Acid rain, trade topics for U.S.-Canada talks

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

OTTAWA — President Reagan held talks yesterday with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney at a summit where the two leaders' political problems were a backdrop to nagging differences on trade and acid rain pollution.

"We come as friends and partners sharing similar dreams and goals for our people: peace, freedom and prosperity," Reagan said at an arrival ceremony in a huge airplane hangar.

Asked about the acid rain issue, the president said, "We are going to discuss that. . . . We both want an answer to it."

When Reagan was asked about Canada's claim of sovereignty over the Northwest Passage, Mulroney interjected, "I have said it is ours, lock, stock and iceberg. That's a question of sovereignty, and that position is unchanged."

The United States maintains the passage is an international waterway. Both sides said in advance no agreements or joint statements would be produced during Reagan's 24-hour visit.

The meetings were held in front of a crackling fireplace in a traditionally furnished drawing room. The Canadians billed the summit as "an inconclusive working session." The Americans called it a summit "without drama — a lot of workmanlike, businesslike sessions to look at the agenda."

"I don't expect any major breakthroughs on a dozen different fronts," Mulroney said yesterday in an interview on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

He added, "What I expect is solid, continual progress."

Mulroney, in a separate interview with Cable News Network, underscored that he would not be sharply critical of Reagan.

"You see, I don't believe in throwing verbal hand grenades at the Americans every day," Mulroney said. "I don't believe in knee-capping our friends and allies."

At Parliament Hill, a short distance from the airport where Air Force One touched down, more than 5,000 demonstrators gathered with banners and balloons to protest Reagan's visit. The protesters complained about the Canada-U.S. free-trade talks, acid rain and Reagan's Central America policy.

Over two days, Reagan and Mulroney will hold two rounds of talks and were to meet at a state dinner last night and a luncheon at the prime minister's residence today. Reagan also will address a joint session of Parliament.

Weather puts damper on annual LKD events

By EVAN SILVERSTEIN

A spring snowstorm over the weekend caused the postponement of SAB's annual Little Kentucky Derby balloon race and the cancellation of the carnival that accompanies it.

This was the first time that the LKD carnival was canceled because of snow, said Student Activities Board President Lynne Hunt.

The balloon race has been rescheduled tentatively for 5 p.m. Saturday in the field next to E.S. Goodbarn. The board will decide tomorrow if the race will definitely be held.

The band festival, which would have featured a national pop band, Firefall, and two local bands, the Jeeters and the Weathermen, was also canceled.

Despite the inclement weather, the 1987 LKD Princess was named before the event was canceled on Saturday, said Missy Derfield, SAB's LKD chairwoman.

The winner of the contest was Student Government Association Executive Vice President Karen Skeens, Derfield said. The 21-year-old Skeens is from Ashland, Ky.

Skeens, along with those who were judged as runners-up, will be named officially either today or tomorrow, Derfield said.

The five-day event, which is sponsored by SAB, is designed to raise scholarship money for two UK students. The amount of money raised by LKD has not yet been determined, Derfield said.

Although these events were grounded, several other activities were held as part of this year's LKD. Run for the Rodents, loosely modeled after the race held by Louisville's Spalding College during the Kentucky Derby, raced experimental mice down a specially designed runway. There were categories for fraternities, sororities and independents.

The winner of the fraternity division was Sigma Pi. Delta Gamma took first place for sororities and the commuters won the independent category.

Run for the Rose, which was held on the Student Center patio, featured representatives from each of the three categories trying to skillfully race through an obstacle course while carrying trays of pseudo-rose wine.

The fraternity and sorority winners were Sigma Chi and Alpha Delta Pi, with the commuters taking first for independent students.

"Unfortunately, Mother Nature was not on our side this year but hopefully next year she will be," Hunt said. "We did not make any money but we did not lose any either."

Cold weather and snow caused the postponement of Little Kentucky Derby activities, which were scheduled for last weekend.

LKD is sponsored annually by the Student Activities Board to raise money for scholarships.

Sigma Chi and AOPi selected as this year's greek man and woman

By EVAN SILVERSTEIN

Sigma Chi's John England and Alpha Omicron Pi's Peggy Noe were named Greek Man and Woman of the Year Saturday night at the annual greek awards banquet.

Vicki Hesen, chairwoman of this year's Greek Week, said the award goes to the two people who have contributed the most to the UK greek system and community throughout the time they have been at the University.

"This is the most prestigious award given to a greek," Hesen said. "All the nominees are thought of highly by the greek community."

England, 21, is an accounting and finance senior from Centerville, Ohio. England has held various positions in Sigma Chi and has been active in many areas outside the greek community.

England was president of Sigma Chi his junior year and rush chairman this semester and last fall. England was also an Interfraternity Council representative his sophomore year and served as Sigma Chi chairman for parents weekend his sophomore year.

9 Singletary finalists selected

By BOBBI WOLOCH

Finalists for the Otis A. Singletary Awards for outstanding senior male and female have been selected, said Twyla Scudder, chairwoman of the selection committee.

A six-member committee selected four finalists for the outstanding male award and five finalists for the outstanding female award, Scudder said.

The names, however, will not be released until all the candidates have been notified, she said.

