

This Election Likely To Be As Bad As Those Of Past

SGA election time is growing close again. From all indications, these elections will be about like those of the past, offering the student little or no facts on which to base his selection.

First, let's consider the platforms. During the last campaign, the United Students offered a five-point program and the Constitutionlists a six-point platform. Even though the platform planks were nearly all restricted to promises to investigate this or consider that, each party has accomplished only one plank.

Even the two promises-fulfilled failed to benefit the students a great deal. We have given the United Students credit for their promise to attain equal opportunity for representation of all students. This is stretching the point a great deal, but since the mere election of non-Greek members of the party to the Assembly broke the all-Greek monopoly that had prevailed in some previous elections we conceded this point.

It is easy to see from this that no matter what promises the platforms might offer the student he has no assurance that an attempt will be made to carry them out. Of course, SGA is not strong enough for the parties to offer the students any drastic changes, but they might include workable plans for increasing the power of SGA.

Next, let's look at the candidates' qualifications. The average student when he prepares to vote knows only two things about the candidates, their standings and activities. Just where the candidates stand on the issues of interest to students, or what knowledge of parliamentary procedure they have, the average voter has no way of knowing.

Political campaigns could include a few speeches by candidates and a little more thorough listing of the candidates' backgrounds and qualifications. Perhaps a round table discussion by rival candidates could be held. These improvements wouldn't increase the cost to the parties appreciably, but they would give the student a much better basis on which to make his choices.

SGA cannot become a powerful organization until it gets the support of at least a majority of the students. The administration cannot be expected to respect or delegate authority to an organization that represents only a handful of students. SGA cannot expect student support until it offers the students something. In the past it has not done this.

It is time that the political parties at UK look a real interest in building a stronger, better SGA instead of merely concentrating on getting publicity for individuals or organizations.

All he said was . . . "Wait 'til next year coach! . . ."

Red Scare Hits Another University

Recently the editor of the University of Chicago newspaper, the Maroon, was removed from his office by the dean of students because of his attending and sponsoring an East Berlin Youth Rally this summer.

The action seems important to us not only because of the freedom of the student press issue which is involved, but also because it is another evidence of the jittery attitude institutions of higher learning, which should be one of these matters.

Columnist Decides UK Is In Middle Of Gulf

The University of Kentucky is located in the middle of the Gulf of Mexico. We have come to this conclusion after reading a few issues of the St. John's News. They make UK sound so far in the South that it must be in the middle of the Gulf.

The St. John's News, apparently not a member of the Society to Love Universities at Lexington, Ky., and Coaches named Rupp, has continually attacked UK in both its sports column and its "Unpopular Opinions" column (aptly named, to say the least). The attacks generally centered on poor Uncle Adolph, who has never done anything to St. John's except clobber their basketball teams. On off days, the News attacked such things as the ill-fated jazz concert of last year.

The Stew Pot

Columnist Decides UK Is In Middle Of Gulf

By Dorman Cordell In the Nov. 8 issue, the News reported: "We were much surprised last week when a telegram arrived. . . . This message probably refers to this department's remarks on Herr Baron Rupp and a sarcastic note in Tom Kelly's 'Unpopular Opinions.' (How did they guess?)"

Apparently the editors of the Kernel misunderstood our remarks. In the words of Happy Chandler, "ah just loves Kaintuckey." It is the loud-mouthed Baron from the Bourbon State and the methods he employs (including winning over St. John's, no doubt) that fall under our fire and not the University of Kentucky, the state of Kentucky, the South, the Confederacy, Southern womanhood, or any other institution which the gentlemen from Dixie hold dear.

Apparently the News has some good sense, since it asked us to send the Kernel each week. "And if they wish to use Confederate stamps," they add, "we'll pay the postage due when the post office refuses to honor Jefferson Davis' memory." They end by saying they are looking for a Confederate flag for the office and "Long Live Dixie!"

Poor old Adolph will really catch it when UK beats St. John's next month, I guess. He probably deserves it — it's very inopportune to score more points than your visitors. Makes them feel unwanted.

