32-Page Supplement Will Appear In May Issue

A special supplement on U.S. higher education in 1958 is coming in the May issue of the "Kentucky Alumnus." Alumni magazine editors and publishers throughout the country have joined in this first cooperative effort to tell the story of American higher education in a dramatic and panoramic way. In 32 pages of pictures and text, the supplement will present the immense diversity of higher education in its variety of objectives, its problems, its restlessness, and its new approaches. The text has been written by a group of alumni editors who have been at work on it for more than a year. One of the country's leading photographers, Erich Hartmann of Magnum, has taken the pictures. The supplement will appear in more than 150 alumni magazines whose combined circulation is 1,300,000.

Ground Is Broken For UK Medical Center

BOARD NAMES CENTER TO HONOR GOV. CHANDLER

Groundbreaking ceremonies symbolizing the start of construction of the University of Kentucky new medical center were held on campus on December 10.

The UK Board of Trustees, in meeting just a few hours before the ceremony, chose "The Albert B. Chandler Medical Center" as its official name.

More than 300 persons gathered on the Experiment Station farm, near the junction of Rose and Limestone streets, to witness the event.

During the ceremony UK President Dickey reviewed briefly the history of the center and spoke of President-emeritus Herman L. Donovan as the man who brought it to the point where it became possible. Governor Chandler expressed his gratitude to the people of the state who "placed me in a position to help Kentucky." Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield called the program the most prominent for better medical care for Kentucky.

Also addressing the crowd were Richard G. Elliott of the Kentucky

State Medical Association, Mrs. Elinore Hammond, president of the Kentucky League for Nursing, and Dr. Lyman Wagers of the Kentucky Dental Association. Dr. William R. Willard, vice president of the medical center, spoke for the medical center staff in appreciation of the support the staff has had.

A dinner, sponsored by the Kentucky Medical Foundation, followed the groundbreaking ceremony.

Addressing the dinner audience were Dr. Vernon W. Lippard, dean of Yale University School of Medicine who spoke on "The National Significance of the University Medical Center"; Dr. Lester J. Evans, executive associate of the Commonwealth Fund, New York, who spoke on "The Medical Center and the University"; and Gov. Chandler whose address was titled "The Medical Center and the State."

Dr. Willard presented a silver plaque to Dr. John S. Chambers, former head of the UK medical service who retired recently, for his part in helping the University obtain the medical center. Dr. Chambers has campaigned for a center since 1928.

First unit of the medical center to be constructed will be a six-story, plus basement, medical science building which has an estimated completion date of 1959. Other projects, including hospital facilities and a dental college building, will be added later. Tentative plans call for enrollment of the first medical and nursing students in the fall of 1959.

$2,000 GRANT GIVEN UK MUSEUM OF ANTHROPOLOGY

A University-National Park Service contract for $2,000 recently negotiated is providing for the exploration of future flood control areas in Kentucky.

The UK Museum of Anthropology is exploring the areas to be flooded by construction of the Barkley and Rough River dams in Southwest Kentucky to determine whether anything of historic value will be lost.

Douglas W. Schwartz, museum director, is directing the project. A graduate student, Tacoma Sloan, assists him.

Cooperating in the project are the Smithsonian Institution and the Division of Archaeology, Kentucky Department of Conservation.

Ground was broken Dec. 10 for the University of Kentucky's proposed new Colleges of Medicine and Dentistry buildings in Lexington. First unit to be constructed will be a medical sciences building, followed by hospital (right half of picture), dental building (far left), ambulant patient building (left foreground), a power plant, and a small service building. Under tentative plans, first medical and nursing students will enroll in fall of 1959.

RALPH H. WEAVER IS NAMED "DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR"

Professor of bacteriology, Dr. Ralph H. Weaver was chosen by a vote of faculty members in the College of Arts and Sciences as the 14th winner of the "Distinguished Professor of the Year" award.

The award was established to recognize outstanding academic achievement. Dr. Weaver's selection permits him to have a period free of teaching duties in which to conduct further research and prepare a lecture to be delivered in April.

