THE KENTUCKY KERNEL

OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER OF THE STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

PUBLISHED SEMI-WEEKLY DURING THE SCHOOL YEAR EXCEPT HOLIDAYS ON EXAMINATION PERIODS

Published at the Post-Office at Lexington, Kentucky, as second-class matter under the Act of March 3, 1879.

LOUIS T. IGLEHART Editor-in-Chief

The American Form Of Hara-Kiri

The KERNEL wishes to apologize for not running in Tuesday's issue a front-page banner headline relevant to the appearance of Dr. Walter Judd on the campus Tuesday and Wednesday. His talks deserved some recognition.

Speaking with clipped words and machine-gun rapidity, this world traveler and medical missionary to China made inadequate audiences in Memorial Hall "take it" while he bombarded with facts and figures concerning the suicidal and determining part this country is playing in the disintegration of China.

In stressing the necessity for knowing what's going on in the world—a point stressed so heartily by many of our better speakers that it may eventually penetrate—Doctor Judd touched a vulnerable spot in the American's armor. Sensational exposes of World War atrocity stories and propaganda have led the present generation to place tongue in cheek when told any story of unsavory action. "It must be propaganda," they say. "It was in the last war."

It strikes us as amusing somehow—the thought of slightly pompous military men scurrying around trying to find missing parts of a machine gun.

Now don't get us wrong. We are unalterably opposed to any violation of law and order, for we are strong advocates of law and order. Taking those parts was most illegal, and besides, it was against the law. So we can't condone it.

But to do think the military should be more careful of its property. You just can't go leaving a machine gun lying around anywhere; it's not sound tactics.

Goodness knows President Roosevelt is spending enough money on the Army and Navy, without then wasting it, losing parts and such.

It wouldn't have been so bad had those parts been lost gloriously on the field of battle in a great charge that put to rout the vicious Huns, or slinky Japs, or somebody.

But to have disappeared at a dance, thought—these are some of the reasons for our blundering handling of students.

"Why is it that the college has been the last educational division to feel the need to examine itself? Why have the public schools and even the graduate schools forged ahead in reorganization while the college has moved with such 'tar-riffle' flow?" As Zook says: "The faculty dispenses knowledge but neglects education and the formulation of educational policy."

Because of these and other challenges, the University's arts and sciences college established recently a special "committee on the improvement of teaching" to see what could be done to correct such difficulties on this campus. The result was a plan for setting up arts and sciences "policy committee."

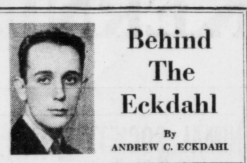

After two lengthy and somewhat personalized discussions, the plan was adopted last Monday by a vote of 39 to 35. The program provided for the establishment of policy committees for each separate department, and for a 12-member policy group for the college as a whole.

Unfortunately, THE KERNEL in reporting the acceptance erred slightly as to the background of the plan. One particularly paragraph in Tuesday's issue said that the project "is based upon a policy program employed for the past several years by Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio."

We have since been informed by members of the committee which drew up the report that although the plan is in some ways similar to those in effect at Oberlin and several other American colleges, it originated with members of the UK group.

At any rate, the program appears to be predominantly native, conceived generally to correct arts and sciences curricula, and designed specifically to "raise staff morale and make for more faculty democracy."

THE KERNEL commends the teaching-improvement committee for its efforts to improve upon an apparently unsatisfactory system, and may the faculty accord the new plan a fair trial.

Behind The Eckdahl By Andrew C. Eckdahl

To everyone, sooner or later, comes the startling realization that education destroys the exuberant idealism of adolescence.

The cherished dreams, the steadfast belief of one in his infallibility as an individual, fade before the sometimes conscious, sometimes unconscious knowledge that never is but an insignificant atom in a world he never made.

This was brought out starkly Tuesday by our fellow writer, Bob Ammons, in his "What They Think" column.

Mr. Ammons asked, "What subjects would you like to have discussed at the student-faculty forums now being conducted by the International Relations Club?"

A freshman said, "Should national defense be increased at the expense of relief measures?"

A senior answered, "How to get jobs when you graduate?"

It seems that Rich is the secretary of his Sunday school. Now Sunday morning about noon he was called to the telephone, told that the officers of the Sunday school were going to meet that afternoon.