The Students Speak: Band And Suky Representatives Deny Any Conflicts

Dear Editor: In the last issue of the Kernel there appeared several letters in addition to an editorial commenting pro and con on the "Suky versus Band" dispute. This, it seems the time to throw some light on the situation. With all due respect to the various authors we, the undersigned, wish to take a stand on the matter. Inasmuch as we are closer to the situation than most others, we feel that our views will come close to the truth.

Famous Partner Defends Addison

My Dear Sir: I noted with no small degree of perturbation your reference in the last issue of your sheet to Mr. Addison's "verbose" epistle. Now I shall freely, and without precedent recrimination, admit of some slight personal bias upon this topic; for Mr. Addison and myself have enjoyed a long and most cordial acquaintance. Yet it is just this point that prompts me to write, even though it be at the risk of disapprobation. In those numerous years that our friendship has endured I have never heard Mr. Addison speak or seen him write (and I should add here that those opinions of mine are but echoes of those of other gentlemen who have known and conversed with Mr. Addison) but that his every word expressed the most judicious and felicitous choice and the minutest part of his discourse was in its every implication proportionate to the idea of the whole.

Knowing these matters and knowing equally well the fine taste displayed in your journal, I was at loss to explain the sudden lapse shown in titling Mr. Addison's epistle as you did. While in this re-read quite closely the entirety of your paper in the hope that I might discover some resolution to my doubts. As a result of this perusal I have concluded that the whole matter results from a printer's error; doubtless the adjective "verbose" must apply to "Kernel," this being the only logical modification possible. I trust that you will take some action in this matter so as to prevent in the future such grievous errors. It is, I assure you, a most heavy reflection upon the judgment and integrity of your sheet.

Most respectfully,
Richard Steele

Student Complains Of Too Much Ink

Printer's ink is coursing through the veins on the campus, because everyone wants to get in the act—Suky vs. the band. There have been enormous editorials, letters and letters to the editor over the Suky and UK band conflict. And, alas, all has been in vain. I have talked to members in the band, and have seen for myself that there is no conflict between Suky and the band. It's all a matter of publicity sensationalism, or something or other, which is taking a firm hold in the editorial rooms.

We like to be impressive at the football games, and we have a right to be. Every other college does it—why can't we? The growers seem to be coming from the section just behind the card section, who claim that they can't see the band with the card section in action. But those in the card section are sitting down, and you can see perfectly. It's just that they can't see the performance of the card section, or they have no brains with which to correlate the two.

to write the students of your college as a possible source of correspondence. We are of average military age, therefore have wide and varied interests, making correspondence on your part very easy and, we hope, interesting and enjoyable.

We want to express our appreciation in advance for any consideration you might give us.

Fearless Explorer Enlightens Kernel

Dear Editor: During one of those pleasant days last week I went for a stroll a little off the beaten path in the Botanical Garden. On this stroll, my fancy was engaged by the singular oddness of the great assortment and variety so those interesting round stones to be found there in such great abundance. There were some very typical ones near what looked like a small entrance to a cave. I have been wandering ever since what the stones once were and how they might have found their way there.

Later I went to the library. When I walked in, a big rush of hot air made me feel a little stifled, but I got used to it after a short time. While there I met someone that has something to do with the Southeastern Conference of the Spiked Shoes and we had a good talk. It was mostly about the anti-gambling pledge sheet and how coolly it seems to have been received by the student body. We found agreement in that the pledge was either too strong a measure to take so suddenly, or else the students felt that it struck at such deep roots of the problem, the problem itself remained practically unscathed.

It seemed as though it were quite a bit cooler when I left the library, so I sheltered some on my way over to the Registrar's office. You would

The Party Line

Social Affairs Center On Christmas Theme

By Ann O'Roark and Beth Gallivan
With Thanksgiving and the Tennessee game safely (or otherwise) out of the way, the campus has returned to normal. It's time to start looking forward to the Christmas dances and parties...

Congratulations to Daisy Mae and LPI Abner who were Jacks Cotton, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Bill Green, Sigma Phi Epsilon. The boys in the stands cheered their fellow sufferers out on the field, but the LPI Abners just didn't have a chance. One by one they were dragged over the finish line.

