Sigma Pi nominee wins '86 Homecoming crown

By JAMES HOUNCHELL
Contributing Writer

The weeklong activities of Homecoming 1986 came to a climax at last Saturday's football game when Michelle Grigsby was crowned homecoming queen.

Grigsby, a marketing senior, was sponsored by the Sigma Pi fraternity. The queen was nominated through her close affiliation with the fraternity. She was chosen as their chapter sweetheart this year and has been a little sister for the organization for two years.

Grigsby said although her family currently lives in Missouri, Ohio, they are originally from Kentucky. She has attended UK throughout her entire college career and has tentative plans to enter law school here next year.

Grigsby said being chosen as one of the five finalists was one of the most exciting things that has ever happened to her.

"I didn't expect to get as far as I have. When they announced my name at the Wildcat Roar, I never ever expected on Saturday night that I would be crowned the queen," said Grigsby, who said she has never participated in anything like a homecoming queen contest in her life.

"When they were ready to call the fourth runner-up I was just waiting for them to call my name. It was a very overwhelming feeling standing in front of all those people."

Grigsby also said being crowned queen hasn't really hit her yet and that halftime Saturday night happened so quickly that "it was just like a blur."

Along with the responsibilities of being homecoming queen, Grigsby is secretary and council member of the Kappa Delta sorority. She is also very active scholastically at UK. She is an honorary member of Beta Gamma Sigma, the Mortar Board, and the Golden Key National Honor Society.

'Disinformation' plan justified, Shultz says

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than any of its predecessors, the Reagan administration has sought to portray the Soviet Union as a nation intent on undercutting the United States through dissemination of false information.

Thus, reporters and analysts were surprised last week when Secretary of State George P. Shultz said leaked disinformation is an appropriate tactic if it advances the administration's foreign policy goals.

The issue came to a head after The Washington Post reported Thursday that the administration had approved a "disinformation program" six weeks ago to weaken Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi politically and make him think the United States may launch a military attack.

Shultz disputed the suggestion of a reporter at a Thursday night news conference that the Post article constituted a serious charge. While both Shultz and President Reagan agreed that no false stories were planted in the American press, Shultz's defense of the general concept of disinformation contrasted sharply with previous administration statements on the subject.

The administration has issued over the years several documents designed to show, at least implicitly, that the United States is at a disad-

Defense stars in UK victory Homecoming win biggest since '84

By CHRIS ALDRIDGE
Contributing Writer

The UK Wildcats used a vicious defense and a ball-control offense to dispose of Southern Mississippi 32-0 Saturday before a homecoming crowd of 38,102 at Commonwealth Stadium.

"We couldn't have played a whole lot better," UK coach Jerry Claiborne said. "It's one of the most complete games we've played since I've been at Kentucky."

The Wildcats, still unbeaten with a 3-0 record, recorded their first shutout since 1984, when UK pounded Kent State 42-0. The defeat was Southern Mississippi's worst since 1980, when Paul "Bear" Bryant's Alabama squad handed them a 42-7 setback.

The Wildcat offense moved the ball almost at will, burning the Golden Eagles' "Nasty Bunch" defense for 431 total yards.

"Southern Miss" played three top 20 teams, and we scored more than any against them," Claiborne said.

However, it was UK's defense that was the nastiest, not allowing Southern Mississippi a first down until halfway through the second quarter. Quarterback Andrew Anderson was sacked four times, matching the Wildcats' total in the three previous games.

"Our defense rose to the occasion," Claiborne said. "We felt like we had to get to Anderson and make him rush his passes."

The defense also produced four Southern Mississippi turnovers — two interceptions and two fumbles — matching its season total.

The game also featured a bit of the unusual, like UK's punter, Jeff Nelson, throwing to defensive end Guy Neal for a 32-yard gain.

"The snap was high," Nelson said. "I was trying to get around end. . . . Luckily, I saw Neal standing there, tossed it to him, and he took it down the field."

Nelson also ran for a first down, a la the former UK punter

Paul Calhoun, out of punt formation.

"Nelson did an excellent job," Claiborne said. "He's one of the fastest people on our squad. He's a good athlete."

On UK's second possession of the first quarter, Marc Logan had runs of 17 and 13 yards to spark UK's first drive. Quarterback Bill Ransdell then completed four of his next six passes to move the Wildcats to the Southern Miss 28-yard line.

The drive set up Joe Worley's

45-yard field goal to put UK up 3-0. Worley's kick made him UK's all-time leading scorer among all-time kickers, passing John Pierce's previous record of 130.