Dr. Weaver's latest research has provided a means of rapidly identifying various types of bacteria—cutting identification time from days or weeks to a few minutes or hours.

Publications by Dr. Weaver and associates attracted the attention of those interested in quick recognition of possible biological warfare agents and resulted in a 3-year $45,000 Kentucky Research Foundation contract with Biological Warfare Laboratories at Fort Detrick, Md.

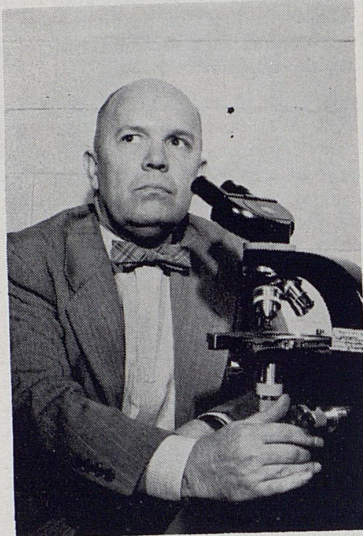

A native of Khedive, Pa., Dr. Weaver received both the bachelor and master degrees from Allegheny College. He became a graduate assistant at Michigan State College and was awarded a doctorate there in 1926.

Dr. Weaver joined the UK faculty in 1926 as an instructor and became a full professor in 1937. He is the author of more than 100 articles in scientific publications and is listed in "Who's Who in America," "Who's Who in the South and Southwest," "Who Knows What," and "Who's Who in American Education."

Dr. and Mrs. Weaver have one son, Robert, a '49 graduate of UK who received Ph.D. and M.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin. He is now employed by the U.S. Public Health Service in Phoenix, Ariz. He expects to go into research.

BARKMAN IS HONORED FOR SERVICE TO DAIRY INDUSTRY

Professor John O. Barkman of the UK Dairy Section was honored on November 23 by friends, co-workers and members of the dairy industry for his 38 years of service to the dairy industry of the state.

The honors were a part of the UK homecoming festivities and began with a breakfast sponsored by the UK Dairy Club.

Wesley Brooks of Armour Creameries, Louisville, presented an illustrated lecture on Barkman's life and professional activities following the breakfast. Tony H. Martin, representing the dairy industry, presented to Barkman the keys to a new station wagon.

Climaxing the program was the dedication of the Barkman Dairy Products Laboratory, made possible by a state appropriation of $100,000. During the dedication ceremony Dean Frank Welch of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics expressed "great appreciation to the administration and Commissioner Ben Butler for the appropriation."

Scherago Is Named Committee Chairman

Dr. Morris Scherago, professor of bacteriology, was named chairman of the liaison committee at a recent meeting of the American Public Health Association.

Dr. Scherago's committee will coordinate the programs of regional and state public health associations with the laboratory section program of the national group.

He also was named to a reorganization committee of state and provincial public health laboratory directors.

EATON LECTURES IN AUSTRIA

Under the Fulbright exchange program Dr. Clement Eaton, UK professor of history, is lecturing this year at the Institute of American Studies, University of Innsbruck, Austria.

Considered an authority on the social and intellectual history of the United States, Dr. Eaton is author of a recently published volume titled "Henry Clay and the Art of American Politics."

Dickey Is Elected Chairman of Council

Dr. Frank G. Dickey, UK president, was recently elected chairman of the Council of Presidents of Land Grant Universities of the Tennessee Valley States.

The council includes the land grant institutions from Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. It serves to coordinate the programs which the Tennessee Valley Authority carries out in cooperation with these universities. These programs cover the fields of agriculture, forestry, industrial development, flood-control and transportation.

Welch Is Appointed To TVA Board of Directors

Dr. Frank J. Welch, 55 year-old dean of the UK College of Agriculture, was sworn in on November 25 as a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority. He was appointed by President Eisenhower to fill out the term of the late Dr. Raymond R. Paty.

