TORNADO WARNING PROCEDURES

In the event of a campus tornado warning, there are two designated areas where all staff and patrons should immediately proceed. In King-South, everyone should go to the Map Room off the Deli. In King-North, everyone should proceed to the Mail Room area and adjacent corridors. People should not go to the Art Library, there are too many windows. People should remain in these two areas until an all-clear is sounded.

An effort should be made to get library patrons to immediately go to one of these two sites as well. Do not waste time arguing with them about it, however. Inform them and then proceed to shelter.

Do not leave the building under any circumstances until an all-clear is sounded.

If you have any questions, contact Mike Lach in the Director's Office at 7-3801.

INFORMATION FROM THE PRESERVATION COMMITTEE

Most people believe that once something has been printed it is safe from loss. Most of that printing is done on paper and much of that paper is deteriorating. The New York Public Library estimates that as much as half of its five million volumes are in poor condition. The Library of Congress estimates that 1/3 of its 17 million volumes are "brittle books."
