Dual Bands Play For Spring Dance

Special Number To Be Awarded To Kappas

The music of Johnny Long, Ted Plo Rito and their orchestras will apply music for the Student Union dance-sponsored Big Name dance, which will be held from 8 to 12 next Tuesday in the Bluegrass room of the Union, according to Mrs. Dorothy Evans, University school director.

The ticket-selling contest, which was inaugurated over a month ago, in which only members of the sorority and their dates may dance. The winning of the contest also permits Kappa Kappa Gamma to place three members for the selection of "Party Girl". The sorority has announced Lyle Gooding, Doris Macomber and Joan Ruby as their candidates.

Lances Initiates 11 Junior Men

Initiation ceremonies for new members of Lances, Junior men's leadership, honor society, were held Thursday afternoon in the Union building.

Those initiated were Fred Daugherty, Georgetown; Clay Salyer, Saltville; Byron Paris, Mt. Sterling; Morris Boese Jr., Lexington; George W. Fries, Salmons; James Hofford, Owensboro; Bryan Iglehart, Hartsville; William Hubbard, Dubuque; Lewis Hart, Lexington; Dick Gillespie, and Daniel Mitchell.

As a token of recognition, the prospective candidates wore distinctive armbands marked with a 13, symbol of Lances' parent organization, the Mystic 13, to all classes during the past week.

Membership in Lances is accorded outstanding members of the sophomore class. Members serve during their junior year, and are replaced by a new group selected during the spring quarter. Men are selected on the basis of outstanding scholarship and leadership abilities.

Several more men will be tapped for initiation in the near future.

Camp Scholarship Given Jean Ames

Jean Ames, home economics freshman from Lexington, has received a Danforth Summer Camp scholarship, given annually to the most outstanding freshman woman in Boone counties.

The scholarship awards two weeks at Camp Minnow, Michigan, maintained exclusively for young persons who "want to live in the leadership bracket of American life."

The leadership program in which Miss Ames will participate emphasizes physical, mental, religious, and social sides of the individual.

Miss Ames is a member of the Home Economics club, devotional president of the Baptist Student Union, and a member of the religious committee of the Freshman club.

Last year's scholarship was awarded to Nell Bogie. Any Dean is the 1946 alternate.

'No Houses' The Campus Enrollment To Be Limited To Accommodate

University Unable To Accommodate

Lack of housing facilities on and near the University campus has made it apparent that the University will have to limit its 1946 fall quarter enrollment to 5,000 students, according to a statement from Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, University dean and registrar.

"Each day it becomes more apparent that the University will not be able to accommodate all the students who may wish to enroll for the fall quarter," said the University dean, "and with this in mind the administration is urging all students interested in attending the University in September to forward their credentials at the earliest date possible."

High school seniors of this year should have transcripts of their high school credits forwarded to the registrar immediately upon graduation, and Kentucky students who wish to transfer from other colleges should also have their transcripts forwarded immediately from schools previously attended. Former students of the University should notify the registrar of their intention to return, the registrar said.

"It is unlikely that any application for admission or re-admission will be approved if received after July 15," said Dr. Chamberlain, "and admissions of Kentucky students will be approved in order of application irrespective of other factors." The enrollment of non-resident students is being held to 15 per cent of the total enrollment. There will be very few places to fill for the fall quarter and University authorities are not encouraging non-resident students to apply, he said.

Music Student Gives Concert

Bettie Harris Russell, mezzo-soprano, will present a recital in the Music room of the Union building during the past week.

The recital is open to the public. Tickets are on sale at the local music store.

A finance control committee was announced with Stan Skees as chairman. Other members of the committee include Nancy Kirby, Barney McKain, Joe French and George Paize.

Independents Elect Executive Committee

The Association of Independent Students held its regular meeting Wednesday, May 15, at 7 p.m. in the "C" lounge.

Vast Facilities Open To Students

First 'Vague' Slated To Appear May 28

"Vague," literary magazine being published by University of Kentucky chapter of Chi Delta Phi, national women's honorary, will be placed on sale in the Union building and the campus book store May 28, it was announced this week by Len Henny, editor.

The magazine will be published quarterly and will be composed of poetry, short stories, features and sketches contributed by men and women students at the University, Miss Henny said.

The magazine will sell for 25 cents per copy and may be purchased in downtown stores if arrangements can be made, Miss Henny said.