A Democrat, Dr. Welch was born in Texas but grew up in the Tennessee valley. "I know the difference between scraggly cotton fields and lush meadows for livestock," said Dr. Welch. "I've seen standards of living improve. I have an interest and attachment for TVA."

Beginning a year's leave of absence from UK starting December 1, Dr. Welch has been dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics since 1951. He is also director of the Experiment Station and the Agricultural Extension Service.

COWLING CONTINUES MATH RESEARCH UNDER NSF GRANT

Dr. Vincent F. Cowling, UK professor of mathematics, is this year continuing his basic research on certain types of mathematical operations under a $7,700 contract awarded by the National Science Foundation.

Called "Summability and Analytic Continuation," the study is based upon research results from a similarly sponsored study last year.

Dr. Cowling has been a member of the UK faculty since 1949. He has taught also at Rice Institute, Ohio State University and Lehigh University. He holds B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees from Rice Institute.

COLLECTION TAKES MC INTEER ON TRIPS THROUGH STATE

Dr. B. B. McInTeer, UK associate professor of botany, is traveling throughout Kentucky this academic year in search of unusual plants for a botanical museum at UK.

Although native Kentucky trees are his chief interest, he also is gathering samples of the most common plants introduced from other regions.

Dr. McInTeer, a member of the UK faculty for 33 years, is author of numerous articles in his field. One of the best known of his publications is "Tree Ring Study in Kentucky."

DUGDALE WILL DO RESEARCH ON ALASKAN ISLAND

UK zoology instructor Dr. Richard C. Dugdale, accompanied by his wife, small son and possibly one or two graduate students, will visit this summer a remote little island off the coast of Alaska to search for clues as to why life has prospered in some of the island's many lakes and hasn't in others.

Several of the lakes are spawning grounds for salmon and the work may turn up information that would lead to greater productivity for the fishing industry.

The team will be financed under a one-year $8,100 grant from the National Science Foundation and will live in a laboratory of the Alaska Department of Fish and Game. The lab is the only white man's outpost on the island. The sparse population of the island is chiefly Aleut Indians.

UK Dean Emeritus D. V. Terrell, College of Engineering, was honored at a testimonial dinner on Nov. 20. A portrait of Terrell, painted by Mrs. Janis Sternbergs, was unveiled and presented to the University.

Dr. Thompson Is Cited By State Department

Dr. Lawrence S. Thompson, director of the UK libraries, was recently cited for the results of his work as a library consultant to the Turkish government by an official of the U. S. Department of State.

Dr. Thompson's work was under the International Exchange Program.

Director of libraries since 1949, Dr. Thompson is author of the recently published book "Short History of Printing in the United States" and co-author of the book "History of Libraries in the United States of North America."

FOOTBALL SEASON CLOSES WITH SENSATIONAL UPSET

A headline atop the front page of the Ashland (Ky.) Daily Independent on the morning of November 24th intoned a message that not only told the story but said it in a way that just about summed up the feelings of every loyal Kentucky football fan with regard to a hectic 1957 grid campaign.

The newspaper's banner line read:
ALL IS FORGIVEN: KENTUCKY
BEATS TENNESSEE

Not every paper in the country carried the thrilling story of the courageous Wildcats' 20 to 6 conquest of the highly favored Vols on the front page, but few failed to carry the details of one of the top upsets of the season prominently on their sports pages.

It was an almost unbelievable, story-book ending to a season fraught with bad breaks for Coach Blanton Collier and his generally inexperienced charges.

Going into the climatic contest that sun-bathed (no kidding) Saturday afternoon on Stoll Field, the Kentuckians could point to only a pair of wins for nine starts although most observers were of the opinion they deserved a better record for their never-say-die efforts.

About the only real consolation that this season of frustration offered to die-hard Kentucky alumni, aside from the fact that the Wildcats were considered too good to be taken lightly by the outfits they met, came in the knowledge that the team was blessed with some outstanding individuals as well as team spirit.