The finalists, who were chosen nearly two weeks ago, will be interviewed by the committee next week, Scudder said. Recipients will be announced at the Awards Banquet on April 22.

The interviews will "enable the students to express any additional information they didn't report on the application," Scudder said. "It also gives us the chance to get to know them on a more personal level."

One male and one female senior will receive the award, which recognizes "outstanding initiative and leadership activities and superlative contribution to the University," she said. "I was amazed to see what individual students have contributed to the University," she said. "It's very inspiring."

The award is "very prestigious and there are a lot of qualified applicants," she said.

A freshman, sophomore and junior also will receive awards for outstanding contribution, Scudder said.

"The students go through the same process, but the seniors receive the Singletary Awards," she said.

Scudder said there are no more than five finalists in each category.

"When the award was established, it was recommended that a previous recipient be part of the selection committee," said Scudder, who received the Singletary Award in 1985.

John Herbst, student activities director, said the committee also includes a representative from the vice chancellor for student affairs office, the dean of students office, Omicron Delta Kappa leadership honorary, the Student Activities Board and a previous winner of the Great Teacher Award.

Independents key to election outcome

By JAY BLANTON

When SGA presidential candidates Kenny Arington and Cyndi Weaver debated Thursday night, students were able to see that their platforms are remarkably similar.

What students should have seen is that the two candidates differ sharply in their campaign approach.

Because when it comes to Student Government Association elections, it is well preceded that it's not what you say that counts, rather to whom you say it.

Weaver and her running mates Susan Bridges and Karl Crase, who are running for senior and executive vice president, respectively, have stressed diversity in their campaign approach. And for the most part, they've shown diversity.

Diversity, though, does not win elections. Weaver is attempting to mobilize the independents — a group of voters who traditionally do not vote.

Included within that group are: student organizations, commuter students, married students and students residing in the residence halls.

This grouping has the diversity Weaver often clamors about, but diversity doesn't usually vote as much as the greek system does. That's not to say that Weaver's strategy is wrong; it's really her only choice.

It can't be overlooked, however, that because of the immense popularity of Bridges, a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, and Crase, a Sigma Nu fraternity member, Weaver's ticket has made some dents in Arington's bloc of voting, which may not have been thought possible.

Thus, if Weaver can somehow mobilize the independent vote, a win is conceivable.

Still, Weaver acknowledges that Arington is ahead, but her camp thinks that last week's debate helped her ticket gain a lot of ground.

If Weaver has any doubts about this week's election, she can always look to former SGA President Tim Freudenberg.

In 1984, Freudenberg, an independent, won the SGA presidency with a ticket similar to Weaver's, as he also ran with two greeks.

Freudenberg said he lost the greek vote to his opponent Larry Bisig, whose ticket was entirely greek.

Although Freudenberg's election was a rarity in that he was able to mobilize the independent vote, Weaver has to be hoping that history will repeat itself.

Although Weaver has tried to maintain high visibility as the underdog, Arington is a sleeping lion ready to wake up.

Throughout the past two weeks, Arington has kept a low profile while his opponent's campaign coordinators have frantically worried about how they are going to play catch-up.

Arington has not allowed himself to become entangled in a political web of mudslinging.

Instead, he sidestepped any verbal exchanges between camps and has focused efforts on achieving one goal — winning this week's election.

Unlike his opponent, Arington tries downplaying the election. He refuses to say anything negative about his opponent and those associated with her campaign.

While Arington has often been ac-

Super-fight set tonight in Vegas

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Marvelous Marvin Hagler vs. Sugar Ray Leonard will fight tonight in a match many people wish had happened several years ago and one some feel should not be held at all.

For several years it looked as if it would not happen, but it wouldn't go away.

"If I had never fought Marvin, it'd still be on my mind when I'm 60 years old," Leonard said. "I have to think he feels the same way. For money, ego and pride, and it's Sugar Ray Leonard."

"He wants the Leonard fight more than any other fight," said Pat Petronelli, Hagler's co-manager. "This was the fight that got away." Leonard's eyes have been a source of controversy ever since he announced last May that he would come out of retirement if Hagler would fight him.

Critics think Leonard is gambling with his sight. Some boxing people worry that if Leonard gets hurt, it will increase the pressure to ban boxing, which already is under fire from such groups as the American Medical Association.

"The sport is going to survive no matter what happens," Leonard said. He also has said, "I'm upset that anyone would think I would take an unreasonable risk of injury."

Leonard, who retired in 1982, was given a retinal examination by three eye specialists before the fight was announced in August. He also passed a retinal exam ordered by the Nevada State Athletic Commission Tuesday night.

"I'm not really thinking about his eyes," said Hagler, who was a 21-1 favorite to win the scheduled 12-round bout at a sold-out 15,366-seat outdoor arena at Caesars Palace.

"He's the one that made the choice. . . . My job is to defend the world middleweight championship."

But should Leonard spring an upset in the fight, which will start at about 10:15, he would be recognized as champion only by the World Boxing Council.

The International Boxing Federation recognizes Hagler as champion but is not sanctioning the bout as a title match. If Leonard wins, the IBF will declare the title vacant.

"This fight is not for money," Hagler said. "This fight is to see who is the best in the world."