The Summing Up . . .

Four war years of college have been eventful years for this June's senior class—and the fact that these have been unusual times was as much of an advantage in many ways as it has been a handicap.

If social calendars had only thorough dates scheduled, University women found evenings free to enjoy feminine companionship which was unthought of when men were 2 to 1. If interest in classes was lacking, an education in history, geography and politics was gained in reading letters from overseas and keeping up with the armies in the newspapers.

Times of stress called forth talents that had before been undiscovered. Not until women had to take over the men's jobs did they have the opportunity to prove that they were just as capable. Coeds learned to live in the crowded dorms—soldiers were quartered in one of the halls—and they learned during gas rationing to walk and like it.

The seniors of '46 missed a lot, but they also gained much that they would have missed if the University and the country had been at peace. They have taken the return of the veterans in their stride: housing problems, inadequate facilities of all kinds have not made them resentful. From what they have learned there are some words they would say to those coming after:

Because the University is a social institution it has the faults, and weakness of the humans who guide its policies, teach its classes, and study in its halls. Therefore it is as great as you—as a part of it—make it. What the University most needs for its future growth are:

- The support and interest of the people of the state in its program of expansion, and the money necessary to put its program into effect.
- The enthusiasm and unity of the student body behind its administration and faculty—and the loyalty of its faculty members.

- To lift the University so far beyond petty politics that critics can never find excuse for accusation that the state university is not the equal of the best northern colleges which are unimpeded by party politics and manipulations.
- The installation of progressive ideas in classrooms—emphasis on courses of particular importance to veterans. Certainly courses in aeronautics could be developed even with present facilities, and flying classes could be listed in the schedule book. A good comprehensive course in marriage and sex education such as Prof. Noel Keys teaches at the University of California would be the best thing that could be added to the curriculum. Emphasis on liberal education—yes! But students also need to be prepared for living and for earning a living.
- More equalized standards of grading in the various departments, and effective inter-departmental organization. Why should a Phys. Ed. major not have to do as much work for an A as the history student who slaves over term papers, or the physicist who spends long hours in the lab?
- More active participation of the Student Government Association in determining the needs and policies of the University.
- Every American who so desires should have a chance to earn a college degree—but to receive it only if he really deserves it. Until the University raises its entrance requirements, and maintains more rigid scholastic standards, it cannot rank scholastically with the great institutions in the country.
- Some solution to the problem of conflicting studies and worthwhile extra-curricular activities should be worked out soon. Under the quarter system, it seems that students with major activities must neglect either studies or their activities part of the time.
- Provision for enrollment increases beyond 5,000.
- The incorporation of veterans into campus life—as veterans, but as students first!
- The beginning of a tradition of honor in classroom and research work whether with a "system" or without a system.

These ideas are easy enough to enumerate after four years on a campus, and harder to put into effect. The seniors leave it to you who follow them—and may you have peace in your time.

Nostalgia, Or Is It Neuralgia?

Even the most calloused senior—calloused that is from hours of study and "er-intellectual pursuit, has a few weak moments of nostalgia right before graduation. He thinks on the familiar places and faces that he will soon bid farewell, of the shared jokes and laughter, the strain and the heartaches, the dull and the delightful with just a bit of sentimentality.

So it is with the Kernel editor, when time comes to write "30" to a year of trying to be fair and accurate and first with the news once a week. Perhaps a lasting contribution to the campus had been made—probably not, but every minute of it—even the coldest ones in the sub-basement of McVey—have been something pretty wonderful. Now doesn't that sound just like a woman, calling an editorship "wonderful"?

Adjustment To New Ideas Are Part Of College Education

Of all the adjustments one must learn to make in college, one of the most difficult comes from the impact of new ideas upon long accepted beliefs and prejudices. In the classroom and in the campus social life one constantly comes in contact with different standards of good and bad, of politics, of taste in clothes, choice of friends and ambitions. It is quite a shock to the freshman who believes in the integrity of the campus leaders to find that perhaps—the president of one of the most influential organizations thinks ground could be gained more effectively with behind-the-scenes pressure than by above-board action. This is just a beginning.