After forcing the Golden Eagles to punt after three plays, UK drove 75 yards in 16 plays and Worley's second field goal increased UK's lead to 6-0.

Midway through the second quarter, Southern Miss mounted its first drive of the game. With Anderson's passing doing most of the damage, the Golden Eagles advanced to UK's 28-yard line before Carsell Gardner intercepted Anderson and returned it to the UK 35.

"I dropped back and they threw the ball right at me," Gardner said.

The Wildcats then began an eight-play, 53-yard drive, ending with a 38-yard Worley field goal with nine ticks left on the clock for a 9-0 halftime lead.

On UK's second play of the second half, Ivy Joe Hunter, who gained 128 yards in the game, made his presence known by bursting off left tackle for 45 yards. The run set up Mark Higgs' 15-yard scamper for Kentucky's first touchdown, increasing the lead to 16-0 with 10:09 left in the third quarter.

Southern Miss answered with a drive of their own, before fumbling at the UK 14-yard line.

Again, the Wildcats converted the miscue into points, going 86 yards in seven plays with fullback Andy Murray barreling. See DEFENSE, Page 5

Mangione sizzling in Jazz Series show at Memorial Hall

By WILL RENSHAW
Contributing Critic

You can listen to all the Chuck Mangione albums you want, but if you haven't seen this man in concert, you've never felt so good.

From the moment this man walked out on stage in his glowing white tuxedo and trademark black hat, the walls of Memorial Hall rang with the sound of one of jazz's most celebrated modern artists.

From the looks of Mangione, you'd never believe he could command a sound so powerful or so precise. By the time the opener, "Free Watchers," ended, everyone seated in the hall felt the spirit that emanated from this musician.

From this point until the last chord in the encore, Mangione rolled notes from his flugelhorn that pierced the ears of the listener. It would be impossible to mention every aspect of this concert that was impressive, but some of the performance couldn't go without mentioning.

keyboard chair during "Belliviva," and "Land of Make Believe," and during the latter drilled out a surprisingly good solo.

Not to say that his keyboard solos aren't good. They are, but the man isn't exactly known for his keyboard playing. The evening was filled both with old standards such as "Chase the Clouds Away," which featured a young vocalist named Regina Brown singing the seldom-heard lyrics to this tune.

"Hof Consuela" featured drummer Joe Bonadio and percussionist Bill Martin in a drum battle that brought the adrenalin level of the audience to a climax early in the concert.

Although Mangione's playing is good, his main talent seems to lie in his composing. For a good part of the show Mangione sat back and let the group carry the weight, but on tunes such as "Secret of Love" and Jazz trumpet player Chuck Mangione shares his "good feeling" sound during last night's concert at Memorial Hall.

"Sweet Cheryl Lynn" and of course "Feels so Good," Mangione belted out solos ranging from smooth melodic lines to fiery high-pitched riffs.

The biggest solo talent of his group is a musician named, Chris Vadala, who is usually introduced as playing "everything."

Throughout the night Vadala, who played everything from flute to lexicon to cowbell, tossed out amazing solos. Vadala possibly reached his height during "Secret of Love" in a

Move to block veto strengthens plea to end apartheid policy

Well, it's final. The United States has decided to take a concrete stand on the issue of apartheid.

That decision was made last Friday when the Senate, in a 78-21 vote, joined the House to override President Reagan's veto of the tough sanctions. The House overrode the veto 313-83 Monday.

No, the sanctions don't order outright American disinvestment, and they also don't call for a complete trade embargo, but they do take several significant steps to pressure the Pretoria government to stop its system of severe racial discrimination.

The people of the United States have long cried for action on the part of the Reagan administration. As it stands now, Congress is the only one to listen to those cries.

These new sanctions hit South Africa where it counts — in the pocketbook. They will ban new investment and new bank loans. Several imports from South Africa have also been banned. This, despite threats by South African President P.W. Botha to stop buying U.S. wheat if the sanctions passed.

These threats were made one day before the vote went to the Senate. Obviously our senators and representatives meant what they said because the desperate attempts by the South African government did little to phase the final vote.

South Africa will no longer be receiving several important exports from the United States. Petroleum products, nuclear information and certain computers bearing U.S. names will not find their way into South African ports.

The point is that the United States has decided that something had to be done. Reagan's veto was seen for what it was—nothing more than a way to put off taking a stand against the practices of a government we do business with.