Money might not be at the heart of the two fighters' desire to meet, but the money is there in abundance. Hagler is guaranteed $12 million and also a percentage deal. Leonard is guaranteed $11 million.

As to who is best, many boxing observers think that both have been better.

There is an adage in boxing that you have to fight to be fighting fit.

How much has inactivity eroded the dazzling skills of Leonard, who will be 31 on May 17? It will be his second fight since he knocked out Bruce Finch in a welterweight title defense Feb. 15, 1982 at Reno, Nev.

Some boxing people think that Hagler, 32, showed signs of slipping when he scored an 11th-round knock-out over John "The Beast" Mugabi, last March. They also note he has had only one fight in each of the past two years.

Hagler has had 66 pro fights (62-2-2, with 32 knockouts) dating back to 1973. Tonight's match will be his 13th title defense. He became champion when he stopped Alan Minter in three rounds in September 1980.

Leonard, who turned pro in 1977 after winning the 1976 Olympic light welterweight title at Montreal, has a 33-1 record, with 24 knockouts.

Gators chomp on Wildcats, roll to three-game SEC sweep

By DAN PETERS
Contributing Writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Florida outscored Kentucky 32-4 and outthrew the Cats 37-18 en route to a sweep of a three-game Southeastern Conference series yesterday and Saturday.

The first-place Gators improved to 9-2 in the conference and 19-13 overall. Kentucky, which takes on Wright State at 4 p.m. tomorrow at Shively Field, fell to 5-7 in the SEC and 17-7 on the year.

Yesterday, Florida freshman Jamie McAndrew pitched a complete game, allowing only six hits, as the Gators cruised to a 10-3 win.

Florida's Joey Fernandez broke open a 3-3 deadlock with a three-run home run in the fifth inning. The three-run inning gave the Gators the lead for good and countered a two-run fifth by the Wildcats.

Mitch Knox accounted for UK's first run with a solo home run in the second, his seventh of the season.

After Florida had a three-run cushion following Fernandez's home run, McAndrew limited the Cats to only one hit over the final four innings.

McAndrew retired 12 straight Wildcats from the fifth to the ninth before Bobby Olinick singled with two outs.

Kentucky's Tom Deller pitched seven innings and gave up 11 hits and 10 runs, eight of which were earned, and fell to 1-3 on the season.

Saturday, the Gators collected 25 hits to sweep a double-header from the Wildcats.

Florida won the first game, 12-2, and completed the sweep with a 10-3 win in the nightcap.

In the opening game, Florida roughed up UK starter Matt Coleman for eight runs in his two innings of work.

Florida scored in each of the first five innings.

The Gators chased Coleman in the third. Fernandez led off the Florida third with his eighth home run of the year.

Coleman then walked Ned Brigham and yielded a double to Lance Hodges that scored Brigham. David Voit came on in relief for UK and gave up back-to-back doubles by Allen Rutledge and Ed Shae.

Kentucky scored its only runs in the third and sixth.

Knox singled in Mark Blythe for the first Wildcat run in the third.

In the sixth, Robbie Buchanan hit his third home run of the season far over the left field fence.

Ken Sebree, 4-3, held Kentucky to seven hits in six innings to earn the win. Tyson Johnson closed out the win for Florida in the seventh.

Todd Gedaminski limited Kentucky to five hits in the second game to improve his record to 6-3.

Kentucky took a brief lead in the first, 1-0. Blythe walked and Chris Estep followed with a bunt single. Then Olinick scored Blythe with a single to left field.

Florida answered with four runs in the first off UK's Vince Tyra. Rodney Brewer and Ed Fernandez keyed the scoring with a triple and double, respectively. The Wildcats countered with two runs in the second.

After the second, Gedaminski allowed only one hit and four base runners.

Women's tennis team nets two wins

By DAN BURCH
Contributing Writer

The UK women's tennis team has seen the light at the end of the tunnel.

The beacon shining brightly is the NCAA Tournament. And this weekend, Kentucky took two steps toward the light.

The 16th-ranked Wildcats posted two wins at home to up their record to 17-5.

On Friday, UK thrashed Auburn 9-0 and yesterday the Cats upset No. 9 Indiana, 6-3.

The win over the Hoosiers was a sweet taste of revenge for UK. On March 7, Kentucky traveled to Indianapolis and lost a tough match to Indiana, 5-4.

But more than revenge was gained with the victory. The upset also greatly enhanced UK's chances of being invited to the NCAA championships.

"We came really motivated and ready to play," UK coach Sue Rudd said after yesterday's match. "Right now it's so close to see who gets an NCAA bid that it was really a big win."

"Getting into the NCAA was our long-term goal for the season and that's what we're doing."

Kentucky cruised in Friday's shut-out of Auburn. Eight of the nine victories came in straight sets. Yesterday, however, was a bit more of a struggle.

Indiana staked itself to an early lead by taking two of the three doubles matches.

Rudd sensed that her underdog club was a bit uptight and advised them to just relax.

"Going into singles I told them, remember they're (Indiana) the ones who have the pressure, not us," Rudd said. "They're playing us here and we're going to make them beat us. We're not going to give it away."