Just as the soldier is disillusioned to find that his enemy is fighting for patriotic ideals as high-sounding and convincing as his own, so is the student shocked by realization that history books do not always tell both sides of the events that shaped America's destiny. When he learns that sometimes the Democratic party has stooped to underhanded dealing that would make the accused French diplomats to shame he begins to qualify his own opinions of international affairs. Sometimes the Republican leaders have sacrificed the good of the country for political gain—and knowledge of such facts changes the collegian's respect for his elders who boast of voting a straight Democratic—or (Republican) ticket. As the student learns true facts he must revise the narrower conclusions drawn from his grade and high school education, and his home environment.

When he learns the similarities of the religions of the world—of the beauties of Buddhism, and Mohammedanism, he may approach his own Christian faith from a broader point of view. He should become tolerant of those of different faith around him.

When he first discovers that within a book of the most beautiful homes in Lexington are the shabbiest shacks imaginable—that in the midst of the wealthiest part of Kentucky, and the most extravagant expenditures on horses and racing and such pastimes is the most abject need and poverty, he has the complete picture and can judge accordingly. When he sees in police courts the humans without pride or hope then he weighs character—success and failure. For if he knows both sides then he can decide what is right and wrong—good and bad. He need no longer accept what he is told, but question and find the answers for himself. Facts are the tools for straight thinking.

As the student learns to think, he grows more tolerant of the habits and ideas of others. He gives his associates the right to their own opinions when he finds that a lot of old ideas which he once would have sworn were absolutely right, are fallacious. When he learns that professors are not always scholars and gentlemen, and writers are not always accurate, he considers before accepting what he hears and reads. Even the most dependable, and sincere advisors can sometimes slip up, so the student becomes thoughtful. He learns that men are emotional as well as rational and acts accordingly.

From the breaking down of old prejudices and building up of new ideas the college student learns that much in living is relative. It just depends. And much depends on him as an individual. If he makes this adjustment to new ideas successfully, accepting or rejecting, incorporating them into his own thought, or revising them to his own use, he has learned one of the greatest lessons higher education—in college or out—can teach. And as an independent thinker he may learn that in making decisions the poet who wrote this knew what he was talking about:

"This above all, to thine own self be true,
And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

White Robes Are The Fashion: That "KICK" scrawled on the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity house at the University of Southern California certainly didn't stand for Kappa Kappa Kappa.

Isn't this sort of vandalism reminiscent of the "Roaring 20's"?

There were no charges, but Dr. W. H. Vaughn, president of Morehead State Teachers College, is definitely out of a job.

Hobo Day:
Hobo Day plans at South Dakota, directed towards realizing students' dreams which have accumulated during the past five years of war for a gala homecoming, are already well under way for this fall.

This year, as in pre-war days, each college organization will enter a float in the annual parade, which in former years has been approximately one mile long. Prizes for originality, beauty, and cleverness are awarded for diligent and deserving efforts on the part of the contestants.

Every student plays a part in the parade—either by solemnly riding on a float or by strutting down the street clad in a conglomeration of rags and accessories at a State College hobo. From this group of non-descript characters a king and queen are chosen to reign over the rest of the homecoming festivities. Included on the day's schedule are the annual football game staged in the college stadium in the afternoon, a dance during the evening, and a general get-together for alumni of SBEAC. During the half of the game, the king and queen are crowned and royally escorted somewhat.

And then there is Joe Covington and Sally Branch sometimes.
Another steady couple is Ray Gilson and Jamie Lee Coplan.
New couple: Pat Mendenhall and "Fast" Hedder.
Afterthought mentioning: Bob Johnson (AGR) and Anne Nesbitt Coliver.

Most of the time, Jane Elliot and Nelson Woodlot.
Steady these days are Paul Parker and Shortey Blocker.
Betsy Brown has been taking off like a small bird lately.
Amy Price has been getting a big rush from the Sigma Chis.

PINNING LIST:
Billy McCann (Phi Tau) to Maurine Rose (Alpha Xi).
Bill Forman (Pi Kap) to Joan Johnston (Alpha Xi).
Joe Hedder (SAE) to Betty Preston (Alpha Xi).
Bill Silliman (Phi Delt) to Roberta Wilson (KD).
Bella Chi "Ma" McCray to Jean Messman (a ring, that is).