Another girls will have to wait until next year to grab another LPI Abner, they will have an opportunity to choose an Ugly Man this week. This contest, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, closes today. The Ugly Man will be presented at the first basketball game Dec. 2.

A Bigger And Better Holiday Is Just Around The Corner

By Ann O'Roark and Beth Gallivan

Doublets you are still dreaming of turkey and dressing, plates of cranberry sauce and mounds of whipped potatoes. You were home and a hero to your family who hadn't seen you since summer. A few—only a few—instructors gave holiday assignments, so your thoughts wasn't entirely yours. Your thoughts now turn toward that bigger and better than ever (like all good movies), the Christmas holiday.

Time For Gatherings

Christmas is a time for family gatherings. It's one day in the year when folks travel from near and far for reunions at home. But, for American men fighting in Korea, there is only the memory of the past and the hope of a future Christmas.

Nevertheless you don't need a new dress to celebrate the festivities, because you can just as easily, and a lot cheaper, buy a bit of ribbon or net which will change the whole dress. Using green or red will put you right in the middle of the holiday spirit; to get a scarf, belt, hair-clasp, gloves, shoes, or purse to decorate your costume for all the parties this season.

Here is a notice to all UK co-eds: Beware of overhauling mistletoe! Of all the traditional Christmas practices one of the favorites of the men on this campus is the hanging of mistletoe in order to trap all unsuspecting maidens.

Men Are Chasing

Sadie Hawkins Day is not long past and the young men are out to show that they can do some of their own chasing and cornering, even without wearing short skirts! So, heads up and keep a sharp lookout, girls. Of course, if you happen to be with the one then let him chase you until you catch him.

Favorite Christmas songs are being heard here and there, especially where groups have gathered to practice for caroling. Pictures of women and Christmas trees are being scrawled on chemistry and history notes, while the unartistic student just dreams of a white Christmas.

Among the many activities, such as the Ugly Man Contest and fraternity and sorority parties, there hasn't gone to be much time for studying.

But the loneliness of a Christmas day on a bleak, cold battlefield can be lessened. The way to do it is with a box from home—a box filled with the little delicacies that we enjoy during the holiday. One especially good suggestion, from the Food Editor of the current Good Housekeeping Magazine, is a box of homemade cookies.

It is a little late to start sending boxes overseas now, but there are still several days left for Christmas shopping for your family and friends. Being at college often limits your budget rather strictly, so buying presents can present a problem. However, with an eye open for bargains and a good taste in what the person likes you should be able to do all of your buying in one afternoon. Preparing a guide list of probable items before starting proves very helpful.

Formals Coming Soon

The Christmas formal dances are coming up soon, too. So it is time to take the long dresses and the tux out of mothballs for this holiday season. For the girls, red seems to be the predominating color, with full skirts made of yards of net and tulle. The ballerina length formals are popular and in good style, but you can never go wrong with the full length dress. Strapless gowns are the favorites for any type of dance.

If You Catch A Student Husband, See The University Dames Club

By Jack Whiteley

Any of you girls planning to catch husbands who are still in school? If so, then you want to be sure and get in touch with the University Dames Club, a national organization of student wives.

Began in 1946 upon the request of Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Donovan, the Dames Club has since developed into an organization with a variety of different programs. In 1946 it became a member of the National Association of University Dames, and at present there are 70 chapters representing some 38 states.

The main purpose of the Dames Club is to develop a feeling of congeniality among its members by participating in several programs which have a common interest to all. By working together the club has the satisfaction of accomplishing something and having fun at the same time. There is no discrepancy made between wives of veterans, non-veterans, graduates, or undergraduates. Membership is open to all wives.

The club itself is broken down into separate groups meeting independently and one major meeting held each month. By having individual component groups everyone is assured of finding some aspect that is both pleasing and entertaining. Dues for the Dames are 75 cents a semester or $1.50 a year.