Led by their top two players, sophomore Sonia Hahn and junior Tamaka Takagi, UK captured five of the six singles matches to put the Hoosiers away.

Takagi said motivation was the key to the upset.

"We really wanted to beat them badly and we knew an NCAA berth was riding on this match," she said. "I think it came down to us wanting to win more than them."

"We came out ready to play and we were going to do whatever it took to win and we did."

UK's Malik not lacking in ability or confidence

By JIM WHITE
Senior Staff Writer

UK freshman Adam Malik sometimes wears his Davis Cup jacket before matches. He has been playing in the international tennis competition, representing his native country of Malaysia, since he was 12 years old.

The Southeast Asian country has never made it past the first round in the Davis Cup, but Malik's college opponents don't know that.

All they know is that they are going up against a very confident, 6-foot-4 foreigner with quick hands and a strong swing.

"I, myself, try to intimidate my opponents as much as I can," Malik said. "I'll sometimes just pass a few comments on the court to let them know. 'Hey, I'm not going to give anything to you.'"

A point in a doubles match against the University of Evansville earlier this season displayed Malik's quickness and his confidence to the fullest.

"We had a really big volley going," Malik said. His opponent "hit a big shot and I volleyed it. He was surprised. Then he hit it at me as hard as he could three or four times and he was trying to hit me."

Malik returned each of the shots as he did the first one and eventually won the point. He then turned to offer some words of advice to the Evansville player.

"I got great hands. You shouldn't hit it at me next time."

Malik started school at UK in January and has accumulated a 20-6 singles record so far this season. And according to tennis coach Dennis Emery, his freshman's natural ability and confidence will allow him to go far in the sport.

"He's aggressive," Emery said. "He's as aggressive a player as you're going to find in tennis. He's got the ability to play pro tennis. He's got all the physical tools."

And Malik's success record backs up Emery's predictions. The freshman's singles victories at UK include a 4-0, 4-6, 6-4 defeat of USC's Eric Amend. The Trojans are the No. 1-ranked team in the country and Amend was a member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team.

But before the match, Malik wasn't concerned about Amend's successful track record. Matter of fact, he just didn't know any better.

"When I went into the match, I didn't know who he was," Malik said. "He was just another player. I played a really good match against him and I beat him and later someone came up to me and told me he was on the Olympic team."

"I think if I would have known who he was before the match, I would have been a little bit more nervous."

Malik is now midway through his first season at UK, but less than a year ago, he wasn't sure where he would end up. All he knew was that he wanted to play tennis in the United States.

Malik left Malaysia to attend a private high school in Australia, where the caliber of tennis players is much better than in his native country.

"Malaysia is not strong in tennis," Malik said. "The tennis is good (in Australia) and I improved a lot. Then I found out about how people did in college in America so I thought the next thing I wanted to do was go to America."

But Malik's college applications arrived too late and he couldn't get into an American school for the fall semester.

In Hong Kong last May, however, Malik finally found his ticket to the United States when he met Mike Benson, now an assistant coach at UK.

Benson, who was playing professional tennis at the time, told Malik he would help him find a school.

"At that time, I wasn't an assistant coach at UK," Benson said. "I just told him that he should attend school in the U.S. The Hong Kong Davis Cup coach was very high on (Malik) and a friend of mine from Malaysia told me that he was good."

Benson told Emery about his discovery and it just so happened that UK had a place on the roster left by a signee who had backed out at the last minute.

In September, Malik made his first visit to Lexington.

"I was here about three or four days and I really liked the school a lot," Malik said. "I don't think I could fit into any other team, as a team player, as well as at UK."

Malik hopes to make the NCAA Tournament before he graduates but this season he is concentrating on the team.

"I would like to see us get to the NCAA (Tournament)," he said. "If we make NAAs, people will realize that maybe Kentucky is a force to be reckoned with."

Tennis team, gymnasts end busy weekend

Staff reports

The Kentucky men's tennis team, ranked 16th in the nation, struggled past Mississippi Saturday at the Hillary J. Boone Tennis Center, 5-4.

Mississippi, ranked 25th in the country, led 4-2 going into the doubles competition.

Kentucky swept all three doubles matches to squeak past Ole Miss. The Wildcats now stand at 14-6 on the season.

Jim Williams recorded the first upset for Mississippi, knocking off Kentucky's Richard Benson in a come-from-behind victory, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2, at the top singles spot.

After UK's Greg Van Emburgh blitzed Wade Petty at the No. 2 singles slot, 6-0, 6-1, Joey Johnson and David Randall gave Mississippi a 3-1 lead with wins at the No. 3 and No. 4 singles spots, respectively.

Johnson defeated Steve Denney in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, and Randall upset Adam Malik in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3.

Andrew Varga gave UK its only other singles victory with a 6-2, 6-3 win over David Baxter at the No. 5 spot. Jimmy Pitts completed the Mississippi scoring with a 7-6, 5-7, 6-4 upset over David Keavins at the No. 6 singles position.

Benson and Van Emburgh started UK off on the right foot with a 6-2, 7-5 win over Williams and Johnson at the No. 1 doubles spot. Denney and Varga tied the score at four with a 6-2, 6-3 win over Randall and Petty at the No. 2 doubles slot.