NEITHER BLOODY NOR BOWED

They say of me, and so they should,
I'm doubtful if I come to good.
I see acquaintances and friends
Accumulating dividends,
And making enviable names
In science, art, and parlor games.
But I, despite expert advice,
Keep doing things I think are nice.
And though to good I never come—

It has been suggested that this column is filled with other people's creative genius merely because re-prints the works of others requiring less energy than writing original copy for The Kernel. To those who have thought such thoughts, allow me to state emphatically that they are so very right. What look you so long?

Pulling teeth is a cinch compared to the intricate tactics necessary for getting people to own up to having written some lines of low-down verse. Some of you even admit to having read my poetry at all. Occasionally, however, one runs across someone who will confess to having committed poetry. A new discovery is the student whose lines were asked to appear anonymously.

And while we're on the topic, perhaps in the Sunday Herald-Leader of Woodridge Spears' The Feudalist, Mr. Spears, who is an instructor in our English department, wrote a piece of poetry that is much more worthy of praise than that which was obvious in the review. Although I don't clear this dominant in his poetry is its abstruseness, his writings offer a nice challenge to those who would care to answer it. The Feudalist. Try it.

By Charles Sargent

A veteran reviews a book—len promises to follow him in a boat, which indeed she does, but when he gurgles, gasps, and goes under, she just sits and watches him thoughtfully.

The heroine of "Leave Her to Heaven" is a girl named Ellen, who is obsessed by the notion that too many people are cluttering up her life. There is her brother-in-law, for instance. He's nice enough as adolescents go, nevertheless, he's always hanging around and disturbing delicate feet to cheer him up. Ellen becomes pregnant, but before long she finds her increasing size annoying and throws herself down a flight of stairs, which may or may not be the best way of doing this sort of thing. Any way it abruptly ends her pregnancy. Then she decides that her husband is carrying on with her cousin, and she winds up by taking arsenic (what, no old

The Varsity Show

By HUGH COLLETT

Another school year is hurriedly coming to an end, and here we are, much deliberation, the staff felt that, in this day of modern design, this day of horte races, this day period, such an item would not be acceptable to our advanced minds, who were more accomplished apple-polishers than we—those who are about to go out into the world, etc. etc. But we're depressing. In honor of these lucky so-and-so's, The Kernel staff is dedicating this issue of The Kernel.

In preparation for this issue, the staff went through the morgue looking up former senior editions, wracking our brains for an idea.

We ran onto an early '30's edition which presented a series of non-sensical items. We recall one item which stated that T. T. Bones won first place in the human show held in the cattle pavilion. The judges for the contest were Man o' War and two of his colleagues. After much deliberation, the staff felt that, in this day of modern design, this day of horte races, this day period, such an item would not be acceptable to our advanced minds, who were more accomplished apple-polishers than we—those who are about to go out into the world, etc. etc. But we're depressing. In honor of these lucky so-and-so's, The Kernel staff is dedicating this issue of The Kernel.

school level — "collegiate" they call it! In an effort to make the "most-est the happiest," we finally landed on the plan that you are now feasting your eyes on. We feel that this form is quite acceptable. In 1941, the senior edition was planned on "We're going into the army, so what the hell!" As you might have imagined by the time you are forced to read these color-mobbed lines, this edition comes forth with the idea of "We're back from the army, so what the hell!" or something like that. SO WHAT THE HELL!

MAKING BELIEVE that we are a senior on the verge of that great experience commonly referred to as graduation, we shall endeavor to reminisce—probe into our past—as we are led to believe we shall do when and if we do arrive on the verge of said experience.

If we had it to do over again, we wouldn't have signed up for that course called atomic physics, which Margaret Skinner told us was a snip.

It's pleasant to recall the time we went to Bloomers in that thing the U-Drive-It people call an automobile (we found out later that the crate we were driving was a 1929 Franklin, single engine, air-cooled, in-line sport coupe—1929; that's before they started making Model A's). On second thought, it isn't so pleasant. We recall the log kept by an old buddy—a former air force navigator. It went something like this: "Passed sign advertising funeral home at 1877. Trip uneventful in toto, if toto doesn't include the slide down the log mountain between here and there with the co-piled riding herd on an emergency brake that didn't exist, or the strictly instrument flying—with only one trump card—other cars have lights. OH JESU!"

By the time you read this far, the second bell will have rung, and the professor will be clearing his throat, trying to get you to tear away from these columns long enough to answer the roll. What with the quarter so near to an end, we shouldn't want to get you into trouble, and so, without further adieu, we bid you all au revoir.

