

Decision may come today

Student voting right case appealed

The continuing bid by five UK students to reopen voter registration books in Fayette County was to meet a critical test in Cincinnati today when a three-judge appeals panel hears a trio of voting rights cases.

The hearing is the latest step in a series of appeals by College of Law faculty member Ken Guido which could ultimately lead to a decision in the Supreme Court. Guido was turned down Tuesday by District Court Judge Max Swinford in his attempt to seek an injunction to force the county to register student voters.

Wednesday in Cincinnati, a U.S. Sixth District Court judge ordered special hearings to consider the UK case and two other student voting cases from Ohio. Guido was to appeal Swinford's rejection of the injunction at 2 p.m. today.

The empaneling of a three-judge appeals board on one day's notice is considered extremely unusual and could be a sign of the court's concern with the student voting rights issue, Guido said Wednesday night.

Judge Swinford had rejected the motion for an injunction as "entirely unreasonable," saying "if ever there was a case that was hurried at all, this is it."

Guido contended that the refusal to reopen registration books, which would give students power to vote in upcoming city elections, is in violation of the 14th and 26th amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

Those amendments guarantee that all persons shall be subject to identical voter registration requirements, Guido claimed.

If his appeal of Swinford's decision is turned down today, the next step for the plaintiffs is the Supreme Court. Guido said preparations have already been made to submit an appeal to Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart.

The UK case would be the first of its kind to be considered by the high court.

Apathy, hecklers dampen

Moratorium Day spirit

By KATIE McCARTHY
Kernel Staff Writer

Moratorium participants were difficult to find on campus Wednesday, Oct. 13 was nationally set aside for a moratorium on regular activities and a day of reflection on the U.S. policy in Vietnam and those who have died for it.

It was to be a day of strike on campuses across the nation, but Jill Raymond, coordinator of SMC, said "UK is not striking, because UK will never strike."

The lack of enthusiasm was evident everywhere. The activities planned by the Student Mobilization Committee were ignored or poorly attended. The three war films presented in the Student Center Theater at 10 a.m. and 12:30 made a total of two dollars in contributions, not helping much in defraying the $50-plus spent, estimated by a SMC member.

Nearly 500 professors and instructors were contacted by letter urging them to call off classes or relate their class to the Moratorium. David Brown of the SMC, said they were "pleased" with the five percent response from the teachers.

Mikell Grafton said her sociology professor mentioned the Moratorium in class but "no one was aware it was Moratorium day."

The soap-suds filled fountain in front of the Patterson Office Tower was the setting for a Guerrilla Theater. However, before things really got underway, a group of shouting hecklers tore down the Viet Cong flag, erected as a "reminder of what is going on over there," according to Rayner Scott.

The flag floating in the soap suds put a damper on the Guerrilla Theater players. Scott said the hecklers were "badly misinformed" and "showed the absurdity of what's going on in this free country."

Gay Alliance plans

The UK gays are having trouble getting it together, according to a Gay Alliance spokesman.

The spokesman, who wishes to remain anonymous, said the chapter plans to submit an application soon to become a recognized student organization. He said trouble in finding an advisor and sponsor is slowing them down.

They are also having trouble getting publicity, the spokesman said. At present, the Kernel is the only newspaper that has printed their advertisements. On-campus posters publicizing Gay Alliance meetings have been torn off of bulletin boards almost as fast as they are put up.

However, the Alliance has won support from some campus organizations, including the Student Mobilization Committee. They are also supported by organizations in Los Angeles, Chicago and Louisville.

The spokesman said the Alliance has approximately five "straight" backers and 20 active members.

Council on women asks for reason

Figures on salaries broken down by sex will not be released

By BONNI BROCKMAN
Kernel Staff Writer

President Otis A. Singletary is being asked to make a statement concerning administration officials' refusal to provide Student Government's Council on Women's Concerns (CWC), with information on UK salaries broken down by sex.

Ms. Margaret Wendelsdorf, chairwoman of CWC, mailed Singletary a letter Wednesday, asking for a statement "as to why the University is refusing to cooperate on this matter as it leaves the impression that the University has something to hide."