Malik and Cook gave Kentucky the win with a 6-3, 6-2 win over Baxter and Pitts in the last doubles match.

The Wildcats are in Columbia, S.C., today for a dual meet with South Carolina and travel to Athens, Ga., for a Southeastern Conference matchup against Georgia Wednesday.

The 19th-ranked UK gymnastics squad was upset Saturday by West Virginia at Morgantown, W.Va., 181.55 to 179.25.

The dual meet was the Cats' last tuneup before this weekend's Southeastern Regional at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Kentucky's point total was its lowest since The Purina Cat Classic Feb. 13 in Columbia, Mo. UK's score marked the first time in its last six outings that it had failed to top the 180 plateau.

'Blind Date' is spoiled by miscasting of Willis

By LAURA E. SUTTON
Contributing Critic

MOVIE REVIEW

When Walter Davis takes a blind date to an important business dinner, he's warned not to let the girl drink because she "loses control." Naturally, he heads for the nearest liquor store.

This is the promising opening situation of "Blind Date," which seems perfect for its star, Bruce Willis, the devil-may-care detective David Addison of TV's "Moonlighting."

Unfortunately, Willis' character Walter turns out to be the antithesis of the fun-loving Addison. Walter is, instead, an uptight workaholic who is more concerned with impressing his boss than having a night of mindless fun.

He and his alcohol-sensitive date, Nadia, played by Kim Basinger ("9½ Weeks"), certainly share an adventurous date, but Walter winces the entire evening.

We can't really blame him. Nadia goes berserk after a few sips of champagne and, during the course of the night, Walter loses his job, half his car and is attacked by a gang of female muggers. This is not your average date.

To make matters worse, the couple is endlessly stalked by Nadia's maniacal yet harmless ex-boyfriend, David (John Larroquette of TV's "Night Court"). And just when the evening is about over, Walter is arrested for holding him at gun point.

Although by this time Walter is perfectly happy to remain in jail (he's safe from Nadia's havoc), Nadia feels bad about the trouble she has caused him and bails him out.

What's more, she promises to marry David, a successful lawyer, if he'll defend Walter. Does the idea of a man acting as both complainant and defending attorney seem odd?

This is just one of the many inconsistencies in a potentially funny movie that develops into a big flop.

Nadia (Kim Basinger) and Walter (Bruce Willis) have a run-in with jealous ex-boyfriend David (John Larroquette) in "Blind Date."

Because of the mischaracterization of Walter, Willis is basically unbelievable. For a movie that presumably is trying to capitalize on Willis' current popularity, there are far too few of his trademark smirks and wisecracks.

Most of the funny dialogue comes from two supporting characters,

Walter's workmate Denny (Mark Blum) and car-dealing brother, Ted (Phil Hartman). Both these characters have the irreverency the film needs, but unfortunately there isn't enough of this to save "Blind Date."

"Blind Date" is rated PG-13 and is showing at North Park and South Park cinemas.

Band leader hospitalized

DETROIT (AP) — Big band leader Woody Herman was in serious condition yesterday in the coronary intensive care unit of a hospital here, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Herman, 73, was admitted to Sinai Hospital on March 26 after suffering from effects on his heart of medication taken for high-altitude sickness during a tour through Colorado and Utah, said his manager, Tom Cassidy, in Woodstock, Ill.

"Some of the medication affected his heart rate a little bit and the doctors wanted to stabilize it," Cassidy said. So far, no performances have been postponed, he said.

Herman, a resident of Hollywood Hills, Calif., has led big bands for more than 50 years, most of that time with his group, the Thundering Herd. He also sings and plays clarinet with the band.

His golden anniversary album, "Woody Herman and His Big Band 50th Anniversary Tour," was nominated for a Grammy this year.

Peck returns to movies

DENVER (AP) — Gregory Peck says he chose to return to the screen for the first time in five years because the story line in "Amazing Grace and Chuck" was one that "touched me personally."

"I've been around the track many times. There was a time when I picked the part and did three pictures a year," Peck told a news conference Saturday before the premiere of the film. "At this time in my life, I wouldn't wait for a message film, but I would wait for a good story line."

The film also stars 13-year-old Joshua Zuehlke as a small-town boy from Montana who defies his elders by persuading a basketball player — Denver Nuggets star Alex English in his acting debut — to protest nuclear war by boycotting professional sports.

Peck, who turned 71 yesterday, plays the president of the United States, who becomes involved in the boy's anti-war efforts.

cused by his campaign workers of not being aggressive, he knows what the UK campus is most receptive to.

Arlington recognizes that UK's student community — both greeks and independents — can be easily alienated if he is perceived as overbearing. That is why his ticket's coordinators will keep much of their campaign work behind closed doors until Wednesday and Thursday.

Arlington and his campaign workers conduct much of their work over the phone in the comforts of their own fraternity house, sorority house and apartment. They know who to call and when to call.

Arlington, along with his campaign manager James Rose, have subtly organized a network of supporters that extends from the student government office to the greek community and into the residence halls.

"A lot of people characterize my campaign as one dimensional," Arlington said. "I think we have a more diverse group than they do and I don't think people will realize that until election day."

Of the 55 members on Arlington's steering committee, 25 are listed as having some type of greek affiliation.