Being a conscientious chap, he struggled into his clothes and managed to arrive at the meeting only a few minutes late.

He voted for everything, including buying the church a new rug, and even voiced his opinion on an issue or so. He noticed that most of those present regarded him suspiciously, but thought nothing of it at the time.

Later he found out that the Sunday school officers' meeting had been postponed, and that he had been attending a session of the deacons and elders of the church.

Now don't get us wrong. We are unalterably opposed to any violation of law and order, for we are strong advocates of law and order.

But to do think the military should be more careful of its property. You just can't go leaving a machine gun lying around anywhere; it's not sound tactics.

Goodness knows President Roosevelt is spending enough money on the Army and Navy, without then wasting it, losing parts and such.

It wouldn't have been so bad had those parts been lost gloriously on the field of battle in a great charge that put to rout the vicious Huns, or slinky Japs, or somebody.

To the Editor: This message represents the opinions of 15 boys who live at a certain boarding house.

We are of one mind in considering it a shame that so few of the University students actually appreciate the feats of our various units. Latest proof of this is the small crowd that turned out at the assembly for the basketball team Tuesday. We feel such things should be brought to light and feel either you or Joe Crason should call attention to this.

Shannon On Propaganda

Those On The 'Right' Wing, Oppositonists To Changes, Also Have Their Propaganda

Today The Kansas pressman excerpts from the third in a series of the radio talks made by Dr. J. J. Shannon, professor of political science.

Today, I shall discuss what I have chosen to call Propaganda of the Right. My choice of a term illustrates the subtleties of propaganda analysis. As I use the term Right I mean the view which opposes the opposite of Left, or those who wish to alter the present set-up. I am trying to avoid the words "conservative" and "reactionary"—words of definite propaganda content. As I employ the word "Right" I mean to imply those persons who are content and satisfied with those who fear progress, revolution or change, or whatever we choose to call it.

We Are Lethargic Citizens

The first aim of the propagandist of the Right is to exaggerate the good things of the present and to make the ills of change appear greater than they are. He has in his favor the vast advantage of human inertia. . . Lethargy is characteristic of most of us in our public attitudes. We like to be let alone—we like to believe that everything is good as it is. Most of us are optimists. When sick we believe we will soon be well. We want to get well so we make the wish father to the thought.

Unfortunately, there always comes a time when the patient does not get well. The same is true of society, but when it comes the Right propagandist insists that we should not diagnose but really carry on as always.

East Refuge of a Scoundrel

Years ago Dr. Samuel Johnson stated that patriotism was the last refuge of a scoundrel. Whether true or not, at least every propagandist tries to wrap himself in the flag. One has only to recall the claims of those persons involved in the oil scandals of 1922 to point out how the guilty parties pleaded patriotism as a defense even though they were conspiring to defraud the United States government of its vital oil reserves necessary to national defense. In its worst form, this type of propaganda is extremely ludicrous. The effort of Fritz Kahn and his Bund to wrap themselves in the American flag and embellish their cause with the name of George Washington is the silliest attempt through similar efforts of the Ku Klux Klan are not forgotten.

Use of Term "Red"

Another device of the Right propagandist is to ridicule or denounce opponents as reds or pinks. Recently every effort has been made

Warm Hands In Children Equal Sociability

Greater warmth of the back of the hand of a child indicates a better social disposition, whereas, less warmth indicates a deficiency of social traits. Dr. Thelma E. Brown, psychology department, has discovered after extensive experimentation.

With 4 or 5-year-old children, Doctor Brown found that there is a positive relationship between the back of hand temperature and sociability, emotional control, sense of social adjustment, attractiveness of personality and effective energy.

The temperature of one of the children used in the experiments was about 87 degrees Fahrenheit. Her score for sociability was 93; social adjustment, 82; personal adjustment, 85; emotional control, 99; and effective energy, 99. Perfect score would be 100.

In contrast a child whose temperature was 82.5 degrees made an extremely poor disposition score; 48 for sociability; 25 for adjustment; 45 for emotional control; 41 for attractive personality; and only one for effective energy.

Doctor Brown explains the term effective energy as that energy not used for the internal uses of the body to maintain life, but spent in social behavior.