Something had to be done. America had to take a stand. Reagan wanted a theoretical stand. The U.S. legislative body wanted a stand that will have results. Results won.

Cartoon derogatory

Your fine article on Sept. 26 describing an upcoming conference on women and money to be held at the law school was accompanied by a graphic that was grossly inappropriate.

If the Kernel had covered the actual conference on Saturday, your reporter would have seen just how irrelevant and sexist the sketch was.

I suggest that you interview some of the participants in the conference, starting with Professor Lorraine Garkovich in the department of rural sociology, who was the moderator of the panel on "Women in Poverty."

She could tell you of the increasing pauperization of women in this state.

Make vs. owe the women of the UK community another article, and skip the graphics this time.

Editorial misses

In responding to your editorial on the Senate Council's recent recommendations concerning international teaching assistants, I would like to comment that neither your editorial nor the senate council has covered all of the bases.

The most glaring offense in your editorial and the accompanying cartoon was its promotion of an "us against them" attitude. One of the best recommendations of the council was to change the term "international teaching assistants" to "international" teaching assistants.

This at least is a step in the right direction with the word "international" having a neutral implication whereas the word "foreign" may denote alien, different, strange or unknown. Unfortunately, this was a recommendation which you failed to follow in your editorial.

Your editorial then goes on to imply that many students at UK fail courses that are taught by international teaching assistants because of their inability to understand the TA. An honest evaluation of these students would probably reveal that they are using hearing an international TA as an excuse when they have not put the required effort into the course.

What is more basic to the problem is an attitude of provincialism that is endemic to the UK campus, and this is where the senate council has failed to "cover the bases."

I feel that many students at UK have not been sufficiently exposed to other cultures before their entry into UK. This, of course, is understandable and is no fault of the students. But a more fruitful approach would be the recognition that having international TAs and international students on campus is an opportunity to expand one's cultural horizons. There is much to be learned in a cultural exchange.

Admittedly, an accent may be difficult to understand at first, but most students after a few classes find that they are able to understand. Those few students who fail to understand are probably those who have discovered that an open mind leads to open ears in terms of understanding someone with an accent.

I must condemn the tone of your editorial which implies that this is a global problem and neglects the real contribution that international TAs make to the educational process at UK.

Readers have rights

To begin with, I don't dislike your style Kakkie; it's very interesting. And I may not always agree with what you say, but you have the right to express your opinion ANYWAY YOU WANT. But we the readers also have the right to express our opinions. And I'm exercising this right because I found the Kernel's practice of printing an editorial to defend criticism pointless and silly.

The purpose of an editorial is to express an opinion. But you don't have to keep printing similar editorials until everyone agrees with you. So I say let the original editorials stand on its own merit; let it defend itself.

New editorial feature meant for readers

It's been brought to my attention by several Kernel staff members and a few irate letter writers, that some of my columnists have a tendency to ramble unnecessarily and unsympathetically about issues that deserve solid attention.

Now, I'm neither going to agree nor disagree with these comments as to the value of what can be found on my page, rather I am going to offer a way for you the readers to make this page reflect your feelings. (Which by the way, is, in my eyes anyway what it already does.)

Beginning Wednesday, a new feature will be found on this page.

It will pose a question about a certain issue. A different issue will be highlighted each week. The purpose is to get your reactions.

I want your responses, your suggestions, your positions, etc. You will have a week to submit your responses. The following week, the letters will be printed. And another question will be posed.

Thus far, the hot topics on the editorial page have been the Pat Robertson campaign for president of the United States; street people — what to do with/for them; and the issue of allowing 21-year-olds to drink in the residence halls.

Cynthia A. PALORMO

These are all strong issues, two of which hit very close to home, but there are many more which deserve attention.

Later this week, President Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev will travel to Iceland for a summit.

Considering the recent negative communication between Washington and Moscow, is it possible that the two sides can overcome the tension enough to make solid headway in terms of nuclear arms reduction?

And what about the recent dealings between the two superpowers? Did the Soviet government really "blink first" in the Daniloff case, as Reagan so glottingly said?

This brings up another question. Just how much is the Reagan administration keeping from the American people — for our own safety, of course?

Has our press become so enamored by this gentleman from Hollywood and his prim-and-proper wife that it's forgotten about accountability?

Now don't worry, this new feature won't just pose questions about national issues. There are too many right in our backyard demanding attention.

The presidential search committee recently came out with its criteria for selecting the next president of UK.

This, after all, is your University, so you should have a voice in choosing the kind of person chosen to run it, not to mention the right to hear what kinds of decisions the committee is making. Another form of accountability maybe?