More importantly, 36 members of that steering committee are former presidents, current presidents, directors or chairs of their respective greek and student organizations.

Arlington's diversity, which was touted as his weakness before the election began, has turned to his advantage.

Arlington sought both greek and independent student leaders because he knows the leaders are the ones who will wield the most influence in persuading students to vote on Wednesday and Thursday.

And getting people to vote may be all that Arlington needs to win this week.

What Arlington should worry about the most is getting the rest of his ticket elected.

Keith Clary, candidate for senior vice president, faces an uphill battle with the popular Bridges. And his showing in the debate last Wednesday didn't help him any.

Brad Dixon demonstrated he was eloquent in his closing remarks the same night against Crase, but he really didn't show much of anything else. On the other hand, Crase, the so-called "dark horse," wasn't exactly a ball of fire, either.

Reagan's cutbacks in educational aid will weaken quality Education has long been a rallying cry for political leaders. And deservedly so.

The quality of education more or less determines the quality of a nation's future. The training of leaders and the educating of the general public plays a big part in determining the vision and production of a nation.

To put it simply, educated people usually have better ideas and are better-equipped to implement them.

Evidently President Ronald Reagan doesn't agree with this philosophy.

With his proposed 1988 fiscal budget, which calls for a 46 percent cut in student financial aid, Reagan is confessing that education is not one of his priorities.

This isn't a decision whose effects will disappear after an initial uproar.

These cuts will have a far-reaching and ugly impact on students who need help in paying for their education.

At UK alone, these cuts could cause about 4,000 students to lose about $8.1 million in financial aid.

Reagan's budget would cut $2.7 billion from the 1988-89 Pell Grant program, the largest federal grant program. More than 1 million students would lose eligibility under new restrictions, which call for allocation of the grants only to students with a family income of less than $20,000.

UK Lexington campus and community college students would lose about $3.8 million in Pell Grant aid.

Reagan's budget would also eliminate four major programs: Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants, Direct Student Loans, College Work-Study and State Student Incentive Grants.

Further elimination of several smaller graduate fellowship programs would lose UK an additional $2 million.

In place of these grant, loan and work-study programs, Reagan's plan calls for the creation of a loan program that would require students to pay back loans contingent on their income after graduation.

The program would not only be unmanageable, it would simply not be enough.

Helping students pay for college deserves more than token aid, when rising tuition costs will make financial aid more critical in determining students' future.

When Congress votes on Reagan's budget, it has the duty to remind Reagan of that.

This SGA election most important in history of University

Editor's note: Editorial Editor Cynthia A. Palormo's column will appear in the Kernel on Thursday.

Politicians do what they do best when they have some highly emotional issue to campaign on. This year, the Student Government Association executive branch candidates have an issue that has not been enjoyed since the late 1960s.

With the advent of two new University administrators, including a president, some have suggested that this week's SGA election is the most important one in years.

Perhaps that is a big understatement. This is not one of the most important SGA elections in years, it is the most important SGA election in the history of UK.

When Otis A. Singletary came to UK 18 years ago, students were but a faint whisper to the administration.

Students didn't go to top administrators with issues. Students didn't play an active role in major campus decisions. And they certainly didn't help choose a new University president.

It was campus feudalism.

But after the "Age of Aquarius" finally swept through UK, students began to play a more important role in the decisions of this University.

And now they are about to make a decision that can have a tremendous impact on the rest of their UK lives.

Because the student body decision is a very important one, it is comforting to know they have two very good SGA presidential candidates to choose from. Quite a contrast from last year when the concerned student — if there is such a creature — probably was quite uneasy with the choices for SGA president.

A brief examination of the platforms of presidential candidates Cyndi Weaver and Kenny Arington reveals that both have put student rights and making a good "impression" on incoming UK President David Roselle as high priority.

C.A. Duane BONIFER

But where the differences lie is how those plans will be implemented and how that impression would be forged.

Throughout her monthlong campaign, Weaver has used words like "aggressive," "forceful" and "strong" as the key to a successful student government. The Elizabethtown, Ky., native has also spoken of reform — a word that seems to make some conservative members of SGA shudder.

According to Weaver, SGA has remained a "cliquish organization" for too long and has been "far too internal in its viewpoint."

One solution the two-term SGA senator has suggested is the creation of several committees and organizations to help reach out to "Joe Student" — whoever that is — and find out what his concerns are.

Another remedy Weaver has come up with is introducing "new blood" into SGA — namely executive vice president candidate Karl Crase.

During his first political campaign, Crase has stressed "reaching out" to students and making them feel like SGA plays a significant role in their college lives. One way he proposes to accomplish that is through four new committees.

Crase, a Republican from Somerset — one of Kentucky's few GOP strongholds — says he is "no lover of bureaucracy" but these proposed committees are "needed bureaucracy" to improve SGA's new image.

From the outset of the campaign, Crase has been labeled a dark horse. That is a title most politicians would dread, but when it comes from your own people, it makes one wonder how likely that individual's chances of winning are.

Weaver's running mate for senior vice president is Lexingtonian Susan Bridges. Bridges, a sophomore, comes closer than any of the other candidates in fitting the title "popular."