In her letter, Wendelsdorf also asked Singletary: ▶ to comment on the complaint charging UK with sex discrimination in employment, which was filed with the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Sept. 27.

▶ to release the names of the people on a rumored University committee to investigate the status of women on a University-wide basis.

▶ to appoint representatives selected by the CWC to work with this committee.

Singletary was unavailable for comment Wednesday night.

Wendelsdorf's letter was prompted by her inability to obtain data on UK salaries broken down by sex for a pamphlet the Council on Women's Concerns is preparing on the status of women.

Zumwinkle reverses decision

Last August, Wendelsdorf asked Dr. Robert Zumwinkle, vice president for student affairs, for UK salary information. After agreeing in a letter Sept. 7, to help Wendelsdorf obtain the data, Zumwinkle reversed his decision in another letter Oct. 6.

Zumwinkle's second letter to Wendelsdorf read in part:

"In view of the pending complaint with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare charging the University with discrimination on the basis of sex, and on the advice of counsel, the University is temporarily not providing the requested information to the Council on Women's Concerns.

"In the event that it should later be advisable to release the information to your organization, I shall get in touch with you."

Zumwinkle said Wednesday the University had intended to provide the Council with the information Wendelsdorf requested, but the HEW complaint changed matters.

"Information could affect deliberations"

"The release of this information could affect deliberations," Zumwinkle said.

Asked if the information would harm UK, he said, "I'm really not in the position to say."

Zumwinkle also said it would be difficult for the University to compile salary data broken down by sex because records of this are not kept. However, he said the data could be compiled.

"Delaying tactic"

Wendelsdorf called the University's refusal to release the data a "delaying tactic." The University

David Brown, another Guerrilla, said, "Original events planned were called off because of hassles from hecklers." From then on everything was spontaneous, according to Brown.

Jim Eastburn of the SMC commented, "You need one hell of a stunt to enthuse people on this campus." But Wes Cowan attributed the apparent apathy to the fact "the war isn't an issue anymore." Don Cassidy, a veteran of the 1969 Moratorium in Washington, D.C., said, "I didn't even know it was Moratorium Day."

Gary Sandiford, a second lieutenant in the AFROTC spent the day going to class and drilling his squadron. He said, "Civilians tell the military to be over there and I support the military." Sandiford said he was against American involvement in Vietnam and he agreed with the SMC on most points. "Go over to the AFROTC and talk to them, they're against the war, too," he said.

A "basically free" literature table run by the SMC was strategically located next to the Marine recruiters in the Student Center. Most of the pamphlets and leaflets were free, but the books, posters, and buttons could be obtained at a cost.

Browsers were plentiful but sales were few according to an SMC worker. Two Marines left their recruiting post for a look at the anti-war literature.

probably feels the information would be incriminating, she said. She said the University could make token gestures to improve the status of UK women before the HEW investigatory team is sent to the campus.

After a complaint is filed, the usual procedure is for the HEW Compliance Agency to interview employes at the business in question.

"When, and not if, HEW sends down its investigators," Wendelsdorf said, "the University will have to give HEW the information on salaries."

If HEW finds discrimination, the business must develop an affirmative action program with goals and timetables for specific action to remedy the discriminatory practices.

Will take time
"But it takes a while to get machinery moving," Wendelsdorf said. "The longer HEW delays in sending its investigators here, the longer it will take for the University to put into action concrete steps to stop discrimination."

Wendelsdorf is asking students to write their senators and representatives and urge them to ask HEW officials to send investigators to UK immediately.

The complaint charging UK with sex discrimination was filed by the Women's Equity Action League. The charge was based on a report on the status of UK women, prepared in last semester's course, "Women in Contemporary Society."

The biennial battle for cash

1972: Harbingers of another bleak year for universities

Underneath 'all the student criticisms of administrative "bungling", behind all the maneuvering for power in the press and at closed meetings, a fact of life about universities seems to stand out.

Our college and universities—from UK to Yale—are in financial trouble. Some say deep financial trouble. It is a concern that should transcend all political and ideological boundaries.

