of 10,000 college students from all sections of the country, arrived in Washington, Saturday, February 28, and presented a request for abolishing the compulsory feature of military training from the colleges of America.

Among the members of the delegation were Miss Charlotte Tuttle, of Vassar, daughter of Charles H. Tuttle, former United States District Attorney, Howard Melish of Harvard, son of the Rev. J. Howard Melish of the Church of the Holy Trinity in Brooklyn, Kenneth Melkjohn of Yale, son of Professor Alexander Melkjohn of the University of Wisconsin.

The petition, which contains the names of 10,000 students in 55 universities and colleges, makes three specific points against compulsory military training for students. Objections are founded on the grounds the military training teaches doctrines contrary to the best principles of the American people; that military training idealizes war; and that the majority of student opinion is opposed to military training.

Spud: "I'm looking for a job during my spare time." Melvin C.: "Maybe I can help you. I saw an ad in the paper for a helper in the Eagle Laundry." Spud: "I'm sorry but I've never had experience washing eagles."

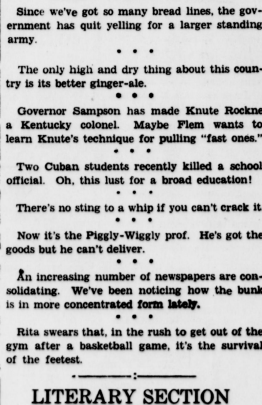

BEHIND THE CURTAIN

Overture, curtain, footlights, all the glamour of the theater comes with the applause of the first night success for the actors and director. Well pleased audiences turn homeward with no thought of the play other than the drama itself and the last hours in which they have felt entranced, in a land of make believe.

On the semi-darkened stage the crew is hammering on the skeleton of the set; properties are being gathered from many sources; all the wealth of things to be accomplished before dress rehearsal are being hurried to completion. Thus it goes, without much recognition, without the exciting gloss of romance of playing before the footlights, these faithful backstage workers are fitting their contributions into the whole that will be ready for final presentation to the public.

Glamour or no glamour, there will be sufficient recompense when the applause comes from "out front," for without costumes, props, stage crew, electricians, the show could never go on. We turn the spotlight on them every one in recognition.

I smiled with joy in some decoy
As through the vale we tripped

I held her hand, with youthful

We harmonized in song.
I cried with joy, for to a boy

Some portent of approaching

Will bring a sigh, as winter passes

She pointed out, a violet, we
And spring, I know, is on its way.

Look soulful, Sara,
How in-the-hell can I write a poem
Without an inspiration?
I guess you'll want me to explain

Or perhaps you'd rather know
Why I went to sleep
Without raising the window.
What'd you want to do?
Freeze to death?
But I'm gonna write a poem!
We have a lot in common
More than clothes and lipstick,
I get sort of choked up inside
When I think of how much you stand for.
More ways than one.
It's nice to have someone to confide in—
To talk about unnecessary things.
Of men and more men.
Stop giggling, Sara—
People'll think men are a laughable matter.
They are, I guess,
But you mustn't reveal it
It simply isn't done.
What do you think?
Say, maybe poets don't write
About Roommates
G'wan off and die, Sara—
And I'll write about the moon.

Dean of Men Recommends Maxims Of George Washington to Students

By SUE DICKERSON

In the Library of Congress there are hundreds of volumes of Washington manuscripts, two of which contain the exercises of George Washington written before he had reached the age of 16 years. The first one is devoted to mathematics and colleges today could attain the second book with which we are most concerned is divided into three portions, the last portion of which is filled with 110 'Rules of Civility and Decent Behavior in Company and Conversation.'

George Washington's life was so much like these maxims that it is often thought that he originally wrote them. However, he only used them as exercises for his copy book but it is evident that they served as formative influences in the development of his character.