And, when the talk centered on individuals, the top man in the picture always was big Lou Michaels, a 236-pound hunk of humanity who boasted the unique distinction of being the nation's lone returning consensus All-America performer. It was only natural that much talk and newspaper coverage was accorded Michaels in view of his 1956 reputation. But there were other reasons than past reputation that kept the stellar tackle in the lime-

Friends of Athletic Director Bernie Shively (left) from throughout the country honored him between halves of the Homecoming game on Nov. 23 for his 30 years as a member of the UK athletic staff. Shively was given a '58 Cadillac and two books of letters from "K" men. Shown with Shively are his wife and John Young Brown, '26, Lexington attorney who made the presentation.

A man that believed living up to a reputation can be harder than achieving one in the first place, Lou played almost inhuman football in 1957 against superhuman odds. He was a marked man in opponents' defense plans. In fact, it got so bad by mid-season that the opponent quarterback got to looking up out of the huddle to see where Lou was lined up before calling his play to the spot Michaels was not guarding. One of the greatest pursuit men in college football, he played the ball and generally was on hand to make 15 to 25 tackles a game no matter where he started from—either tackle, middle guard or either linebacker post.

The great effort paid off for both Lou and the team in the traditional encounter with the Vols. The one-man-team almost single handedly accomplished Tennessee's demise as he recovered a UT fumble in the end zone for the first Kentucky TD, jarred tailback Bobby Gordon loose from the ball to cause a fumble that set up the second, and covered another loose ball that opened the door to the final Wildcat score. Even the Tennessee writers and fans were singing his praise along with junior 'Cat halfback Bobby Cravens who was to the offense what Michaels was to the defense.

On any other day, Cravens' impressive performance would have won him high personal honor. As it was, he barely missed first team All-Conference mention despite ending up as the SEC's second best ground gainer and one of its top leaders in a couple of other departments. On this day alone, Bobby picked up 96 yards on 26 carries and scored the two TD's that Michaels didn't. And, the nicest part, he will be around in '58 when the Cats kick off against University of Hawaii in the season inaugural at the State Fairgrounds in Louisville.

For his part, Michaels was saluted by the Associated Press as "Lineman of the Week" and a short time later was named to the AP All-American. In the next six weeks, a whole host of honors came his way. He was named to the honor teams selected by the American Football Coaches Assn., Football Writers Association, United Press, NEA Service, "Today" (NBC-TV show), Gridiron Record, Boston Record-American, New York Daily News, College Sports Editors, Sporting News, All-Players All-America, Cap-

one major selection failed to pick Lou on its first eleven. International News Service selected their team before the Tennessee game and put Lou on their second team sight-unseen, but corrected it by naming him national "Player of the Week" after his great day against the Vols.

In support of the general belief that he picked up more honors than any Kentucky athlete in history, including the fabled Babe Parilli, Lou was named Player of the Year in the SEC by the Nashville Banner and Coach and Athlete magazine, picked by the Atlanta Touchdown Club as "Lineman most Valuable To His Team," and chosen as the "Best Offensive Lineman" by the Lexington Salesmen's Club.

Topping them all, however, was his selection by the Washington (D.C.) Touchdown Club as 1957 recipient of the Knute Rockne Memorial Trophy
as the nation's outstanding lineman.
To accept the award at a black tie affair in the nation's capitol, attended by many top sports and governmental figures including Vice President Nixon, Lou turned down an invitation to play in the Senior Bowl. He did take part in two other post-season All-Star affairs, however, turning in outstanding performances in the East-West Shrine Game at San Francisco (where he missed the "most valuable lineman" award by one vote) and the Hula Bowl in Honolulu, Hawaii. In the latter game, he won the Governor's Cup
as the top lineman.

Although he makes no secret of the fact that he would like to play professionally for the Cleveland Browns,
where brother Walt is located,
Michaels signed with the Los Angeles
Rams who made him their first draft choice.

Lou, a very normal fellow who hasn't let unprecedented honor go to his head, will be the first to assure you that he wasn't the only standout
on the 1957 eleven of Coach Blanton Collier. He has the highest praise for both his coach and for many of his teammates.