"You almost can't go 10 feet when walking with her on campus without someone stopping her and saying hi," an observer noted about Bridges.

Bridges has also been given a rather dubious title — "nice." Nice isn't exactly what you want a politician to be, but Bridges has demonstrated the ability on occasion to break out of the sorority girl and cheerleader stereotype and take a stand on an issue.

Whereas Weaver points to her ticket as "new blood," Arington shows people the combined nine years of experience his ticket possesses.

Arington also differs from his opponent in terms of political style. Arington often sits back and surveys the situation before making any decisions, instead of sporting the aggressive, go-get-'em attitude of Weaver.

One of Arington's long, thought-out decisions was to select three-term SGA Senator at Large Brad Dixon as his running mate for executive vice president.

Although Dixon has been involved in student government for quite a long time, he doesn't view himself as a politician.

Critics of Dixon have charged that during the three years in SGA, he has not taken a hard stand on many issues. Dixon defends those attacks by taking credit for much of "behind-the-scenes work" in SGA.

Dixon has also been highly critical of the "group thing" of SGA. Although he doesn't offer concrete solutions, Dixon says he wants SGA to "find out what the students really want and stop saying what they want."

Arington's choice to succeed his position in SGA is sophomore Keith Clary. Clary, who constantly projects an air of confidence, has said that if he gets the post of senior vice president, he wants to take a much more active role than just moderating the senate. Critics allege that Clary will "alienate" members of the senate if he assumes that type of role.

But the reality of the situation is that UK SGA elections are still very similar to high school ones — the popular student wins.

The type of election that is issue-oriented instead of one based on popularity is still a long way off.

Because the campaigns are still largely based on popularity, there is going to be a split ticket, barring any miracle. Neither side has the advantage in all three races, and judging from the amount of time remaining and the ground some candidates would have to make up, it doesn't appear a sweep is in store for either side.

Therefore, both sides must realize the importance of working together to improve SGA's image. All six candidates have said they can work with one another if a split ticket is elected.

But should they change their minds once elected, which politicians have been known to do, and decide to bicker and argue over petty issues, the result would not only be detrimental to SGA's future but to the student body's future as well.

President-elect Roselle is relatively young and, judging from his enthusiasm, plans to stay in Lexington for a long time. Should he come to UK and find the student representatives arguing among one another and divided into factions, he would most likely think twice before listening to any student delegation's gripes.

Some first impression that would be.

Feminist's actions not for females

Last Wednesday night, some 1,500 feminists gathered together to hear Gloria Steinem speak.

They arrived clad in pants and shirts, sporting cropped hair. It appeared as though a horde of quasi-men had descended from some ephemeral realm.

I cannot understand the feminist logic. It seems to me that they are trying to assert their "rights" as women by becoming more and more like men.

They walk, talk and dress like men. They seem to think that by becoming more masculine, they become better women.

To me, the feminist ideal is to be the best, most productive, contributing member of society that one can be as a woman.

Women have great value and worth to society as women. To assume that male traits and characteristics are so much more desirable than female ones is to defeat the whole purpose of feminism.

I think it is a sad plight of our society that the feminine virtues of beauty, elegance, graciousness and generosity are so scorned and demeaned that they have become lost in a flood of masculinity.

Of course, as a woman, I want my abilities to be recognized the same as any man's, but that doesn't necessarily mean that I want to become more "macho."

If not for the many long years of hard work and continuous battles waged daily by the suffragists and early feminists, I would not be attending this college or writing for this paper.

But I think that, as a society, we have matured enough to recognize men as men and women as women and to utilize the unique abilities and qualities of each sex to the fullest possible extent.

It's time for feminists to leave the '70s behind, quit whining about how much they want to be treated like men and become mature, adult women of the '80s.

To me, the feminist ideal is to be the best, most productive, contributing member of society that one can be as a woman.

It's time to wave goodbye to good old Gloria and quit quibbling. We must join hands with our brothers and sisters to make this the world the best for all human beings, regardless of sex, race or religion.

There are more important decisions to be made than who's going to hold open the door for whom.

Hospital being built in eastern Kentucky

HAZARD, Ky. — A 208-bed medical center built on a strip mine site will open next week as a solution for eastern Kentuckians who have been forced to travel as far as Lexington or Knoxville, Tenn., for treatment of complicated health problems.

The new medical center hopes to gain patients by what it calls the "regional concept" of consolidating resources in mountain counties to provide services within the area.

Crucial to that will be recruiting respected specialists so that local family-practice physicians will feel comfortable referring their patients to doctors in Hazard instead of outside the region.

The chain has invested almost $40 million in the center — a $26 million hospital and a 68,000-square-foot professional office building. The site was donated by Hazard natives Roy and Mildred Campbell after it was strip-mined.

Cuban prisoners arrive without fanfare

WASHINGTON — Cuba has allowed 20 former long-term political prisoners to emigrate to the United States in the past 10 weeks, sending them at the rate of two a week in an apparent attempt to avoid publicity, according to U.S. officials.

The officials said the piecemeal approach appeared aimed at eliminating the tumultuous receptions that have accompanied large-scale prisoner releases in the past and have received extensive media attention.