Broken Into Four Groups

The bridge group, arts and crafts group, music group, and the newly established exercise group constitute the four main divisions of the Dames. Each is designed for those members whose interests and capabilities lie in a particular field. No one particular group is limited in size, and any member is welcome to belong.

The bridge group, meeting twice monthly at Shawneeview, the Cooperstown, also conducts classes in beginning bridge. Classes are taught by sponsors from the University Women's Club, an organization of faculty wives. Anyone interested in learning can get in touch with Mrs. Ray Wilson or Mrs. John Whiteley, co-chairmen of the group.

A variety of stylistic compositions ranging from modern to semi-classical and classical is offered to members of the music group, which meets once a month in the Music Room of the SUB. A Christmas program is now underway for the next regularly scheduled meeting in December.

Meet Twice Monthly

Ceramics, knitting and crocheting, basketry, and rug weaving are just a few of the projects being undertaken by sponsors of the arts and crafts group. Meeting the second and last Tuesday of each month, the group has just recently begun experimenting with textile paintings and hopes to begin working with

Games Saturday Will Decide Cats' Cotton Bowl Opponent

TCU Is Favored To Top Southwest

By Roland Kraps

The "Bear" and his cotton spinning Wildcats are still patiently waiting for their opponent to be named for the Cotton Bowl game to be played in Dallas, Texas on New Year's day.

With five Southwestern conference teams, TCU, SMU, Baylor, Rice, and Texas, still having a mathematical chance of clinching the berth, the race promises to be reminiscent of the Lodger-Giant pennant race this fall.

The race could well fall on the unlucky fourth week when the Texas Longhorns butt heads Thursday with the oldest rival, Texas A. & M. while TCU pits its strength against SMU and the Baylor Bears play host to the Rice Owls on Saturday.

TCU, who backed the Owls 22-6 last week, probably has the best chance of meeting the Wildcats as they now hold four conference wins. In their game against SMU, they will meet one of the pastime's powerhouses in the nation in Fred Benner. Benner, it may be well remembered, led the Mustangs to a 27-20 win over Notre Dame by his accurate heaves earlier this season. Benner is not the only good toser in the conference, however, who can hurl the piekin. Larry Isbell, Baylor's ace quarterback, led the Bears to a hard fought 14-12 win over this same Benner last Saturday and kept the Bears in the running.

Isbell does not only excel as a good passer, but can run with the ball as he has proved on several occasions.

He has led the Bears to the best overall record this year as they have racked up six wins with one tie and one loss, that coming at the hands of TCU, 20-7.

The Bears topped Texas 18-6 two weeks ago in proving they had one of their best teams and their best chance of winning the title in their history.

With TCU humbling Rice 22-6 last Saturday, the Bears chance of least gaining a tie in the conference seems good.

TCU took to the air in racking up their one sided win over the Owls, after capitalizing on blocked punts and fumbles.

This loss to TCU plus meeting powerful Baylor Saturday will give the Owls a dim chance unless they can upset the Bears.

If the Longhorns manage to get by their arch rival, Texas A. & M., they may well find themselves facing the Wildcats for the second time this season. They downed the Wildcats 7-6 in their opening game this season. They were out of the field by the Cats who could not find the scoring punch.

Kentucky, which probably brings one of the worst non-loss records to the Cotton Bowl in history, is figured to make a good showing and predicted by some to come out on top.

In losing Saturday to the General and one of his finest crews to date, the Cats were dropped to seventh in the AP poll.

Many coaches and sports writers, however, say the Cats are one of the "Bear's" best to date and with Parilli in the slot are always capable of defeating any team in the Southwest conference.

Big Bill Spivey Still Out As Basketball Season Nears

By Earl Cox

To use an over-worked phrase, it could be a long hard winter, or at least a long hard month of December, for Kentucky's basketball Wildcats.

Coach Adolph Rupp hinted as much this week and he gave two reasons why it could be true:

(1) It now appears that All-American Bill Spivey will miss at least the first month and a half of play because his knee, which was recently operated on, is not responding to treatment.

A possibility exists, and it is a strong possibility, that Spivey may miss the entire season. However, if he can play along toward the tail end of the season, he will see action.