Vet About UK

By Clayton Roland

We have been advised by the Fayette county clerk's office that June 4th is the last day a person can register in order to vote in the August primary election. Veterans are especially urged to make sure they have registered before the deadline for registering rolls around. You have done your duty in defending your country militarily and now it is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their country politically.

This is important. Let no one kid you about it. We are faced almost with as many dangers internally as externally and the American way of facing the situation is to perpetuate good government. The only way this can be done is to vote. Of course, you must use your own good judgment in selecting those candidates who stand for your ideals of good government but that comes in August and November.

The immediate problem now is to register so that you can make your choice later. The time is short so take care of it presto.

TEMPLE AND WISCONSIN ON TOP

We were interested in Drew Pearson's Sunday night broadcast when he listed the country's outstanding universities which were doing more for the veterans' cause than any others. We moved our ears closer to the wireless machine expecting him to say something about the University of Kentucky but we were disappointed. He listed the top-notchers as Temple University of Philadelphia and the University of Wisconsin.

Apparently Kentucky's efforts don't show up too prominently in the national picture when it comes in for comparison with other schools. Let's hope the next report coming out of Washington places UK on nothing less than the best in football. Why should we expect anything less for the veterans?

Man Of Affairs--The Veteran

By Mildred Long

Until every man from 18 to 45 who served a term in the service of the country is no longer identified as "John Doe, veteran" the desires of these ex-soldiers and sailors will be news.

The vets who have taken jobs, built homes, gone into business or returned to college have amazing influence on the affairs of today; what they are doing and thinking is important.

About twenty-three hundred of these veterans have returned to the University. Visible evidence of the effect they have already had on campus life is in social activities, in the Cooperstown project in some classroom reforms and in the work of the Veterans' club. Thursday the state organization of veterans entered the Morehead college controversy.

Just how do these student-veterans make their influence felt in campus and national affairs? Mainly through effective organization. Membership in the Veterans' club here was at the last count about 950—which is only about two-fifths of the total number enrolled in school—but the club fairly well represents the many veterans who do not belong. It covers the state through the Kentucky Association learn; education refers to "schooling as such." In on-the-job training, the employer trains the veteran and pays him a trainee wage while the Veterans Administration pays the veteran's subsistence. In educational benefits, the Veterans Administration pays the veteran's subsistence and his tuition.

Converted National Service Life Insurance is still GI insurance, backed by the federal government. It is NOT converted with a private, commercial firm, but is converted through the Veterans Administration.

of Student Veterans. Howard Bowles, University club's president, is also president of the KASV. They have stated their official purpose is "to promote the education, economic and social welfare of student veterans in Kentucky."

Before January of 1946 the Vet club membership was only about 130, but the first builders of the club who started it in the fall of '44 kept things going until the large group of ex-servicemen came back. Most of the actual work is done through the social, membership, nominating, program, publicity and current events committee and ten special committees. These include the Cooperstown committee which works as a kind of liaison body with the veterans housing project; the veterans housing committee, finance, citizen action rate, greet the veteran, and intra-state committees.

Through the radio committee the club is working in collaboration with WBKY on a 15-minute Wednesday program entitled "Listen, The Veteran," which is channeled through WLP. They are also collaborating with WLAP on regular radio forums.

Along the same line, an exclusive veterans paper is published bi-monthly for club members. Clayton Roland has charge of writing and mimeographing this four-page Post-Warrior.

Particularly interesting has been the work of the legislative committee which sends letters and telegrams to the state representatives in Washington expressing opinions on national affairs. During the last session of the Kentucky legislature this committee was the parent of a veterans subsidy bill which proposed state support in addition to the GI bill allowances.

Along the same line, only with more far-reaching results is the education committee's National Educational Emergency Proposal. At the time that the Veterans housing bill was being separated from Administrator Wilson Wyatt's housing proposals, no mention was made of the use of pre-fabricated houses for government housing units on the campus. The club got in touch with Senator Barkley and wired Wyatt's office. The Education proposals as set forth by the UK Veterans' club was sent to Mr. Wyatt—and a short time later the Veterans' Housing bill went through the Senate and was approved by the President about April 8. Howard Bowles thinks that his proposals helped from the housing bill as it was passed—to the advantage of the many men with families who were having a hard time finding homes.