The last two of the 20 arrived Wednesday aboard a weekly charter flight that operates between Miami and Havana. The other 18 had arrived on earlier charter flights.

State Department awards contract to firm

WASHINGTON — The State Department awarded a non-competitive contract in 1985 to a firm involved in the Iran-contra affair although an official of the awarding office was the brother of a key company employee.

A congressman and a federal ethics official are questioning the propriety of the contract, which was awarded after the department official's sister made the major sales pitch on the company's behalf.

The brother, however, said his actions were approved by State Department legal officers. The State Department legal office would not comment on the contract, which is under investigation by the department's inspector general.

Pope backs Chilean workers' demands

CONCEPCION, Chile — Pope John Paul II yesterday told more than 250,000 people at a Mass in this economically depressed region that he supports their calls for more jobs and higher pay.

His visit to Chile was finally free from the violent anti-government demonstrations that plagued papal appearances since his arrival Wednesday.

"You may think the pope is not aware of the preoccupations of workers in this beloved Chile," said the pontiff, clad in a traditional purple Lenten robe.

"That is not so. I know very well your concern about social justice . . . unemployment . . . wages . . . and legitimate union demands," he said.

AIDS not only STD deserving attention

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press

ATLANTA — AIDS is dominating the headlines but other sexually transmitted diseases still affect millions, including a virus believed to cause cancer that is "spreading in epidemic proportions," researchers say.

Sexual contact has become the chief form of transmission of one form of hepatitis, a liver disease. And chances of getting such diseases as herpes, chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis are vastly higher than the odds of getting AIDS.

"You don't die, generally, from gonorrhea or syphilis, and certainly not from chlamydia," said Dr. Jonathan Zenilman of the Division of Sexually Transmitted Diseases at the Atlanta-based national Center for Disease Control.

"But there's a danger of them getting lost in the shuffle. They are still very much important health problems," he said.

AIDS has struck more than 33,000 people in the United States, so far killing more than 19,000. In 1986 alone, 12,049 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome were diagnosed in the United States, the CDC reports.

But there were more than 13 million cases of other sexually transmitted diseases in that same year, according to CDC estimates.

Last year's total included 896,333 reported cases of gonorrhea, up from 883,826 a year earlier but down from 1,042,900 in 1980. Researchers say reported cases are the tip of the iceberg; the true incidence of gonorrhea is estimated at 2 million to 3 million cases in 1986.

Other estimates include 4 million to 5 million cases of chlamydia, 1 million cases of genital warts from human papilloma virus, 500,000 new herpes cases and 90,000 cases of syphilis, Zenilman said.

Human papilloma virus of HPV, a cause of venereal warts, was thought to be just a nuisance, but new research is strongly pointing to the virus as a cause of cervical cancer, he said.

The virus also can cause anal cancer, most often in homosexual men, and squamous cell cancers in the mouth, he said.

"I think HPV is probably going to be the disease of the '80s and '90s," said Dr. Alan Lawhead, assistant professor of gynecology and obstetrics at Atlanta's Emory University and a specialist in HPV research.

Researchers believe HPV can spread even when warts are not obvious, he noted. As many as 10 percent of women who show no symptoms of HPV-related disease may be infected.

Although Hepatitis B, a type of contagious liver disease, is not commonly considered a "sexually transmitted disease," sexual contact has become the chief mode of transmission, Zenilman said.

Scientists estimate that 200,000 cases occurred in the United States last year, 10 percent of those patients becoming chronic carriers of the disease.

sion of Parliament today and meet with opposition leader John Turner.

The agenda for the talks was virtually unchanged from Reagan's three previous summits with Mulrooney: acid rain, trade and Canada's claim of sovereignty over the Northwest Passage.

Washington also is unhappy with the level of Canada's defense spending, which amounts to 2.2 percent of its gross national product. The United States says the figure is below alliance-agreed targets.

The political climate has changed markedly for both leaders since their last meeting in Washington in March 1986.

Reagan has been bruised by the Iran-contra episode, while Mulrooney has been battered by a series of scandals and controversies involving members of his Cabinet. Some Canadians think Mulrooney has been too accommodating to Reagan.

In 1984, Mulrooney led his Progressive Conservative Party to the largest landslide in Canadian history. However, a recent poll shows that his party is in third place and that Mulrooney's personal popularity has fallen to 23 percent — a drop of 47 points from 1984.

Reagan took some of the sting out of the acid rain dispute when he pledged last month to seek $2.5 billion over five years for innovative demonstration projects to curb polluting emissions from coal-burning facilities.

Acid rain — blamed by Canada for killing 14,000 of its lakes — is produced in the atmosphere by a mixture of sulfur dioxide, mostly from coal-fired power plants, and nitrogen oxides, chiefly from cars and trucks.

On trade, the two countries are engaged in negotiations intended to produce a free-trade agreement removing all tariff and non-tariff barriers.

In his weekly radio address Saturday, Reagan said, "We are optimistic that a comprehensive plan mutually beneficial and advantageous to both sides can be hammered out this year."

Canadian officials, however, complain that Reagan has retreated from a joint pledge with Mulrooney two years ago to resist trade protectionism, imposing tariffs on wooden shakes and shingles and taking action against Canada on steel, uranium, softwood lumber and other products.
