SEMI-WEEKLY KERNEL

NEW SERIES NO. 51

CLEARING HOUSE

By THE EDITOR
As usual around vacation time, literary genes in Clearing House were few for this issue.

No Love Lost
Now for that letter: "Dear Sir: I am in full sympathy with you when you complain of students commending you for some 'hazy' charge of policy."

Midst Clattered Walls
Wait, there's still more: "When it comes to world politics, the Kernel has excelled in refraining from mentioning them. However, I can't understand who on earth was responsible for printing the Mississippi editorial."

Not So
By the way, in regard to the above letter the article wasn't "blamed" on a trial staff editor because there was no trial staff editor that issue.

Needs Complete
Almost in its completed form, the constitution for the proposed new form of student government will be presented to the entire student body at a convocation or mass meeting of some kind soon.

Engineers Give Ball Saturday
Featuring the music of Tommy Tucker and his orchestra, the Engineers will present their annual ball on Saturday, April 22, from 8:30 until 12 in the Ballroom of the Student Union building.

Tommy Tucker Signed For Music
Featuring the music of Tommy Tucker and his orchestra, the Engineers will present their annual ball on Saturday, April 22, from 8:30 until 12 in the Ballroom of the Student Union building.

They Deserve It
Congratulations to the swimming team upon being invited to open George Tech's new pool next January. Too bad that they didn't enter the Southeastern Conference tournament.

Plea For Peace
Although you may not agree with everything advocated in the peace convocation Thursday, every student should make arrangements to attend. Just thinking of the peace is a whole lot towards getting that peace. It will take an educated public alive to the hazards of the methods of war-mongers. And this convocation should be a part of that education.

Comment Corner
By ALLENBY E. WINER
William O. Douglas yesterday was sworn in as justice in the United States Supreme Court. He is only 42. When some time ago President Roosevelt "threatened" to pack the conservative Court there was immediate tumult in the ranks of numerous anti-New Deal factions.

Of the seven nations which by yesterday had endorsed Roosevelt's appeal for world peace, it is difficult to classify even one as a potential trouble-maker. They are all in the Western hemisphere; but the ill winds of today are emanating from points far removed. By the rate at which European countries are falling into line behind the president, one must wonder if the other half of the world even WANTS peace.

John C. Hunsaker, Jr., Van Lear, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, was named last week as the eighth initiate to Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership fraternity for outstanding Kentucky men.

In Cincinnati, where loyal citizens yesterday watched President Roosevelt's appeal for world peace, it is difficult to classify even one as a potential trouble-maker. Our Plea For War

Another war editorial? That's what this is, and this time we're all for war.

The World War caused the deaths of 5,315 Kentuckians during the eighteen months of this country's participation in the Titanic struggle.

Tuberculosis does not have any highly-organized propaganda machine, nor does it mask its actions under any claims of "fair play" or "justice," but relentlessly and unceasingly it maims, cripples, and destroys.

Without regard for sex, color, or age, this disease killed 89,517 persons in Kentucky alone during the twenty-seven year period ending with 1957.

Approximately 51,000 of these were cut down in the active period of life. Some of these were students preparing for leadership in state and nation.

Some were fathers whose loss left families without support. Some were mothers whose death sent children to orphan's homes and foster parents. All of them were filling a place in some family or friendly circle.

Some of our greatest leaders have declared that a general European war is sooner or later inevitable. And so is our war against this disease if we are to continue to exist. Unlike a war among nations in which even the victor has seldom achieved what he sought as he entered the conflict, an educational and scientific war against tuberculosis would save lives instead of "honor."

The tragedy of this disease is that it grows increasingly menacing yearly. In some cities the increase in mortality rate last year amounted to as much as 50 per cent. The country as a whole showed a definite rise to a death rate of 55.4 per cent per 1,000.

And it could be entirely wiped out! Although difficult to detect and hard to cure in its later stages, this disease could be controlled and cured in its early stages by a conscientious and educated public. And the campus seems the logical place to start in any educational movement.