This same committee has conferred with Congressman Virgil Chapman and corresponded with other Kentucky representatives about the needs and wishes of their members. The National Educational Emergency Proposal was sent to every state in the union and was supported by 23 replies from universities in North Carolina, New York, Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia and Iowa as well as other states.

In the future the club plans to set up an emergency loan fund for the veterans who are in a tight place, with a boost anywhere from $10 for a dance, to $100. Other projects are on future-book. President Bowles, Vice President Daryl Hancock, Treasurer Ed Cabroad, Secretary Bill Speigman and other officers almost have a full-time job with all these activities. But they realize that the club members and the veterans who have not joined and their fellows throughout the country are in a position to set the attitude of the student body—to win state elections—and to directly effect the course of events for the next few years. "John Doe, Veteran," will be in the news for a long time to come.

Along the same line, only with more far-reaching results is the education committee's National Educational Emergency Proposal. At the time that the Veterans housing bill

Patterson Library Contains Collection Of Ex-UK President

The Patterson Library—where that? asks a large percentage of University students when questioned concerning the subject. Of course, there are many who are acquainted with its whereabouts, but there are just as many, or more, who are not. Actually, the Patterson Library is one room located on the fourth floor of the University Library. It contains the collection of personal books that used to be kept in the home of Dr. James Kennedy Patterson who was president of the University of Kentucky between the years of 1889-1910.

In his last will and testament, Patterson presented to the University his library embracing several thousand volumes and worth $10,000. He also provided that the library should remain intact as a unit, and books should not be taken from the room, wherein they were placed for study by him and his family.

Last, he bequeathed $400 per year for the upkeep, maintenance, and good condition of the room. Included in this collection of books are those pertaining to Greek and Roman classical literature and English history. Also, the library contains famous illustrated Bibles, Pezanne books, and several books on British generalities.

The Patterson room proves to be quite interesting in other respects. For, in addition to the books, one has the opportunity of seeing various articles that once belonged to Patterson.

For instance, there is an old hand printing press that was used before the age of typewriters and carbon paper. Letters had to be written with a pen and dampened; then they were put on the press in order to make copies.

Aside from this, there is Dr. Patterson's pulpit that he used at chapel meetings and a table and old-fashioned chair that he worked at as president of the University. Around this are arranged high back chairs that people occupied while awaiting admission to his office during business hours.

A crutch belonging to Patterson and pictures of him and his family have been placed in this room along with the other of his belongings.

So, the next time you are around the library, make it a point to locate the Patterson Library. You won't be sorry for doing so, because it will be time well spent.

GI Wives Are Coeds Too

By Jan Timmons The old saying that a woman's work is never done certainly applies doubly to University co-eds who are attending college along with their GI husbands and are trying to keep house at the same time. Sleep becomes an unknown factor in this hectic life, and the daily menus would have a long way to go in order to compare with what mother's used to be.

Now, it's sandwiches and still more sandwiches, with recitations of chemistry, philosophy, and history between each mouthful in a last-minute attempt to prepare oneself before dashing off to class. Dagwood Bumstead would be left far behind in the race and confusion that takes place here.

Less Correspondence "What is there to do for pass-time?" someone asked. "Pass-time? Big joke! The main trouble is that time passes too fast, and things are yet to be done."

One co-ed admits that she is being disowned by family and friends because she fails to write, but insists that taking time-out for answering even one letter slows up a day's routine that has to be planned with the greatest of care, so as not to exceed the limit of 24 hours. Consequently, a dozen or so post cards sent out approximately once a month is the extent of her correspondence.

Another campus wife says she is taking fewer credit hours since her marriage but explains that she is more serious about her work—and, not only does she have her grades to consider, but she also has to con-

'The Dames' Night Out

Last Wednesday night just like any other night of the week's. Perhaps so, but not for the wives of Cooperstown. It's their night out. Papa can stay home and study or play with the baby because mama has a date with The Dames club.

What is this? Yes, something new has been added to the University of Kentucky... an organization of the wives of married veterans who attend the University. This club had its beginning last fall. President and Mrs. H. L. Donovan, Dean Sarah B. Holmes, Assistant Dean Jane Haselton, and Mrs. M. M. White, president of the University Woman's club, thought that the new club should be formed under Woman's club sponsorship.