To mention only a few of those who contributed greatly to a team beset by bad breaks and yet great enough that it did not lose poise or quit under trying circumstances, you can single out Cravens, soph quarterback Lowell Hughes, soph tackle George Boone and end Jim Urbaniak.

They were not the only ones, but they were especially honored. Cravens, as pointed out earlier, was a second team All-SEC choice. Hughes, who alternated at quarterback with Co-Captain Kenny Robertson, was accorded All-SEC Sophomore team honors as was Boone. Urbaniak was an All-Conference man on a scholastic team and also received the WHAS Award based on scholarship, leadership and football ability.

And, when passing out tributes, the fans will not soon forget that Coach Collier has elevated himself to a high niche in Kentucky football history with the feat of tutoring teams that have brought home the Old Beer Barrel (symbol of the Tennessee rivalry in case some don't remember) three times out of four tries.

Then, behind the scenes, there's Bernie Shively. The veteran Athletic Director enjoyed one of his greatest hours on November 23rd. He saw the Wildcats triumph over Tennessee in almost unbelievable fashion and received one of the biggest surprises of his life when he was presented with a new Cadillac automobile as the gift of friends and alumni to climax 30 years of service to the University.

Truly, the close of the 1957 season
will live long in most fans' memories.
But what about 1958?

No one in a position to estimate officially would hazard a guess, but most unofficial experts predicted improvement. Michaels and seven other seniors will be missed, but the nucleus of a pretty fair outfit will be back for more action plus some help should be forthcoming from the freshman ranks of Coach John North, who tutored his yearling squad to an undefeated season for the second year in a row. Without the hinderance of bad luck that cost them dearly in the past season and with a little more of the type of play that saw them smack down the Vols and hold the national champion Auburn Tigers to a disputed, one-touchdown victory, the Col-liermen could be a force to be reckoned with seriously next season.

FAST DEVELOPING CATS ROLL UP VICTORIES

Fabulous Adolph Rupp, an old master when it comes to winning basketball games and a master psychologist when it comes to dealing out colorful quips on the chances of his teams, sized up his 1957-58 squad back in November with a characteristic comment that a great many alumni and fans have come around to accepting two months later.

Expressing his fears over the strongest schedule in Kentucky's history and trying to caution against over optimism based on the absence of only one starter, the Baron declared:
"We've got a bunch of pretty good fiddlers, who'd do fine at a barn dance, but you need good violinists if you're going to play in Carnegie Hall."

Newsmen and other close followers of Kentucky basketball knew Adolph better than to think he was either be-littling his boys or trying to be funny.

On paper, the strength of the 1957-
58 contingent looked mighty good.
Only playmaking guard Gerry Calvert and a couple of reserves graduated off
the previous season's club that annexed 23 victories in 28 starts, and picked up the Southeastern title in the process and ranked third in the nation at season's end. Up from the freshman ranks was a tall (6-7) and potentially talented pivotman, Don Mills, and back after year's absence was 6-6 Phil Johnson.

But the schedule lent a sobering thought. Not only was the conference card a bigger worry than ever, due to the general prediction that at least four teams besides Kentucky had a chance, but the lineup of top cage powers on tap for the first three weeks of the campaign was an awesome thing.

Against that background, master psychologist Rupp got his quintet ready. To make a long story short, Kentucky found the going very rough and, before these first three critical weeks were history, they had dropped three decisions in eight starts. While most observers felt that only one of the trio of victorious opponents (West Virginia) was stronger than the Wildcats, the three losses lent support to Coach Rupp's fears that Kentucky might be found lacking.

Actually, however, by mid season their record appeared to be about par for the course as other major cage powers experienced difficulties in high-calibre competition. With only three league games under their belts, the Ruppmen had forged into their long-familiar spot atop the SEC standings. Boasting a 3-0 mark after wins over Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt and LSU, the Kentuckians were now being referred to by many uninformed people as something short of a "solid" favorite to annex their 19th conference title and its automatic berth in the NCAA Regional, which will be staged in the UK Coliseum for the second straight year.