According to many leading psychologists, a large part of an adult's emotional nature is established in childhood. By using results from Doctor Brown's tests it may be possible to correct children who show anti-social dispositions.

The hand test also has possible uses in education and medicine, especially in connection with improved diet, use of hormones and other methods to develop more energy in the child, psychologists believe.

WPA Workers Have Privilege To Strike, Internationalists Say

By VINCENT CROWDIS, Kernel News Editor

For the first time in the International Relations class series of open discussions on major political problems, a conclusion was reached when participants in the two-hour forum Wednesday afternoon in Lafayette hall agreed that the WPA should have the privilege of striking as a method of protest.

After Jack Lovett, arts and sciences junior, outlined the issues to be considered, Sam Caddy, CIO representative, stated his views against the right of the WPA workers to strike.

The government is supposedly operated on a non-profit basis, he said, therefore striking against it is different from striking against private, profit-sharing organizations.

If groups are allowed to strike against the government, they will destroy that government, the labor leader declared. The ballot box is the proper place to remedy WPA grievances, he added.

Dr. E. G. Trimble, political science department, took the counter stand. Although he conceded that as a matter of practice it is "politically and economically unwise to strike" theoretically the WPA can strike. George Washington struck in the Revolution, he pointed out.

Doctor Trimble defended his thesis by saying that "the gain will ultimately be great enough in the community to justify the strike." He called the recent Minneapolis WPA indictments "indefensible."

Approaching the question from the legal standpoint, Dean Alvin E. Evans said "the theory is that the government is not subject to the same restraints as private individuals" and that "there is no such thing as a right to strike against the government."

Truman A. Morris, president of the International Relations club, declared that to deny the WPA the right to strike is "antocratic in its highest form."

He then advocated that the WPA should be allowed to strike as a method of protesting their grievances. No one disputed his thesis.

Bachman To Talk On Sex Hormones

Dr. Werner Ernst Bachman, associate professor of organic chemistry at the University of Michigan, will speak before the Lexington section of the American Chemical Society at 7:30 p. m. Monday, March 11, Room 214, Kastle hall. The subject of his speech will be "Synthesis of Sex Hormones."

A dinner will be held in the cafeteria at 6:00 p. m. Reservations should be made with J. L. Gabbard, chemistry department.

Dr. Bachman received the Henry Russell Award in 1933, and is a Rockefeller Foundation Fellow.

PAY-OFFS DUE NEXT WEEK IN ANNEX

Six frat squads assured themselves of positions in the play-offs of the intramural basketball tournament as scheduled play drew near the finish this week.

They were Sigma Nu, SAE, and Kappa Alpha in League A, and Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Kappa Alpha, and SAE in League B.

In division 1 of the independent league, the Floyd County Mountaineers, led by Bill Allen, who dropped ten field goals through the hoop to place himself high on the individual scoring chart, won their fifth and final game Wednesday night over the hapless Engineers, 65-8, finish in first place.

The "K" Club swept into second place by rolling over the Dancy Club 23-11, despite an attempted comeback by the losers in the second half. Thornton was top-scorer for the winners with 8 points.

The "K" Club meets the King Kong All-stars tonight in the decisive game in loop II. Although the All-stars have played outstanding ball in the league this year, they have suffered a defeat—at the hands of the Lexingtonians.

The "K" Club paced by McCubbin and Spears, overwhelmed the Lexingtonians in their encounter Tuesday night 50-2.

Fraternity Leagues: The fraternity A league teams were actionless during the week, but in the B league two teams clinched the championships of their respective divisions.

In division 1 the Lambda Chi's clinched their title by remaining off court while their leading opponents, the Sigma Nus, were upset by a Sigma Chi quintet, 25-17. Edwards paced the winners with four field goals.

The SAEs drew another championship into their intramural net Tuesday night by trouncing the Delta Chis to finish undefeated in division 3. Nevett led the winners in the 23- victory with a total of 12 points.

Division 2 teams got themselves all tied in knots during the week, with three teams pulling into view of the coveted championship.

The P Kaps took the inside track with three wins and no losses, but if they should drop a decision to the Phi Taus in their final game they would be pulled back into a dead heat with the winner of the ATO-Phi Sig duel.

In League C Delta Tau Delta meets ATO and SAEs tonight with Alpha Gamma Epsilon tonight in what amount to the semi-final rounds of the tournament.