A war against disease can be much more effective and worthwhile than a war against "aggression," "dictatorships," or "injustice."

What To Do About What They Said

Three professors of political science, Doctors Warwick, Wilcox, and Bensch, Sunday afternoon engaged in a round table discussion of the United States foreign policy on the University of Louisville's radio hour.

Like all other such discussions and forums, everyone agreed that peace is what we want, but as to the method for gaining it there was some disagreement.

However, from the talks came three definite points upon which all agreed. (1) Not Chamberlain nor any other foreign statesman has come forth with any feasible plan for lasting justice in the world.

(2) Only on justice can the world base any hopes for peace. This "justice" includes revision of new and old treaties and agreements.

(3) If we are to have peace, the democracies must stand ready and willing to make definite concessions in territory and trade.

The whole situation seems to have passed the reconnaissance or bluffing stage, yet it certainly hasn't reached the point where we must be dragged into war.

Perhaps it is impossible to remain entirely aloof and apart from the European struggle, but at the same time we should guard against those who would have us pitch in and whip the dictator states.

After the recent report that Chamberlain is interested in a certain German company, we can not even be sure that the democracies would not turn on us later.

All of which comes to no logical conclusion. The question still is: "How to keep out of war?"

With statesmen growing grey-headed over the problem, members of THE KERNEL staff do not feel justified in trying to influence 3,000 students to take a certain course. What THE KERNEL does urge, though, is that each student attend the convention and night meeting on Thursday. An informed student body may not solve the problem, but by keeping alive to the question, it certainly will be much less easily influenced by the cries and entreaties of war-mongers.

Do We Appreciate What Makes It Tick?

Although on the campus less than a year, the Union building is already being "taken for granted" by most of the University's students. All of which is very good if we don't overlook the time and labor of individuals and organizations spent to make the structure what it is.

Too few of us realize the excellent work done by the art committee under the direction of Oscar Patterson with the capable advice of Prof. Edward Ramiels who has even placed part of his private collection of art work in the Union halls.

A new grand piano has just been purchased for the music room by Union and University music committees. Complete operas, concerts are given repeatedly in this music room — open to every student.

Chess, checkers, horseback riding, ping-pong, billiards, cards, hobbies — all of these have been sponsored and encouraged by the Union management. In fact, any types of recreation or activities in which students have shown an interest have been actively promoted by the Union.

Although interest in these activities is increasing daily, not nearly enough students know of the advantages and opportunities offered. We shouldn't become so smug in our acceptance of what's placed before us that we fail to realize and appreciate the hard work necessary by Union committees to offer real service to students and the University.

A Sad Tale In Springtime

They're both seniors... He's a leader in the CRSG... She's petite, pretty and pinn'd — but not to him... Years ago they attended the same high school... There they experienced the great emotion... They swore to be forever true... He called her "Bubble Eyes"... She called him "Angel Feet"... Now, majoring in the same department, they see each other daily... But nothing remains between them... "Bubble Eyes"... "Angel Feet"... Gone... Gone...

The local press informs us that the DAR are holding some sort of convention in Washington, which reminds us, Mr. Jimmie Howell, that debonair Signia Nu, thinks that DAR stands for d-d-d-m-n-i-c-rels.

In case you want to know what d-d-d means, come around and we'll tell you. But we can't print it. Gotta protect your morals, you know. Gotta protect your morals.

Old Saw

A bird in the hand is worth two in the brook.

While listening to radio station WLAP (We Let Anybody Play) the other day, we heard an announcement concerning the opening of the local races in which Keeneland was referred to as a "non-profit track." If there ever was an understatement that is it. From our experience in picking Keeneland winners, the track is not non-profit but absolutely no profit.

Don't take that above reference to WLAP too seriously. They have one program which, were it on a national hookup, you would listen to as regularly as you brush your teeth. We're referring to Tom Fike's "Amusing Lives of Jake and Jonah."