To Rupp, however, it seemed a different outlook: "We're not out of the woods yet just because Mississippi State (co-choice with UK for the title) has been beaten and some of the other league teams haven't showed as well as expected."

The showing of the Wildcats in their first 13 outings couldn't be favorably compared to any of the great Kentucky teams of the past, although many observers saw potential greatness in the group. Inconsistency bothered the club more than such factors as the lack of good offensive center play, the failure of All-Conference forward Johnny Cox to reach the performance peak expected and mistakes in both floor play and defense. On some occasions, such as the triple overtime thriller with Temple and the almost flawless triumph over St. Louis, Kentucky looked on a par with many of the better Wildcat outfits of the past. At other times, in defeat and in victory, there was some spark missing.

It took a rally in the final two minutes for the 'Cats to top Duke, 78-74, and prolong a record of not having lost a season opener at home since 1926. The Blue Devils were a pretty formidable outfit, though, having all hands back from the club that pasted a defeat on the Kentuckians at Durham last season.

Following success on the road against Ohio State, thanks to Vernon Hatton and surprising John Crigler, the Wildcats rounded out the toughest opening week in basketball by entertaining the Temple Owls at Lexington. Led by the fabulous Guy Rodgers, the Owls were considered the class of the East and lived up to their reputation by carrying the fight to Kentucky through the regulation 40 minutes and into three overtime stanzas. The Wildcats finally copped an 85-83 decision when Hatton gave them time to win with a fantastic heave from mid-floor with one second left in the first overtime.

Worn out from a strenuous opening week that saw them conquer three major intersectional foes and from a tiresome trek of several hundred miles to the game site, Kentucky proved ripe for upset and Maryland handed them their first loss in payment for their visit to College Park. The Terps, it should be pointed out, continued to press their luck successfully and knocked off many other good teams to gain national ranking.

Heading in the other direction, Kentucky next appeared in St. Louis and turned in their second vengeance performance by topping the Billikens of Eddie Hickey, who had won at Lexington last year. The 73-60 count that was on the scoreboard at Kiel Auditorium represented the Wildcats' most impressive showing of the season. But they couldn't stand prosperity, seemingly, as a decided underdog Southern Methodist club, which had very little except desire to recommend it, ground out a one-point win over the visiting Ruppmen two nights later in Dallas. The nationally third-ranked Wildcats left town with red faces, but worried more about their seeming Monday night jinx. They had lost to Maryland and SMU and had trouble with Duke, all on Mondays. On the remainder of the schedule, eight more Monday dates—some of them with important foes like Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech and Mississippi State—were upcoming.

But this was a team that had no time to look back or worry about the distant future. At hand was the most difficult two-night assignment handed any cage outfit—the UK Invitational Tournament featuring defending national champion North Carolina, Southern Conference champion West Virginia and unbeaten Minnesota of the Big 10. Kentucky felt like an intruder at its own party as the other three clubs boasted undefeated records.

Everybody but West Virginia had it figured out that the first night could just as well be skipped. It was going to be a Kentucky-North Carolina clash in the finals. But the Mountaineers, tall and talented, had other ideas and handed their hosts a rude shock in the form of a 77 to 70 setback and, on the following night, copped the tournament title by stopping the Tar Heels' win streak at 37. An angry Kentucky crew stormed past Minnesota for consolation honors. Better than 20,000 paid to see the nation's outstanding tournament and each team received a record-sized check for $11,751.38 as their equal share of the net proceeds.

Post-tournament action saw the Cats take anti-climatic decisions from Utah State and Loyola of Chicago before launching defense of their Southeastern crown against Georgia Tech. The Engineers, who later pushed the Cats into first place by upsetting Mississippi State, were completely outgunned by the Kentuckians and succumbed 73-60, thanks in great measure to Crigler's 25-point onslaught.