Next semester, the doors of the faculty club will open, complete with liquor license and all. The club has been a source of controversy since the initial donation was made two years ago. Is it worth the money?

Get your pencils ready, because the point of this weekly question is to get more reaction from the UK community about various issues, events and decisions. When writing your response, please limit it to no more than 500 words so as many as possible can be printed. Letters, which must include your UK affiliation, can be dropped off (or mailed) to 035 Journalism Building.

I hope this will become another way for you to have a hand in your Kentucky Kernel.

Robertson's past filled with controversy

This editorial comes in response to several recent letters and columns in the Kernel concerning evangelist Pat Robertson's plans to run for president. In particular, I wish to address Nathan Porter's rather oblique defense of Robertson's imminent candidacy.

In his column, Porter expresses his desire that such persons as Luca Dal Monte and Kakkie Urch would "quit putting words into the candidates' mouths." I agree that it would be best to let Robertson speak for himself; toward that end, this column is dedicated to publicizing a few of Robertson's more provocative "words." I would also like to air some newly uncovered information that may shed light on Robertson's true character.

Much has been made of Robertson's history as a television evangelist and faith healer. His habit of issuing "miracle" cures while on the air is, if not ridiculous, at least politically embarrassing. Robertson claims to have cured everything from cancer to crooked toes. In 1981, he was quoted by the Washington Post as proclaiming: "A hernia has been healed. If you're wearing a brass you can take it off. It's gone! Several people are being healed of hemorrhoids and varicose veins. Thank you, Lord."

Robertson has recently gone from the ridiculous to the sublime by claiming to have turned Hurricane Gloria away from the Virginia coast through the power of prayer. He later boasted: "We rebuked that thing. We commanded it." After the same hurricane skipped Virginia and hit New York, he suggested that those living there had not prayed hard enough.

Robertson's views on most issues are already a matter of public record. He claims to represent "... those with passionate social concerns, whether it's prayer in school or whether they feel 700,000 abortions a year is murder. They desire less government with a strong defense and a resolute posture, if you will, concerning the expansion of communism."

Robertson's views on foreign policy are, indeed, almost identical to those of Reagan. He wishes to continue Reagan's costly Star Wars missile-defense program and, in a trip to Central America last June, visited a contra training camp in Honduras. He personally delivered more than $1 million worth of medical supplies to Guatemala's savage military government.

Although Robertson insists he believes in the separation of church and state, his views on many issues belie that notion. In his book An swers to 200 of Life's Most Probing Questions, Robertson writes: "Those who refuse to accept Christ will grow worse and worse in their wickedness. It will become increasingly difficult for the church and the world to coexist." One wonders whether those who do not share his views (i.e. — homosexuals, children who do not wish to pray in school, women who wish to exercise their reproductive rights, etc.) would be able to "coexist" with Robertson were he to become president.

Similarly, he rails against an American educational system which, he says, teaches children a "philosophy that is amoral, anti-Christian, humanistic..." and "... will ultimately lead toward Marxism, socialism and a communistic type of ideology." Would Robertson then want to change the curriculum to reflect a specifically Christian viewpoint?

Even more disturbing are Robertson's apocalyptic predictions of world events. He claims that Israel will expand its territories northward. He says: "This might well be the trigger that would bring the Soviet Union down on Israel for an invasion that was spoken of in the book Ezekiel, Chapter 38, and I don't think we've got a long time to wait for that."

In other words, Robertson believes that Israel, by expanding its territories, will soon beckon on a global nuclear holocaust. He goes on to say that the Bible "... specifically, clearly, unequivocally" says that Russia and other countries will enter into war and God will destroy Russia through earthquakes, volcanoes, etc. One wonders what part

Robertson possesses the same good-natured smile, self-deprecating personality and smooth public relations skills as Reagan.

Robertson hopes to play in the fulfillment of these prophecies.

Fortunately, some newly uncovered information about Robertson's past may squelch his chances for the presidency. The Sept. 16 issue of the Village Voice made public a recent letter to Indiana Rep. Andrew Jacobs from former California Congressman Paul McCloskey. The letter detailed the events of winter 1951 aboard the USS Breckinridge. Both McCloskey and Pat Robertson left San Diego aboard the Breckinridge headed for Korea.

According to McCloskey, while on the ship "Pat... spoke frankly of his desire to avoid combat and to have his father (the late Sen. A. Willis Robertson) intervene on his behalf."