The maxims have been traced back to no less a person than Erasmus of Rotterdam. In March 1530, Erasmus wrote a series of rules for the guidance of Henri de Bourgoigne, son of Adolphe, Prince de Veer. The French Jesuits compiled and published France about 1595, these Rules of Civility. They were translated into English by Francis Hawkins about 1640. The boy Washington copied the maxims from the Hawkins' edition.

The maxims are written in very unusual style and contain some very sound advice. For example, here is one which would help us in our first hour class: "Sleep not when others Speak. Sit not when others stand. Speak not when you should hold your Peace, walk not on when others Stop." We wonder if the old Jesuit fathers would have made this rule had they lived in modern times. "Put not off your Clothes in the presence of Others, nor go out of your Chamber half Drest."

Here is one that lotters in the Kernel office should please note and obey. "Read no Letters, Books or Papers in Company but when there is a Necessity for the doing of it you must ask leave: come not near the Books or Writings of Another so as to read them unless desired or give your opinion of them unasked also look not when another is writing a Letter." This one is a good one for all freshmen to heed when they encounter upper classmen. "When you meet with one of Greater Quality than yourself, Stop."

If any student would like a copy of the 110 Rules of Civility, he may obtain them at Dean Mecher's office. The books were issued by the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award Committee of the New York Southern Society. Dean Mecher has said that he would like for every student in the university to have a copy of these delightful and entertaining rules.

What's in the sack?
Lemons. Want one?
No.
Why?
If you had to kiss one every morning you wouldn't like them either.

Fighting Ruppmen Fall Before Power of Liners

By FRANK PHIPPS
Beaten, but never humiliated nor disgraced in the hour of defeat, the Wildcats bowed Tuesday night before the power of Coach Byrd's fast basketball team from over in Maryland.

The score was 29 to 27 and it came to the pass that Kentucky lost to a great basketball team by two points after putting up a basketball fight that would have brought tears of joy to the United States Devil-Dog Marines.

Here was a group of fighting Blue and White Kentuckians, smarting beneath the lash of sickness and driven to desperation by their inability to hit their goals, who wrote their names in Kentucky's basketball hall of fame.

The fact that the Wildcats were defeated by a magnificent team does not matter. It is how they fought that counts. The Wildcats had the fight, but Maryland had the better team. They fought—that team of Adolph Rupp's sought for all that they had. There was not a man who was clad in Blue and White who did not do his duty and do it well, entitling him to hold his head high even in defeat.

It might be said that Maryland was, in a way, lucky to win in the last 15 seconds of the game, yet during most of the battle the Old Liners looked to be the best team and deserved to win.

The brilliant battle staged by Kentucky in the last half was a distinct surprise to the folks down South but not to the Kentucky fans, for they knew what the Wildcats had. Kentucky fans are still wondering how Virginia pinned Maryland to defeat so readily.

Our high hat is off to the noble sons of Maryland who have in the past year chalked one of the most remarkable records in the history of basketball in this part of the United States. And to their able and coach, Mr. Byrd, goes Kentucky's warmest congratulations.

The Old Liners were determined

Josephine Parker Will Assume Duties

Miss Josephine Parker former instructor in music at Southwest Baptist College, at Bolivar, Mo., has assumed the duties as instructor of public music at the university and the training school to succeed Miss Lenore Wilson, who has resigned. Miss Parker, who attended the University of Illinois and Northwestern University, has been the winner of many voice contests throughout the country.

Miss Parker will sing at the Vesper services at Memorial Hall Sunday. This will be one of her few appearances in this role, as she expects to devote time entirely to musical education. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, honors' musical fraternity.

to beat Kentucky and they did it. And the outstanding Mr. Berger will go down in Maryland's Glory Hall of Fame as being among the greatest of the great. It cannot be denied that he was the star of the night. Berger, passing, missed, and shot like no other man.

The team that had the better eye for the basket won Tuesday night but if old Lady Luck had not smiled on Maryland on at least two occasions both in the last minute, which resulted in baskets, the game might have ended 27 to 25, Kentucky.