(2) The Wildcats meet their toughest opponents during the month of December, facing such powerhouses as St. Johns, Minnesota, DePaul, U.C.L.A., and two strong teams in the Sugar Bowl.

Rupp said the Cats have the toughest early season schedule in many years. It would be a minor miracle if they came through December without a defeat.

The caters were been looking great in practice even without Spivey, but his big boy's rebounding is missed. Without him the Cats can't control the boards the way they have in the past. It will be one of Rupp's shortest teams.

Six veterans from last year's NCAA champs are battling it out for starting positions. They are Cliff Hagan, Bobby Watson, Frank Ramsey, Shelby Linville, Skippy Whitaker, and Lou Tsiropoulos.

Sophomores Bill Evans, Gene Neff, and Gayle Rose and freshman George Cooke are pushing the veterans for starting positions.

Don Swartz, another highly thought of frosh who underwent the same operation as Spivey, is now working out. Swartz also turned down a stable bonus from a big league team.

Assistant Coach Harry Lancaster was in Hazard Monday night scouting Xavier and Eastern. The Cats meet Xavier in Cincinnati in the second game of the season, Matt DeBour, who played last year for Lexington Latin, is a starter for Xavier.

Suggestion Is Made That Number 10 Be Retired In Honor Of Babe Parilli; Team To Resume Practice Dec. 22

It is generally conceded Vito "Babe" Parilli is the greatest quarterback in football today. Some say he is the greatest passer ever to play the game. Coach Bryant, who has seen a lot of good ball players in his time, calls the Babe "the best in the nation—college or pro."

This column is in agreement with anything good which is said or written concerning the player who has done most to gain national prominence for the University football program.

It is for that reason we suggest the number which has been synonymous with Parilli be retired. The Number 10 which has been the envy of every boy who has crowded the entrances or exits wherever Kentucky has played should never lose its association with the truly All-American who wore it.

The practice of number retirements has often been abused in our quarters but we believe there is a legitimate reason for leaving Number 10 to the memories of Wildcat fans. We aren't saying there will never be a greater passer or a greater player at Kentucky than Parilli. His records will in all probability be broken someday. Next year the fans will be cheering for his replacement.

For years Parilli's name will be used as a yard-stick in measuring the capabilities of Kentucky players. His records will be the aim of every passer in the nation.

His records may be broken, his feats may be surpassed, but his name will not be forgotten. We believe the number which he made famous should always belong to him.

There will never be another Babe Parilli—there should never be another Number 10.

John Griggs And Harry Jones Selected As Players Of Week

By Marvin Poor

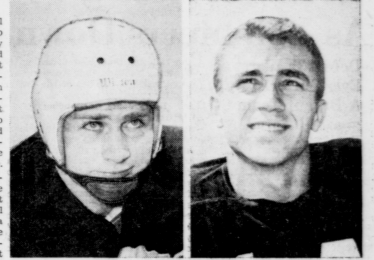

Not enough horses was the general consensus of most football fans who witnessed the worst defeat that any Bryant-coached team has suffered while the young mentor has been at the reins here at Kentucky. However, the horses that did work on Stoll Field last Saturday have nothing to be ashamed of. There just weren't enough of them arranged to plug up the holes against a squad from Knoxville, Tennessee that managed to throw three men into the game for every position on the team.

When a bunch of Kentucky Wildcats take the field and play a game such as the one some 38,000 fans sat in on over the week-end, and still lose by a disappointing 28-0, it's a bit complicated to single out any one performer on the part of the Kentucky gridgers. All of the boys that saw action in the game turned in sparkling performances. This column is forced to go out on a limb this week in choosing one of the boys up front, and one of the backfield charges in the fast Wildcat sackfield for player-of-the-week honors.

Coach Bob Neyland remarked that Harry Jones was all over the field and proved to be the toughest player to operate against the Volunteers offensively. Harry was the key man in the kick-off return department for the Cats. Several times he brought the partisan crowd to their feet as it looked as though the 152 pound halfbacks would break into the clear and go all the way. On one particular return, Harry had a clear field ahead with the exception of one orange jersey. Try as he may, the little runner was unable to go around the defensive man and was brought down only after scampering 47 yards through the Tennessee team. This may have been a major factor in the ball game at that point.