McCloskey relates what occurred after the Breckinridge docked in Japan: "I believe most of us thought he was joking when he told us he was going to call his father and request transfer off the ship." It appears now that Robertson did indeed make such a call.

"My single distinct memory," wrote McCloskey, "is of Pat with a big grin on his face, standing on the dock... saying something like, 'So long you guys — good luck,' and telling us that his father had gotten him out of combat duty."

According to McCloskey, Robertson ended up in a non-combat position at division headquarters — Robertson's major duty was apparently to fly to Japan once a week and bring back booze for the officer's mess."

"I did not see Pat again," wrote McCloskey, "until turning on a television set in Southern California one morning in 1981 or 1982 and seeing his smiling face on (The 700 Club)..." He was blasting "progress" or being "soft on Communism." I couldn't help laughing over the incongruity of Pat's new views... McCloskey himself was wounded in Korea and was awarded the Navy Cross, the Silver Star and the Purple Heart.

These new facts require little interpretation on my part. In an age when the past history of a politician is often used to assess his leadership abilities (i.e. — Chappaquiddick, etc.), this information about Robertson's past is very damaging indeed.

Few political analysts believe Robertson has a serious chance of getting the Republican nomination in 1988. Most regard the popularity of Reagan as popularity of the man and not of his conservative policies.

However, Robertson possesses the same good-natured smile, self-deprecating personality and smooth public relations skills as Reagan.

If the Reagan years have taught us anything, it is that the American people are just ignorant and fearful enough to fall for a smiling demagogue who presents a shallow, romanticized vision of America. The Reagan years are the age of the primacy of images; real issues are unimportant. Robertson promises to be a reasonable facsimile of Reagan. Thus, were Robertson elected president we may be treated to the same narrow-minded, mean-spirited and hypocritical conservatism that Reagan has given us long after he has left office.

Daniiloff warns of danger of incrimination

WASHINGTON — Nicholas Daniiloff said yesterday that he delivered a packet from a suspicious Soviet contact to the U.S. embassy in Moscow last year, but did not go to the CIA or the embassy's intelligence officers.

Daniiloff, the U.S. News and World Report correspondent freed last week from Soviet spy charges, said he avoided the U.S. military attaches and intelligence officers because "I was always aware that when you work in Moscow there is this kind of danger of incrimination."

But Daniiloff, interviewed on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said it is impossible for American reporters to do a thorough job of reporting on the Soviet Union without running the risk that the Soviet KGB will plant incriminating evidence on them.

Orlov and wife land in New York

NEW YORK — Soviet dissident Yuri Orlov, freed from nearly a decade of internal exile in the deal that allowed an American reporter to leave Moscow, arrived yesterday in the United States and pledged to continue the human rights work that led to his banishment.

"I'm very glad I have begun a free life," Orlov said, speaking through an interpreter at a brief meeting with reporters after he and his wife, Irina, arrived at John F. Kennedy International Airport about 2:30 p.m. EDT.

"I can say whatever I want freely. Now, I can speak my mind about how the Soviet Union should develop."

Orlov, 62, has been in poor health but said he felt well.

Iceland impatient with slow response

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — Icelandic officials on Sunday made known their growing impatience with the Soviets for failing to say if they accept the half proposed for the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting in Reykjavik.

The officials said that with Iceland's meager technical resources stretched to the limit, they urgently need an answer on whether Moscow accepts the Hofdi, a Reykjavik seaside house, as the meeting place.

A Soviet spokesman said he was aware of this impatience and hoped an answer would be forthcoming by today.

The Iceland officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Soviets were asked to decide three days ago whether the Hofdi suits them. With the summit less than a week away, it would be extremely difficult to come up with an alternative venue, they said.

Crippled Soviet vessel under tow in Atlantic

By NORMAN BLACK Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Soviet nuclear-powered submarine crippled by fire began slowly moving again on its own power yesterday in the Atlantic, then hooked up a line to a sister vessel that towed it away from the U.S. coast, the Pentagon said.

The fire that killed three crewmen Friday appeared to be out as the sailing vessel carrying ballistic missiles limped away to the northeast from its sentry post east of Bermuda, Pentagon spokesman Maj. Larry Icenog said.

The sub began moving early yesterday afternoon under its own power at two nautical miles per hour, Icenog said. But a little more than four hours later, around 5 p.m. EDT, he reported, "the Soviet sub is under tow by the Soviet merchant vessel Krasnovodsk."