The Dames club has not national connection, but several universities across the country have formed similar organizations. It was only last fall that the University of Kentucky had large enough enrollment of married students to form a club for their wives.

The purpose of the club is to give each wife an opportunity to become acquainted with other wives of the community. The meetings are held every other Wednesday in the Music room of the Student Union building. One is business; the other meeting is social. Your husband won't mind sharing you with the Dames club from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The program of the club consists of everything from music and lectures to plain old "ben chattering." Household Cleaning, "Budgeting," "Cooking," and "Demonstrating Textile Painting."

The Dames club is now making a drive for membership. This is being done by two methods. Letters are being mailed out to all wives of veterans of the school; four hundred of these were sent this week. A special effort is being made by old members to contact some of the wives personally.

A forthcoming event is a picnic scheduled sometime in May in which Mrs. X will present to Mrs. Y her better half, "the man of the house."

'Little Spirit Of The Glass' Answers All Unknown Questions

By Suzanne Nicholas A nocturnal stroller who chances by Jewell hall certainly gets the impression that the female student burns her midnight oil at the lamp of knowledge. For such a gleam appears shining forth on certain nights when the barometer reading is seasonable.

The passer-by undoubtedly warms himself with that thought, and sends his way home with a new feeling of security. The new generation is preparing itself to shoulder the burdens of the world, to solve all of its problems and ultimately create a true Utopia on earth, wherein man can relax and enjoy himself. Complicated taxpayer, dream man!

He does not suspect that yonder light does not illuminate the text of a manual on metaphysics or a volume on Aristotelian thought. If the passer-by could but peep into the window of the long-distance telephone room from which the light comes, he would be hypnotized by the mysteries revealed there.

Indeed, it is a night of revelations! As the lights are being switched below, Factor No. 1 thrusts a finger outside the roof-door and finds the atmosphere ripe and mellow. A sense, ruled by the Jewell Hall Spirit, goes into session in the official chamber, the long-distance telephone room. Only those who "believe" seek admission and spiritual guidance, can be embraced into the mystic orders of this petticoat government.

Factor No. 3, official usher and shoe-lace washer, descends the lounge stairs, gently conducting the fair-palated subject to the inner sanctum of the be-dimmed long-distance telephone room, where she sits to wrestle with the Fates. The young, grueling hours of waiting and worrying have caused ethyast conortions upon the pallid face and the knees to quake in uncontrollable fright. She is received at the door by Factor No. 2, who bolsters her courage with a wink and a drag from her cigarette. She is motioned to crawl to the chair opposite the Prophetess herself, who has been obvious of the proceedings and sits with arms folded upon the table, staring intently at the coin receiver on the telephone.

Slowly the paraphernalia of the rite about to ensue is discernible through the fog of tobacco smoke and burning incense. The Seeker of Truth finds herself sitting before a smooth-topped card table on the center of which rests an eight-ounce glass bearing a Miller's High Life label. From the fifth rung of the ladder leaning against the wall is a white candle suspended by a clothes hanger.

The ceremony begins. The Seeker, who has not flinched a muscle except to knock the ashes from her cigar, begins a series of weird motions, maneuvering her arms through the air. For the first time her features become distinct; she is enlightening to behold. The army shirt she wears gives her an eerie, drab look. About her saintly head is wound a tattle-tale grey pillow case with the stamped letters "Women's Residence Halls" peeling off the forehead. "Don't be alarmed," comforts Factor No. 1, who is mouching upon a biscuit salvaged from dinner. "She is only doing her Yogi. It won't be long now."

Having paid the $3.00 fee, the visitor is called upon to submit her particular problem to the Spirit. In a meek, tremulous voice comes the question which had caused many nights of sleepless torment, "O Spirit of the Glass, will I get flunked in English this quarter?"

After Allah is prodded seven times in unison, the Yogi is complete. Each witness places a finger lightly upon the edge of the glass and waits. The lips of the Seeker move and words of wisdom and erudition pour forth. "Leave us all moderate. Leave us all concentrated. Leave us all supplicate. Hubs, hubbs, hubbs. Ah, gracious, divine Spirit of the Glass, speak to me (mourny sobably). Answer in this hour of need. Are you with us tonight? If you are, designate your by describing a circle, and no by making a straight line. One if by land, and two if by sea."