In addition to this, Harry ran four times from scrimmage for a net gain of 35 yards, which is close to nine yards per try. He was on the receiving end of four punts, one of which netted a total of 45 yards. This was by far the best game Harry has played while wearing Kentucky colors.

John Griggs

ington IA Jones shook himself loose on the Kentucky nine yard line and carried the ball 91 yards from scrimmage for the longest run turned in by the Wildcats in history. He just missed being player-of-the-week after that game. Harry betted that performance against the powerful Vols and fully earned the right to share the honor with Johnny Griggs, one of the rugged tollers in the good Kentucky line.

Griggs was a sixty-minute man in the game against Tennessee Saturday. Coach Bryant surprised everybody when he started his big boy at one of the defensive ends in a move to strengthen the line against the red runs that the Vols are famous for. As the game progressed, Griggs was moved to five for the Kentucky fans.

different positions. Wherever the line was weakest, Griggs was placed there to bolster the defenses. He was virtually a 400-yd at every position which included both defensive ends, offensive and defensive centers, and offensive fullback.

Johnny was injured early in the season and was forced to take it easy in the early games. He came along rapidly toward the end of the campaign and really turned on against one of the best lines ever to come out of the south. We doff our caps to these two fine boys that gave a disappointed crowd something to talk about on what was otherwise a dull and lackluster afternoon for the Kentucky fans.

Ed Hamilton Wins Scholastic Award

Ed Hamilton, senior right halfback, was the recipient of the Sammy Eley Scholastic Award at the annual Alumni Banquet held in the SUB Ballroom Monday night.

The award is given each year by Sammy Eley to the senior squad member who has the highest grade standing. Last year's award went to Dick Martin.

"Ed," as he is known to his teammates, is a product of Louisville football circles and has played three years of good ball for Coach Bryant. His talent was overshadowed for two years though, by his brother Allen who graduated last year.

Ed's ability at defensive half has been part of two of Kentucky's best defensive teams. This year he was worked on both defense and offense and his efforts have been highly responsible for the Cotton Bowl bid.

Gen. Neyland Extends Streak Of Never Losing To Kentucky As Volunteers Down Cats 28-0

Defeat Is Worst Ever Suffered By A Bryant Team

"Wait till next year!"

That remark, popular with Kentucky football fans since 1935, is still in place after the University of Tennessee soundly defeated the Wildcats 28-0 last Saturday.

And Gen. Bob Neyland kept in tact his record of never having lost a game to Kentucky. He issued orders for his infantry to advance and it responded with 307 yards through Kentucky defensive positions and a score in each quarter.

Kentucky Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant called in his all-star and All-American quarterback Babe Parilli to make direct hits on 15 of 25 passes but the Vol air defenses were impenetrable near their goal line.

It was a typical Tennessee win. Powerful running backs methodically advanced behind perfectly timed blocking. Each Kentucky mistake was quickly converted into a Tennessee break. A master fullback, Hank Lauricella, slipped speed and deception on end runs. A sturdy wingback, Bert Reichacher, carried the ball five times and picked up 46 yards. Fullback Andy Kozar ripped through the center of the Cat line for constant gains.

Harry Jones was the only Kentucky back who was able to gain with any consistency against the sturdy Vol forward wall. He reeled off 158 yards on five kick and punt returns. On one kickoff, he ran 47 yards as the shivering crowd yelled for a repeat of his touchdown run against George Washington a week earlier. He carried the ball four times from scrimmage and gained 35 yards. He was on the receiving end of four Parilli passes which accounted for 43 yards.

The defeat was the worst ever suffered by a Bryant-coached Kentucky team. Georgia defeated the Wildcats 35-12 in 1948. And this marks the first season that one of Bryant's teams lost four games.