At long last we know what a Southern gentleman is. One of the characters in "Kiss The Boys Goodbye," a play that is working 'em on Broadway, says, "If you can ride like a South Carolinian, shoot like a Virginia, drink like a Kentuckian, make love like a Georgian, and be as proud as an Episcopalian, then sub, you're a Southern gentleman."

Some unkind people — notably Harry Williams, John Ed Pearce and Don Irvine — at times make sarcastic comments concerning puns, particularly our puns. To prove we are not alone in the ability to dish out punishment we offer the following reprint.

Baseball player — You didn't do so well with that millionaire's daughter; you did terrible. No hits, no runs, no homers — Aggrevator.

And everyone has heard of that certain world traveler. He wanted to take his pet cat to Europe so he wrote to Washington for a passport.

Hi Yo Silverman, away.

Construct Field House Before Pool, Say 61 Per Cent Of UK Students

To swim or not to swim, was the question put before the student body last week by a group of KERNEL interviewers, and the students — at least 61 per cent of them — decided that they wouldn't. That is if the erection of a swimming pool on the campus was to rob them of a field house.

The question, "Which would you rather have now, a field house or a swimming pool?" was asked 150 students, representing an accurate cross-section of the campus population. Of these 61 per cent answered, "Yes," to the field house proposition, while 28 per cent favored the pool had its appeal. The interviewers were instructed to mark them down as noncommittal.

No such indecision was noticeable on the question of student government. Students were asked, "Do you support an intelligent movement for student government on this campus?" The resulting score was 92 per cent pro and 8 per cent con. The affirmative stand was summed up rather neatly by an Arts and Science freshman who answered, "Yes, if it's intelligent!"

The principal spokesman for the negative was another freshman in the same college who handed us this to null over: "We don't want to be governed by our friends. Students with that much responsibility would be apt to feel that they had to be strict in order to prove that they were conscientious."

The KERNEL poll is to be conducted each week by a group of nine interviewers under the direction of the editor. Questions pertaining to timely campus issues will be asked 150 students each week. Students to be interviewed are chosen from a group representing an accurate and carefully tested cross-section of the student body. A proportionate number of students from each class and college, as well as a proportionate number of men and women are interviewed.

Students engaged in making the interviews are June Cooper, Eleanor Edwards, June Hammond, Rita Sue Leslie, Ruth Lewis, Bob Nash, Ann Parks, Margaret Ellen Smith and J. Howard Walters.

THIRD BATTALION MARCHES TODAY

Today at 11 a. m. the third battalion will inaugurate the annual spring parades in which students of the military department will show in actual performance what they have learned in the last seven months of classroom work and squad and platoon drills.

After three battalion parades, the battalions will form together to march in the four regimental parades which follow, said Col. Howard Donnelly yesterday.

"Military discipline in a well-ordered company can be likened to the performance of a good football team," Colonel Donnelly said. "The cadet officer, like the football captain, issues his orders which are carried out by each member, insuring a good performance by the organization as a whole."

Colonel Donnelly and other members of the military department will observe the performance of different companies during the parades in order to select the best company and cadet officer of the year. Prizes will be awarded these on field day. Selection of the best company is a process of elimination, he explained. Two companies will be chosen to march alone on field day. The one giving the best performance will receive the award.

"Military parades give the student lessons in cooperation and organization which will be of value to him in any business or profession," asserted the colonel.

CLARK'S BOOK

are told. The descriptions of New Orleans, Natchez and the other river towns are especially entertaining. The informal language of the book divides into a racy style, emblematic of that period, which attracts reader interest. The humorous tales illustrating the common man's entrance into the West give the book and added flavor.
Dr. Clark, who is associate professor of history at the University, has devoted three years to collecting and preparing this work. Sources for material were court records, acts of general assemblies, memoirs, periodicals, traveler's accounts, newspapers, letters and diaries.
He is also author of a textbook "History of Kentucky" published by Prentice-Hall Company in 1937, and numerous historical articles and reports, one of which "The People, William Goebel, and the Kentucky Railroads" was published in the February issue of the Journal of Southern History.