Their second league test and first on the road came as they faced Vanderbilt in Nashville for the first game in the new year. The Commodores, figured in pre-season as one of the prime challengers, had not been living up to expectations, but carried the fight right down to the wire in a fired up performance. Although ahead by slim margins much of the way, Kentucky had to call on "new" talent from the bench to win the televised spectacle. Senior guard Earl Adkins broke the back of the Commodores with his deadly accurate long shots and care-free, driving crips to contribute 25 vital points to a cause finally decided in Kentucky's favor, 86-81. All concerned in the Wildcat camp hoped that ended any ideas of a Monday jinx.

The meeting with LSU five nights later seemed anti-climatic to everybody except the fans. In an amazing display of drawing power, a near capacity throng of 11,300 turned out to witness the 97-52 slaughter of the last place team in the league which had never edged Kentucky.

SCHEDULES FOR '58 AND '59
GRID SEASONS ARE ANNOUNCED

The University of Hawaii will open Kentucky's 1958 football season, according to an announcement made by UK Athletic Director Bernie Shively. Hawaii will be played at the Kentucky State Fairgrounds Stadium in Louisville on Sept. 13. The Louisville grid appearance will be the first for Kentucky in that city in 13 years.

State Fairgrounds Director Bill Henry offered Kentucky complete control of the stadium facilities, rent free. Henry reportedly contacted UK officials last month about the game.

The University of Kentucky Athletic Board stated that the game will not be included in the sale of season's books. This, the board said, was because the game would be played a week before students were scheduled to arrive on the campus.

The other games set for next season include the customary eight conference games with another tilt with Xavier, a non-conference opponent. In addition to Hawaii, the other newcomer on the schedule is Mississippi State. Kentucky last played the Maroons in 1955 when Mississippi State won 20-14. The other SEC foes are Georgia Tech, Mississippi, Auburn, Louisiana State, Georgia, Vanderbilt and Tennessee.

Georgia Tech, Auburn, Mississippi State, Vanderbilt, and Xavier are all home games. Hawaii, Tech, Auburn, and LSU will be night contests. Kentucky has an open date Oct. 4 which will not be filled.

Nine games were also announced for the 1959 season. The only change on that schedule from that of 1958 will be the replacement of Miami (Fla.) for Mississippi State. The 1959 slate has one date yet to be filled.

ENROLLMENT MAY DOUBLE
BY CENTENNIAL YEAR '65

Approaching its first century mark, the University of Kentucky is moving into a new era of higher education in the state that may see the school's present record enrollment doubled within seven years.

The University will have its 100th birthday in 1965, and by that year its student population is expected to soar beyond 16,000 persons—if the institution can keep pace by providing facilities and an expanded faculty.

Many factors are behind the expected enrollment increase, including the fact that a greater percentage of students is finishing high school, college education is becoming more and more a necessity, and there are a lot more people in the college age group today than ever before.

Whatever the reasons, the increases are undoubtedly coming. A recent faculty survey indicating a minimum enrollment of 8,100 by 1960 was surpassed three years ahead of time when 8,794 students registered for the fall term this year.

The dawn of the new day will bring its share of growing pains, too, including needs that must be supplied if the institution is to maintain its high standards.

First, if UK is to double its student body it must also double its faculty to keep a satisfactory students-to-instructors ratio, according to President Frank G. Dickey.

There will also be the imperative demand for more buildings. According to Dr. Dickey, the University will need to have added the following (not necessarily in this order) by 1965:

A new science building for physics and chemistry; a new College of Commerce building; a library addition; College of Engineering additions; new agriculture and home economics buildings; better facilities for social sciences, psychology, and other departments poorly housed at present; additions to the Colleges of Law and Education; a Student Union Building addition; continued work on the Albert B. Chandler Medical Center; more buildings at off-campus facilities in Covington and Ashland, and in Henderson and Harlan counties; additional housing for Six UK graduate students are studying this year with the help of $1,800 fellowships awarded last spring by the Kentucky Research Foundation.

Dean Herman E. Spivey pointed out that the fellowships are restricted to candidates with outstanding undergraduate and graduate records.

UK Career Carnival Attracts 18,000 Visitors

An estimated 18,000 persons attended the UK Career Carnival on campus Oct. 29 and 30.