Parilli Plays Last Home Game

The fabulous Parilli, playing his last game before a home crowd, turned in a sterling performance. His passes were good for 172 yards. In the second quarter he master-minded his team to the Tennessee one-foot line but when the Babe attempted to go over on a quarterback sneak, the center of the Vol line held. Two of his throws were intercepted by the Vols. His kicking average for the game was 35.0.

Harold Payne and Andy Kozar each scored a Tennessee touchdown and end Vince Kaestner scored twice on passes.

Tennessee demonstrators they have a legitimate claim to the number one rating given them by the nation's writers, coaches, and broadcasters. Playing a comparatively light schedule, the Vols had never had to exert themselves to win. Against their toughest opponent of the season last week, they still were not out of the woods.

Lauricella Amasses 123 Yards

Lauricella, too, lived up to press clippings. Virtually a show-in for All-American this year, the New Orleans product carried the ball 17 times and amassed 123 yards. He attempted six passes and completed three, one for a score. His punting average for the game was 55.5.

Defensive standouts for the Wildcats were co-captain Doug Moseley, Gene Donaldson, and Johnny Griggs. Moseley, also playing his last game at home, was a terror at his line backing position. Donaldson broke into the Vol backfield time and again. Griggs, who played both ends, offensive center, and defensive fullback, was in the game practically 60 minutes.

The Bowl Story

Cotton Bowl Acceptance Gives 'Bear' Four Bowls In Six Years

By Stan Portmann

Kentucky's head coach, Paul "Bear" Bryant, came to the University in 1946 to take over the reins of the cellar-dwelling Wildcat footballers. At that time he announced it would take him five years, the length of his first contract, to put some "Wildcat" teeth in the heretofore toothless "Kittens." Now, after six years, Bryant has led the Kentucky Blue to four bowl games, three of them major ones.

Actually he was a bit premature, according to his prediction, when in 1947 he took the Wildcats to the frigid Great Lakes Bowl in Cleveland, Ohio. On that miserably cold, snowy day the Wildcats outplayed Villanova 24 to 14 before 15,000 hardy fans. Kentucky had won eight and lost three that year in regular season play.

In 1948 Kentucky got no bowl bids, but there was a promising looking freshman in the Wildcat camp. The frosh, Vito Parilli, was destined to lead the Kentucky footballers to three major bowls in as many years.

With nine wins against three losses in 1949 the "Bryantmen" packed their swimming suits and suitcase and took off for the sunny climates of Florida and the Orange Bowl, the first of three major bowls in succession. The Wildcats took with them the national record for total defense and the passing and ball-handling magic of sophomore Parilli. They started strong against their West Coast rivals, Santa Clara, by scoring early in the second quarter

Bryant took the long stony road to rebuild his football fortunes. His inexperienced squad, once more sparked by the fabulous Parilli, won their opening, a breather against Tennessee Tech, and then lost three straight by an aggregate total of 19 points to Texas, Mississippi, and Georgia Tech. With the team looking stronger in each game the Wildcats won all the rest with the exception of their arch rival... the undefeated, number one team in the nation, Tennessee. Georgia Tech had already accepted the Orange Bowl, and Tennessee grabbed the Sugar Bowl, so many felt Kentucky would have to beat Tennessee to earn the still open Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Texas. Then the surprise came—Cotton Bowl officials liked the looks of the ever-stronger growing Wildcats, and especially the spectacular play of All-American Babe Parilli, and so five days before the Tennessee game Kentucky was offered and accepted the bid to the richest of all bowls, the Cotton.

This year, after losing 19 letters from the Sugar Bowl champions,

WBKY Of New Broadcasts

WBKY, UK radio station, is making a series of on-the-spot recordings entitled "Transportation Kentucky."

These programs are produced by two UK radio arts majors, Tom Skinner and Ann Carson. The recordings will consist of the different types of transportation in Kentucky. The students will take trips on the various modes of transportation and will make the recordings on the spot. Some of the historical background of each means of transportation will be given.

WBKY has also planned sports coverage of all UK home basketball games of the season. Jack McCrehan and Tom Skinner will be sports announcers, with Charles Taylor engineering the broadcasts.