BLEACHERS WILL HOLD 1,500 FANS

Baseball, after a six-year leave of absence, will be re-introduced to Kentucky's sports colony Wednesday afternoon when Coach Frank Moseley's Wildcats cross bats with the powerful Maroons of Eastern Teachers College on Stoll Field.

Kentucky's season was opened with a two game series against Vanderbilt last week in Nashville, but tomorrow's game will be the first home appearance. Student admission will be the next page of the Student Activity book.

The diamond, located in the Southeast corner of the Stoll arena, has been manured into good shape by Moseley and Coach Gene Myers. Bleachers, capable of seating 1,500 customers, have been erected behind the back screen and along the first and third base lines.

Since practice was officially opened three weeks ago the Cats have been constantly plagued by bad weather. Previous to the Vanderbilt battles Kentucky had been able to hold out six lengthy drills. However, with two games behind them the Cat horseshoe and hickory crew are expected to be kept up like a new piano for the third hurdle on their 12 mp schedule. With sufficient practice this year's crop of Wildcat should blossom into one of the best baseball teams ever to don spikes and sliding pads for Kentucky.

Six years ago, in 1933 it was Kentucky's athletic round-up that included a diamond team. Last year opposing teams found the Cats plenty hard to lose to and but one win in 12 engagements went to Kentucky. The next year baseball, for several reasons including continued bad weather and lack of student and cash customer support, was excised from the list. Last year the sport was once again offered and a call was made for candidates although no regular games were played.

Little has come off the grape-vine concerning the strength of Eastern but the Maroons annually present a strong team. Last year Kentucky faced Eastern in a practice game that ended 6-6 after 11 innings. Coach Moseley will probably fire his ace pitcher, George Tognocci, at the Teachers. In the exhibition last spring Tognocci, a fire ball pitcher, was successful in throttling the Eastern bats.

First base in the opening circus Wednesday will be sung by Randall Phillips, a truly finished player. Second base is an open book with Carnes or Crowell opening at the post. Baine will be at short with third base probably going to Shepherd. The outfield trio will be drawn from Martin, Tom Gravette and Willoughby. Eddie Fritz will open at the catcher's post.

Following the dinner, team lettermen who will be back for next year's competition, met and elected Lloyd Ramsey and Frank Roberts captain and coach, respectively, for next season.

Incidentally, a letter to The Kernel from Martin E. O'Donoghue, co-captain of the Loyola tank-team, reveals that five members of the Kentucky team were selected on the Loyola, all-opponent squad. The Cats honored were Roberts in the 50 yard freestyle, Ramsey for the 100 yard freestyle, Hinkelman in the 100 yard breaststroke, Scott in the

BILLIARD TEAM WINS NATIONAL WIRE TOURNEY

Medals have arrived for members of the University's pocket billiards team, recently crowned champions in a national wire tourney, it was announced by the Student Union management yesterday.

Of a possible high score of 750 the Kentucky team garnered 609 points to capture the title from over 100 other colleges entered in the competition. High score for individual players also was set by Kentucky when Leslie Allison shot 150 to top all other entries.

The tourney was conducted by wire with each team telegraphing the result of their playing to a national center. Members of the Lexington team were chosen in an elimination tourney sponsored previously. Of 15 candidates who qualified, eight were selected as players for the championship match. They were: Bob Baker, John Paul, Housin Curtis, John Davis and Allison, regulars; Bill Wall, Frank Burgess and William Crowe, alternates. Charles Peterson, billiards expert, who gave an exhibition at the University last winter, originated the struggle for cue ball supremacy at the University of Minnesota five years ago.

Billiards will be added to the list of intramural sports next year, C. W. Hackmann, director, announced yesterday.

Board Recommends Air Corps For UK

Requests from directors of the Lexington Board of Commerce to University officials have been given to make application for a cadet flying corps here such as has been established in other colleges, according to Ed Wilder, secretary of the trade board. A luncheon-meeting Monday in the Lafayette hotel was arranged between board directors and University officials.

Georgia Tech, like Kentucky, is also without a pool of their own at present. They have been training in the Y. M. C. A. pool at Atlanta.