Despite the idealism of a "free university" and the cries of wasted expenditures, it is a grim fact that our schools need money, and lots of it, to survive.

Signs of panic are beginning to appear in journals across the nation. The Sept. 27 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education reports that over 100 private colleges and universities "have exhausted their liquid assets and are hovering on the brink of financial disaster."

The same issue reports that state university tuition fees have jumped an average of eight percent nationally, while enrollment has risen by seven percent.

Things are even worse at UK, which bore a 10 percent enrollment jump this year and has only a dim chance of winning any budget increase. Thus the University faces another in an increasing string of years in which the quality of education is sacrificed for an increase in the quantity of students in the classroom.

Locally, the reaction to UK's dilemma is varied. The state's four regional colleges, smelling a cash bonus for themselves, are trying desperately to wrest control of the community college system—a powerful budget team—from the Lexington administration.

Meanwhile, UK, in the dark depths of its biennial budget preparation, is launching its own counterattack to retain control by moving Board of Trustees' meetings to the community college campuses.

That's only one sign of the dirty backstage goings-on, and every action is doubly significant in light of the upcoming gubernatorial election and the 1972 meeting of the Kentucky General Assembly. Sadly, the life of a college administrator seems to be one of a perennial battle for cash.

The General Assembly, which is said to be cool to budget increases for the universities, should remember that it is money—and by implication, the failure to provide an adequate educational atmosphere—which has led to both student discontent with college life and the callous political plays by our state universities.

No school, including our own, should be forced by a balance sheet to compromise its educational integrity. Reasonable funding of everyone can insure that that doesn't happen again.

Saffron House

New drug center offers hope for users

Within two weeks a badly needed drug center will open on this campus. Ever since the Zoo closed last year, students suffering adverse reactions to drugs or students simply seeking drug information have not had a safe place to go.

Hopefully that will be changed now. The Student Government-operated Saffron House will have doctors on call 24 hours a day and trained volunteers.

But the important aspect of the new drug center is that apparently it will be free of police harassment. Ms. Rayner Scott, chairwoman of the SG Drug Clinic Committee, says that Lexington's chief narc, Frank Fryman, has agreed not to send agents to the house.

Probably the most important aspect of a successful drug clinic is that the person suffering from adverse effects feels absolutely safe from prosecution. This is the key that the new drug clinic seems to offer.

For far too long drug users have felt like there is no place that they can go to get help and still avoid prosecution. This has resulted in many drug users simply failing to do anything about their problems. There have been numerous reports about drug users with hepatitis and other diseases resulting from drug use refusing to seek help because of a fear of prosecution.

Hopefully that time has ended. Drug users now have another alternative to keeping their problem a secret and endangering their health or turning themselves over to Frank Fryman.

Paying to park

I wish that you would please explain something that is really burning me and some of my friends up. The "C" parking lot across from the Chemistry & Physics Building near sorority row charges $1.00 parking for U.K. football games. The people who have "C" stickers have paid $20 to park there and I feel it is unfair that they have to pay in an area which they have already paid for. Please do something about this.

Views of war reflect 'body count mentality'

By NEILL MORGAN
Kernel Staff Writer

Many American views of the war in Vietnam reflect a "body count mentality" a small group of people were told at a meeting of the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) Wednesday night.

The speaker was Bill Harrod who has spent four out of the last six years working with the Vietnam Christian Service (VCS). The VCS is similar to the Peace Corps in operation but the workers are from different countries.

Harrod, who arrived home from Vietnam last night, said Americans look at the Vietnamese just as figures. He said to want to end the war to keep GIs from getting killed or for economic reasons at home are good reasons but "the best reason is that the war is just immoral".

Harrod said the recent presidential election in South Vietnam was a farce. He added that Thieu probably would have won a free election because "the people have lived in chaos too long to want a different government and the turmoil it would bring."

Because of this and the fact no government could exist without American support, he said Thieu was in no danger of overthrow. However, he said "the Thieu government is strictly military and does not have any real support of the masses of people."

Stamps sought for center

The North End Community Center in Lexington is asking for donations of Top Value trading stamps which will fund activities for neighborhood children.