A Pentagon official, who asked not to be quoted by name, said earlier that many of the sub's crew were evacuated to nearby Soviet merchant ships. A U.S. Navy tug was in the area ready to assist if needed.

"As near as we can tell, the fire has been extinguished," said the source.

The sub normally carries about

120 people, and a Pentagon official said, "We know they have taken a lot of them (the crew) off, but we don't have a precise number."

U.S. P-3 Orion reconnaissance planes, which have been flying over the sub 502 miles east of Bermuda through the weekend, reported that smoke stopped spewing from the vessel yesterday morning and no personnel were observed on the deck of the sub, Icenog said.

President Reagan, who learned of the fire Saturday in a message from Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, offered the U.S. government's assistance, but the White House said yesterday that the Soviets have not asked for help.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, reported that fire broke out on the sub 620 miles northeast of Bermuda. The announcement said three people were killed but there was no danger of nuclear explosion or radiation contamination.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "The chances of any kind of nuclear detonation are very, very low."

He added, "You're always apprehensive when you have a vessel that is under considerable distress and this one is."

vantage at times with the Soviet Union because of Moscow's propensity to spread lies through an 'active measures' program.

A July 1982 State Department study said the public should be alert to Soviet disinformation tactics.

"It is our hope that this report will increase public awareness and understanding of Soviet active measures and thereby reduce the likelihood that people will be deceived," the study said.

On Aug. 29 of this year, two weeks after the Post story claimed that the administration had approved the alleged disinformation campaign against Gadhafi, the State Department made public three documents it said were forgeries designed to discredit U.S. foreign policy.

Department officials were unable to identify the forgers but suggested that Moscow was the prime suspect. One of the documents was a speech in which Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger purportedly said the Strategic Defense Initiative was designed to give the United States a first strike capability.

Another forgery, mailed to The Washington Post and other publications, described an alleged United States Information Agency campaign to ensure that the West European media would receive reports exaggerating the death and destruction resulting from the nuclear power accident at Chernobyl in the Soviet Union last April.

Ironically, it was just four days before the forgeries were made public by the State Department that, according to the Post article last week, the alleged U.S. disinformation plan against Gadhafi bore fruit with a story in The Wall Street Journal.

The Post's "false information," said the United States and Libya were on a collision course and that Libya once again was backing terrorism.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes insisted at the time and again on Thursday the intelligence information cited by the Journal was accurate.

"I know of no decision to go out and tell lies to the media," Shultz said, adding, however, that if there were "ways to make Gadhafi nervous, why shouldn't we?"

over from four yards out for a 22-0 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, Southern Miss fumbled the return and UK recovered at the Golden Edge 25-yard line, setting up a fourth Worley field goal for a 25-0 lead.

The mistakes continued on Southern Miss' next drive, when Ray

Gov intercepted Anderson and returned the ball to the Golden Edge 25-yard line. One play later, Kansas City found Tim Jones in the end zone for a 13-yard touchdown.

Worley's extra point pushed UK's lead to 32-0 and made him the school record holder for consecutive extra points with 42.

Lady Kats volleyball drops two

Staff reports

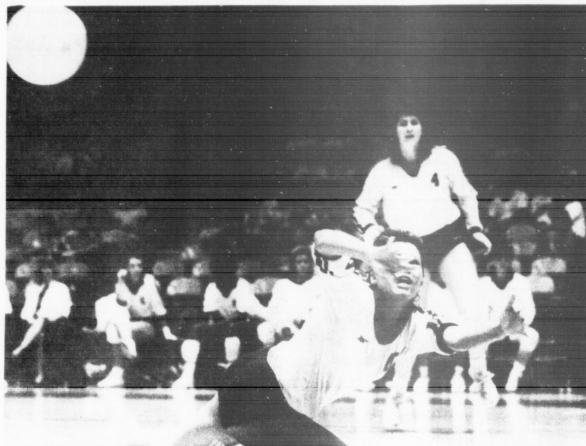

The UK women's volleyball team lost two home matches over the weekend, and dropped its record to 9-5 overall.

On Friday, UK fought seventh-ranked Texas down to the wire before losing in five games, 13-15, 15-11, 11-15, 15-10, 16-14. Yesterday Southern Illinois swept Kentucky in three games, 15-13, 15-16, 15-11.

Kentucky coach Kathy DeBoer said she knew that Southern Illinois would give her team all it could handle.

"We knew that they were good when we scheduled them. We were flat today and they were enthusiastic about playing us."

UK's Sandra Lunney tries to return the ball during Kentucky's loss to Texas on Friday.