But Coach Rupp and his 10 Blue and White warriors deserve all the credit in the world.

INTRAMURAL HAS LONG HISTORY AT U. K.

Intramural sports began at the university in 1905. At that time track was the favorite sport and competition was conducted between classes.

No more is heard of intramural sports from that time until 1916. In that year class football teams were formed and practiced throughout the football season, with the varsity, ending the season with several elimination games which decided the championship. Baseball and basketball teams were also organized in 1916.

From 1916 until 1926 intramural sports were conducted by the various athletic coaches of the university. The program included football, basketball, track and baseball. In 1926 M. C. Potter came to the university as intramural director and introduced tennis, horse shoe pitching, and volley ball. The department was given a more definite plan and organization at that time.

C. W. Hackensmith took over the direction of the department in 1930. The program has grown with the growth of the student body. During the 1930 season football, handball, indoor golf, and bowling were added to the list of games open to intramural participants.

The organization of the department at the present time: Physical education director, M. E. Evans; director of the arbitrary council, C. W. Hackensmith, who organizes and controls the program, has control of the awards and is chairman of the arbitrary council.

Senior manager, E. T. Evans; member of the arbitrary council, aids in carrying out the program and supervises the junior managers.

COLLEGES HAVE ESTABLISHED RECORDS

Colleges and universities have always played an important role in the establishing and setting of world's records. Not only in sports but other phases of life as well.

We might take the sport of wrestling as a man must be a tough sort of fellow, and just so he was hard boiled that was all that was necessary. We now look on wrestling as a sport that the best class of society approves and demands, and the only men that are capable are men that are educated and refined and cultured.

A university man that is showing prominence in the field of pugilism is Savoldi of Notre Dame. Leading experts pronounce him the coming world's champion. He is a clean fighting kid, and in his previous fights he has shown his superiority over his adversaries.

The world's best jump record is held by a college man. The pole vault, the high jump, the hurdles and many other forms of sports are held by college men. Recently the 300 yard dash was set by a college man, Carr of the University of Pennsylvania set this record.

PURPLES OF UNIVERSITY HIGH

By O. ROBERSON
That all-Southern star better known as Felix Kemper has convinced University High followers that he has a different brand of high school basketball than any other coach this side of the Rocky mountains. He is a graduate of Georgetown College has had extension work at the university and has taken coaching for two summers under Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame. He has a way of coaching his boys which one can not help like. Always handing you that million-dollar smile, a cheerful word for everybody.

In 1929-30 his season was just a sample to the Purples. They won eleven out of eighteen starts and were also runners-up in the district tourney held at Carlisle. The Purples received a silver trophy for their victory and also prizing most of all they received the reward of clean sports of the tourney. The Purples hope to bring in many more trophies before the season ends.

Coach Kemper and his purple phantom cadres have won 15-17 starts, losing to Wilmore and Midway, two of the most dreaded quints in the state in the present tourney.

The Purples have been represented this season by two able youths of Lexington's popular families, known as Glass and Little, two queer names but these fellows sure know their basketball. Captain Glass led the Purples on the grid-iron this past season, and is leading the Purple cagers on to victory at present. He has been a letter man for the past four years since his first presentation of athletics in University High. Little has proven himself an able leader this season. He has also been a letter man for three years.

Fisher, a one man team in himself has shown the school that he sure knows how to get the jump and send the Purples fighting down the floor to victory. Fisher is one of the cleanest players the hardwood sees in Kentucky.

Hillard that (everywhere) for the Purples is rated highly in Kentucky high school basketball and is a very valuable man in the Purple club.

Bishop a letterman from the grid-iron and basketball teams of the past year, has been valuable on both, and onlookers are watching him through the coming tourney. The (little imp) of University High known as Cavanaugh came to the Purple squad this season from the Blue Devils of Lexington High. He has proved to be a dot the Purples prize very highly.

If quint clubs only carried nine players the Purples would have a team that any team would shy from. The reserves are Baker, Elder, and Anderson. These youths have proved to be real hot stuff on the hardwood.