The stamps will be first prize in a raffle to be held sometime in November. The proceeds from the raffle will go to the Volunteer Recreation Program of the Center to finance an arts and crafts class, field trips and other activities which would be impossible without this help.

Anyone wishing to contribute some stamps can call either Dan Gossett at 254-0791 or John Rotter at 233-1883 before Nov. 1, and the stamps will be picked up.

Highly-touted Vols here Friday

Kittens face difficult test

By CARL FAHRINGER
Kernel Staff Writer

Friday afternoon at Stoll Field, UK's freshman football team takes on as powerful a foe as they would ever want to run into. A lesser team might roll over and play dead.

But big, personable freshman coach Joe Haering has the Kittens sky high and is hoping for a big crowd to witness the battle against awesome Tennessee.

"They think they have the greatest freshman team in the history of the school," Haering said. "We exchanged films, and we know that they have some tremendous athletes."

UT did a lot of recruiting in Kentucky last year, and the Vols were involved in an embarrassing incident in Louisville.

It seems All-State tailback Steve Jewell of Butler signed a national letter-of-intent with the University of Louisville an hour before UT coaches arrived at his home, expecting to sign him themselves. But the Vols still ended up with a bumper crop, as was evidenced by their 51-13 drubbing of Vanderbilt.

"We've got to be ready to play," Haering observed. "And I think we will."

Will Lewis play?

One point of concern is Ernie Lewis, the injured quarterback from Elizabethtown. Haering hopes that the former All-Stater will see some action Friday.

"We hope he'll be ready to play," he said.

Lewis' arm seems to be in good shape, but he has been held out of contact drills for a month.

"He won't be starting anyway," Haering said.

That means that fans will not see the change in offensive strategy which has been speculated in the case of Lewis' return, since Ernie is basically a passer and the Kittens' offense has been geared primarily to the run.

Lewis' limited action will also prolong speculation about his height (5-10) being sufficient for an SEC quarterback. Haering declined to wager a guess on this vital point for the future of Wildcat football, but he did seem sure of Lewis' value to the freshmen.

"He can help me this year," he said, "either as a backup quarterback or as my regular quarterback."

Getting the starting nod again will be Mike Cassidy, a Fort Campbell product who was the Kittens' signal-caller for only a week and a half before his successful debut against the Dayton frosh. Haering has "really been satisfied with him" at that position.

"He's quite an athlete," Haering said. "He put out a lot of individual effort against Dayton. He still has a lot to learn as a technician quarterback."

At the other backfield slots of the wishbone-T, Rick Fromm, Ben Thomas and Rick Schmitt will see a lot of action at halfback, while John Kumpfmiller will man the fullback position.

Steve White will start at split end in place of Roger Peterman Friday, and Rick Nuzum has been moved from defensive end to offensive tackle.

Other starters on offense include Tom Farmer at tight end, Steve Schoenbacher at tackle and Ned Lidvall and Pat Murphy at guard.

The only defensive change from the Dayton game is the left end spot vacated by Nuzum. The other front linemen will remain Pat Donley, Ken Fuller and Doug Sexton. The linebacking crew will once again consist of Ed Gusky, Steve Parker, Tom Ranieri and Mike Emanuel.

Secondary faces test

The secondary is a place of interest to Wildcat fans, who hope to find some good prospects to fill that weak spot in the varsity defense next year. The freshman defensive backs will get a stern test Friday from UT's sure-handed receivers like Kentucky product Darrell Culver, a Butler All-Stater that U of L's dynamic Lee Corso could not lure away from Knoxville.

Freshman tryout

Freshman basketball tryouts will be held at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 15 at Memorial Coliseum. Coach Joe Hall invites any freshmen who are interested to attend.

"fight oppression" and to help people be themselves.

There are a lot of misconceptions about the organization, the spokesman said.

"This is not a cruising ground. We didn't form this so we could look for pick-ups. What we're trying to do is provide a place with absolute security so that gay people don't have to resort to gay bars. There's no security there because bars are open to police busts and publicity," he said.