Regular season play in every league will be completed tonight. Tournaments in the fraternity A, B, and C leagues and a play-off between the winner of the two divisions of the independent league will be held next week.

Certain of a position in the tournaments are the following teams: League A, Sigma Nu, SAE, Kappa Alpha; League B, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Kappa and SAE.

Calling 'Em Wild

By JOE CREASON

The best illustration of a shining example is an unpowdered nose, but the most glaring example, to my calloused mind, of gross neglect, indifference, etc., was the pygmy-sized crowd that didn't at all pack Alumni gym Tuesday morning to pay tribute to Kentucky's Southeastern conference basketball champions.

Personally, I think it's a heluva note when fewer than 1,200 students turn out for such a meeting.

To Coach Adolph Rupp and members of the team it must have been a terrible disappointment, like taking four months to paint a house and then finding they had the wrong address, when, even after all classes had been dismissed, just one side of the Alumni-creaker-box was filled. The other section was as bare as a Scotchman's knee.

Well I know that to criticize is like kicking, it costs nothing and it's a darn pleasant thing to do, so I don't propose to put myself up as a critic of others. But neither do I sell pencils on the corner, tin cup in hand. In short, I am not blind.

Cats Didn't Do Much: Of course all Kentucky did take a year in hoop heroics was to do a flu-ridden team that was just one sneeze away from a long hospital rest and win its fourth conference title in seven years, a feat no other Southern team has done since basketball began from the peach basket goal stage.

Perhaps the reason for this apparent indifference lies in the fact that the average collegian still looks at an athlete as just another transient, in school just for four years of muscle service, and solidly built not only in body but also between the ears. This is one of the most erroneous beliefs since the idea got out that the earth was flat.

Another Day For Athletes: The day is just, at least in Kentucky, when athletes makeered in poultry husbandry, music appreciation, butter and egg judging, blacksmithing or tire vulcanizing and were unfit for anything upon completion of an athletic education.

Such men were better suited to walk up for their diplomas in cap and bells instead of cap and gown. Take members of the Kentucky basketball squad as excellent examples of this changing trend in athletes. To draw a comparison, pick up the first 12 men you pass on the campus and I'll lay you 2-1 odds the cagers will present more widely scattered lines of study and will show higher averages. For ex-

Catfish Drop Narrow Decision To DePauw On Northern Tour

Blues Lead In First, Lag In Scoring By 43-41 Count

In the first stop on a three meet Northern tour, Kentucky's pool-less swimming team dropped a closely contested 43-41 meet to undefeated DePauw university Wednesday night to mark the third loss of the season for the Wildcats.

Despite the fact that Kentucky held a 5-4 lead in first, DePauw gained enough second and third points to decide the meet. For Kentucky the loss brought its record for the year to three losses as compared to three wins and one tie.

Back To Original Discussion: As I browse here at my dust-covered Hemington it is obvious to me that what was planned to be a glittering, cutting essay on student indifference has sagged, drooped and otherwise lapsed into other channels. Still, the moon will go down and the sun come up before they convince me proper appreciation can be paid a truly remarkable basketball team—one that stands out like a sore thumb in a red bandage—by slipping sodas, chewing straws and passing fast conversation in the Grill.

But let us not get excited. Let us take a U.S. stride. After all, the sale of sodas stimulates trade, and that's what the country needs, and that's what the country needs, and we rally around the flag, men, and come out of the depression. (adv.)

crack medley relay team of Bud Scott, Lloyd Ramsey and Frank Roberts, which has been defeated but once in five years, stroked off with top honors. DePauw pulled even with a win in the 230 yard free stroke, but the Cats again went to the top when Roberts churned home a winner in the 60 yard freestyle.

After dropping the diving challenge, the Cats went into a short lived lead on wins in the 150 yard backstroke, and 100 yard freestyle.

The deciding points came in the 440 yard freestyle where DePauw gained its advantage. The meet was concluded when the Cats gained top honors in the dash relay.

Tonight the Cats are billed to face the strong Loyola team in Chicago and the tour will be concluded against Armour Tech, also of Chicago, Saturday night. The 12 man team, including James S. Shropshire, faculty adviser, will return to Lexington Sunday.