Glass, Cavanaugh, Bishop, Baker, and Anderson will probably play their last games during the present tourney.

DISTRICT MEET TO BE PLAYED IN UNIVERSITY GYM

Paris and Nicholasville Open Boys' Division Thursday Night at 8 o'Clock

THREE GIRLS' TEAMS SCHEDULED TO PLAY Hounds, Central Kentucky Champs, Are Favored to Cop "A" Class Award

Twenty-fourth district basketball tournament will get under way Thursday evening, March 5, in the University of Kentucky gymnasium with Nicholasville playing the favorites of the tournament, Paris, University High School Purples hosts of the meet, will not play until Friday morning, when they come up against a strong opponent, Wilmore. Drawings for the tournament were made last week in Lexington under the direction of S. G. Crayton, principal of University High School.

There are represented this week in Lexington 15 schools: Henry Clay High of Lexington; University High of Lexington; Athens High, of Fayette county; Pictadome High, of Fayette county; Millersburg Military Institute, Millersburg; University High, Russell Cave High, of Fayette Paris High, Bourbon County High, of Millersburg; Little Rock High, of Bourbon county; Linolee High, of Fayette county; North Middletown High, Clintonville High, Wilmore High, and Carlisle High.

Seven teams from the Class A bracket, while eight teams from the Class B boys bracket. The clubs in Class A are Henry Clay High, M. E. I. Paris, Nicholasville, Athens, Carlisle, and Pictadome, while Bourbon County High, Linolee High, Wilmore High, University High, Little Rock High, Clintonville High, and Russell Cave High are in the Class B bracket.

J. S. Mitchell, assistant principal of University High, announced that Coach Adolph Rupp, of the University of Kentucky, and Coach Dick Bacon, of Union College, will officiate in the games of the tournament. Trying to pick the winner of the tournament is difficult. Anything is likely to happen in a basketball tournament and the team which wins will have to have a certain amount of luck. The Paris High Greyhounds have outscored every team they have met this season. Paris has not a high scoring team, but its defense is of the best order. Nearly all of the best scoring teams against Paris this year have been made from beyond the foul line.

A collegian, badly mangled in a train wreck, could not be identified. The clothes he was wearing came from all corners of his dormitory.

Looking Over The Magazines

By NICHOLAS WINN WILLIAMS
March magazines bring winds of various intensity. Vanity Fair with its brilliant coloring has a strength about it that needs must attract the reader. In keeping with its policy there are a number of pictures of pretty women chief among them is a picture of Miss Joan Crawford. Her husband, Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is also there, standing gallantly by her side. Whether you like the movies or not one cannot but admire a beautiful woman, I am told. At least that's the platitudes. A rather suspicious way to start looking over March magazines.

The mention of Russian literature gives one the impression of gloom and pessimism. The nihilism of Turgenyev is recalled, the bleakness of a snowstorm described by Tolstoy is thought of, the weird working of a criminal's brain depicted by Dostoevsky is imagined. The March Cosmopolitan goes to Russia to find out the cause of the revolution. It just returned from that country bringing with it novels and short stories of the most morbid type. They see life through romantic or humorous glasses. The movement in world literature is back to the romantic; it would appear that one must look toward optimism to be modern.

There is something ironical in the title of a paper by William Rothenstein appearing in the Atlantic Monthly for March. Wishes to Be Young Was Heaven, is its heading under which the reader comes in contact with Genies in the Nineties. George Bernard Shaw is there, and then there are others—Thomas Hardy, Swinburne, Saegert, Beardsley. Mr. Rothenstein is known primarily as an artist, but he has ability as an author, for look at this passage which has to do with Shaw, "He had all the ease and assurance, the endearing right-headedness and wrong-headedness, the overweening outspokenness, that English society recognizes so generously by now, that the whole world has acclaimed him."