More than 125 business firms and governmental and service organizations had displays in Memorial Coliseum.

UK is the second school in the country to present such an exhibit. Michigan State University has presented a career carnival for the past six years.

Plans for the event were initiated last spring when UK President Dickey sent invitations to all the companies which had sent job representatives to the campus in the past year. Arrangements and reservations were made through Mrs. Katherine Kemper, UK Placement Center, and a number of departments aided in the development of the event.

Townpeople and high school students swelled the number of visitors to the carnival beyond the expected 10,000.

New Scholarship Exam Plan Is Announced

The University of Kentucky has abolished special scholarship examinations for Kentucky high school seniors and substituted a new plan for testing applicants.

Dr. Ernest D. McDaniel, director of the UK Testing Service, said scholarship applicants this year will be drawn from the long-established testing program administered by the Kentucky Cooperative Counseling and Testing Service. In the past, special scholarship examinations were held at 20 testing centers throughout the state.

Schools may now order Kentucky Classification Battery tests for all members of the senior classes. Each school will receive one scholarship application for every 15 seniors.

Dr. McDaniel emphasized that the limited scholarship applications are to be distributed to the seniors by the various principals on the basis of a need for financial assistance and scholastic ability.

UK Fraternities Lead Nation In Scholarship

University of Kentucky fraternities have led fraternities at state universities throughout the nation in scholarship four times in the past five years, according to a report released today by UK Dean of Men L. L. Martin.

The report, prepared by College Fraternity Scholarship Processing, Atlanta, Ga., shows a big jump in fraternity scholastic standing at UK during that period, with the institution failing to take first place only in 1953-54, when it placed second.

Dean Martin said the scholarship improvement program "came as a direct result of action by the University faculty through a regulation passed in 1952 that fraternities must maintain an average at or above the all-men's average for the University in order to maintain good standing on the campus."

Leading the way last year among UK fraternities was Phi Kappa Tau, with an overall average of 2.5 for the year.

ALUMNI PERSONALITIES

By GILBERT KINGSBURY, '33

We submit to you the name of Dave Pettus, 1933 graduate of Stanford High School and today one of the top officials in the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

Dave Pettus is director of Livestock Division in the Agricultural Marketing Service.

From his office—a spacious one, too—the Lincoln County, Ky., native directs a field force of 700 men who are concerned with meat grading, market news and stockyard regulations.

It's been 17 years since Director Pettus left the University of Kentucky and embarked on his career which this summer was topped by his appointment to his present job.

Since that day, he has seen naval service as a World War II officer, worked on farm problems in the South, been a tobacco marketing specialist and an economic analyst.

But Dave Pettus has never forgotten his farm background. He was born on the general farm of his father, the late James Pettus, on February 7, 1915.

Today, in spite of his administrative duties, he still operates a small farm at Manassas, 30 miles from Washington in historic Virginia. He has a few head of cattle on his farm and several ponies for his children. But he insists that his farming helps him understand the problems of the farmer. He also agrees that farming has changed considerably since he was a boy back in Lincoln County and a member of the livestock judging team at Stanford High.

He recalls the success of that 1932 team which went to Kansas City. He also remembers well his trips to Chicago as a member of the University's livestock group of experts.

Mrs. Pettus is the former Burton Hawkins, daughter of Professor Robert D. Hawkins of the University of Kentucky's engineering faculty.

Although the family hasn't lived in the Blue Grass state since 1941, it travels back home for regular visits. Director Pettus' mother is spending much of her time currently with her brother at Danville. A sister, Miss at Barbourville. Another sister, Mrs. Joe Embry, teaches at Stanford High, Mary Pettus, teaches at Union College and a third sister, Mrs. Charles E. Barrett, is the wife of a Sacramento, Ky., farmer.

While at the University, Director Pettus held membership in Alpha Zeta, scholarship fraternity for agricultural students; Omicron Delta Kappa, leadership fraternity, and Alpha Gamma Rho, social fraternity.