Those who follow the drama will be glad (?) to know that Mr. Shaw is making a movie out of his play How He Led to Her Head. The movie directors and Mr. Shaw are having it "up and down." Mr. Josef Von Sternberg, the movie-director, has the following little thrust to make: "George Bernard Shaw is antiquated and old-fashioned. He is operating, thinking, talking and writing in terms of the last century. He cramped himself twenty years ago, and that applies to many of the so-called literary giants, in particular Theodore Dreiser."

Extra! Extra!
If the Wildcats had won the tournament, a special edition of The Kernel, carrying complete reports of the game, pictures of the Wildcats, many very big and very black headlines, would have been in its every corner and fraternity house, and in hotels and confederations shortly after the game ended. The largest type would have screamed "Cats Win Title" and it would have been very wonderful. We laugh bitterly.

Coleman Smith—"I could see that old press running when the score was 27 to 25."

Al Kikel—"I'll go home and cry all night."

Two Rings, Two Pins and a Divorce
As the yellow and crimson leaves floated slowly down and formed little heaps of colored loveliness on the old Limestone street charming couple, young, eager, and in love, decided that marriage was quite the only relation to be had.

That was in 1929 and the principals were and are two students. A few of the only type of very Christmas season boredom no longer expressed it and so negotiations with a divorce lawyer were begun and are still pending.

The lady, not being the sort who flings rings, retained her husband's pin, her engagement ring, her wedding ring and now, darling kiddies, she wears the pin of another who believes that he is the immense canine.

We admire the couple for keeping their marriage and their proposed divorce so entirely secret. We admire the lady for her ability to acquire jewelry. We even admire ourselves for finding about the whole affair.

We Love to Be Spoiled

Crowd of 400 Greets Wildcats on Return

(Continued from Page One) could go to their homes and rest. The players who represented Kentucky were Carey Spicer and Louis McGinnis, who made all-Southern forwards; George Yates, all-Southern center; Jake Bronston, guard on the second all-Southern team; Charlie Worthington, guard, and Forest Sale, Darrel Darity, William Kleiser, Bill Trot, and Ercel Little, reserves. The basketball season will officially close Monday night when a banquet will be given in honor of the team by the Alumni club of the university. Members of the team will receive letters and the captain for the following year will be elected at that time.

Wildcats vs. Old Liners
Staging one of the greatest second half comebacks ever witnessed in the annual Southern Conference tournament which was held in Atlanta, Georgia, last Tuesday night, the Kentucky Wildcats forged to a two-point lead only to have Berger, the all-Southern guard, toss two field goals in the final minute of play to win the Southern Conference title for the Old Liners from Maryland. Maryland started to walk away with the game early when they rang up five points before Kentucky scored a point. The half was nearly over before the Old Liners could sink two field goals to end the half 18-7. The first half featured the all-Southern guard play by Berger and Ronkin. These two boys not only prevented Kentucky from coming near the basket, but scored the majority of the points for Maryland.

Kentucky's offense began to click as the second half began, and the top-heavy lead held by Maryland was soon cut to three points. The score stood 18-15. Maryland managed to keep to the fore and with five minutes to go the Old Liners led 25-19. One last great spurt was started and in four minutes the Kentuckians had garnered eight points and held a two-point lead over Maryland. One minute to play and Kentucky had possession of the ball. They stalled for time and passed for advantage, but "Lil Mac" was fouled as he went in for a crisp and missed his shot. Maryland took the rest of the lead and raced the length of the floor to drop in a score to tie the standing.

Spicer made a desperate attempt to score when he received the tip-off from Yates, but his shot was due to interference from Maryland. Berger took the rebound and dribbled to the middle of the floor where he shot the winning goal. The crowd of 7,000 persons went wild.

The game was played before a large delegation of Kentucky fans who motored to Atlanta for the finals.

Doctors Brown; Fred Sington Interviewed

(Continued from Page One) portion of his time, though he likes law, and will begin the study of it next fall when he assumes his duties as assistant coach at Duke University. When he submitted to an interview for The Kernel, he politely requested that he might make a statement concerning the Kentucky football team. In the following words he gave his personal opinion of this group against which he played.

"The Kentucky football team was always a fighting, hard playing, hard hitting, clean group of sports. It has been a pleasure to play against them. No matter how much depended on the game, whether it was to decide a championship for Kentucky or Alabama, the play was all that could be expected of sportsmen. It is one of the regrets of my graduation from the ranks of an active college player that I shall be unable to meet Kentucky sportsmen on the field of action in the future."

Sington's interest in the university at the present time has been increased through the fact that "Monk" Campbell, one of his teammates at Alabama is to be backfield coach here next year.

Sington strongly declared that "Monk" was the outstanding half-back of the South last year and that he never got the credit that he really deserved. "Monk" was described as being hard working and very modest about what he does. "Always tried to see that the other fellows on the team got the credit for any play that he himself made," said Sington.

"Really his deceptive ability and execution of the spin play made the Alabama backfield as efficient as it was. He was the most consistent ground gainer on the team and never failed to break loose for a long run in any game played. It was his experienced judgment of plays that helped run the team so well. He is a clean sport and has a wonderful personality, the sort of fellow who is a good mixer and makes friends readily. "Campbell really knows football as a student of the game. I think that he will make Kentucky a mighty good team, that he will be easy to get along with, and that he will work as hard for the team as a coach as if he were playing on the team himself," concluded Sington.

Of Course We Know It Is True, Nevertheless We Like to Hear It

By WILLIAM WOODRUFF
O. D. K. Delegates from Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

First impressions of University of Kentucky: Hundreds of blondes, and all of them pretty brunettes that seem to always be waving at someone. Lots of buildings, mostly pretentious and all with an academic appearance. A bunch of fellows that are big-headed per centers when it comes to loyalty to their Alma Mater. Horse farms—and more horse farms—or is that what you call them? When your managing editor asked me to write this little sketch about my impressions of your school, the first thing that came to my mind was the hospitable reception which greeted the O. D. K. delegates on arrival here. They say the South is noted for its hospitality, and take it from one who is now tasting some of its graciousness, Kentucky should certainly be rated as high on the list. On arrival here, a few of us fellows were corralled (I believe that is a good horse word, and appropriate for a state so famous for its thoroughbreds) by Jack McGurk, piled into his Packard, and up until now, we have been whirled from one thing to another, in a fashion fit for kings. We have all agreed to take a vote, unanimously, that Kentucky is the finest university in many a mile around. And when you all come down to Atlanta, don't forget that we are also Southerners down there, and that for Kentuckians the latch-string is always on the outside.

(Continued from Page One) mendous amount of labor. According to Mrs. Galloway, the colors to be used are purple, blue, and green, the only exceptions being those of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth whose attire will be bright in hue.

It was the custom of 850 for one to wear heavy girdles and collars. The creation of those items of apparel necessitates much care. They are jeweled, intricately designed and painted to lend the desired touch of richness to the costume. Many of the girdles and collars seen in "Macbeth" were produced only after hours of tedious labor. Patience is a keynote in the costume design.

The swords and shields require heavy harness so 25 yards of thick furniture webbing was purchased for the purpose. The costume department of the Guignol is directed by Marion Galloway. Her assistants are Ruth Wehle, Eleanor Ward, Elizabeth Bond, Irene Day, Frances Long, Justine White, Mary Virginia Hall, Donald Pratt, and Neal Cain.

"Macbeth," which is being directed by Frank Fowler with Dr. George K. Brady and Lolo Robinson in the two chief roles, will open at the little theater on March 23 for a week's run.

(Continued from Page One) During the entire month there will be a collection of the Dutch literature in the library on display, with posters calling attention to its various phases.

The March meeting of the English club will also be devoted to the same topic and one geology seminar in the month will discuss Holland from a geological standpoint.