The Spirit is with them, the glass moves and answers in the affirmative. The Oracle speaks again, "Little Spirit of the Glass has blessed us tonight. Now, nothing can remain unknown."

Original Drawings, Designs On Exhibit In BS Building

On exhibit now until June at the art gallery in room 217 of the Biological Sciences building, is a collection of original drawings and designs by the students in the art department. This is an annual exhibit, the drawings representing outside effort as separate from class exercises. Most of the pictures—sketches and drawings—are done from memory and imagination. These are from the pages of a sketch book and have none of the teacher's influence. "The drawings show highly individual trails of imagination and creative ability," said Prof. Raymond Barnhart, of the department. "To me it's great evidence that modern art comes from original thinking about contemporary things."

Part of the exhibit consists of designs done in class. The students have constructed designs out of such simple materials as cloth, wire, soda straws, cotton, and even pipe cleaners. "These structural designs are made to develop a sensitive response to the demands and possibilities of materials," Professor Barnhart explained. "One of the aims," he continued, "is to produce a form and a unity out of unrelated fragments. The art student then learns how to produce surface effects with the simplest instruments and becomes trained in responsiveness and inventiveness."

Sun 'n Summer Cottons

Now that it's beginning to get warm again, we hope the thing foremost in our minds is what to wear for spring and summer. Cotton dresses are the fad this year. This year's styles speak for themselves: simplicity is the word. The dresses are very becoming and stylish with broad shoulders and straight skirts, yet daintiness stands out. The "fresh look" is vague and is brought out quite well in stripes and solid colors.

White is making its comeback in this season's fashions and quite battefully shows off the much popularized tan, especially when worn with bright-colored accessories. Charm features a washable sun rayon of white with green pin stripes. A set-in midriff that ties in the back slenderizes the waist and a gently full skirt gives the peasant effect. The sleeves are cut off short and the neckline is high with the collar rolled out.

Also featured in Charm is a two-piece, cap-sleeved coral dress with the dirndl skirt vertically striped and the blouse horizontally striped; its neckline is high and round and the pockets are stand-out style.

This outfit is quite appropriate and comfortable for both campus and off-campus daytime wear.

For the sun-worshipper a halter-topped outfit of blue chambray is shown. The dirndl skirt has a row of vertical stripes about six inches from the hem. To complete the ensemble is a bishop-sleeved jacket with buttons down to the waistline. The neckline is high with a tiny standing collar. The jacket can be worn in late afternoon when the sun has gone down.

Rickrack proves exciting for the coming season. Glamour shows a cap-sleeved, yellow chambray with rows of rickrack at the waist and neckline. The skirt is full and the neckline is square and rather high. Also on this line is a line cotton with black braid running horizontally from the fast to the neckline, which is low and square.

Skirts and blouses are always popular. This season we'll see black dirndl skirts with lace on the hem pockets and the hem. A white blouse with eyelet embroidery and flared sleeves is worn with the skirt, which is made of combed cotton sateen.

Junior, Would You Like To Study Now, Please?

By James Bourke

Remember when the teacher used to say, "Shedup, you brats!" and every kid in the class got as quiet as a clam at a church-meeting? Well, sir, they don't do it, that way any more. Not a bit of it. In this atomic era the teacher walks into class and says, "Kiddies, what would you like to do today?"—then lets nature take her course. And they call it progressive education.

All this we learned from Miss Billie Dale, arts and sciences senior from Paris, Ky. Miss Dale, a brown-haired ADPI who rides a bicycle to school, belongs to the College of Education and spends a lot of her time student-teaching at the University Training school. She informed us most emphatically that our conception of progressive education was not quite correct—and she should know, because one of these days she's going out and become a physics teacher.

U-Hi Lights

Progressive education as practiced at the University Training school is not exactly the thing illustrated above, but it is a comparatively new brand of book learnin' that puts the three R's on a modern pedestal. Instead of clogging the child's path with academic red tape, it allows him to develop as his abilities and capacities permit. It creates a situation, tempts the child's curiosity, then leads him gently and pleasantly into the halls of learning.

Gently and very pleasantly, Miss Dale led us into the halls of learning that compose the University of Kentucky's College of Education. Colonially aloof, it stands opposite the front campus, part of a three-wing building which also houses the University high school and the University elementary school. Miss Dale's particular interests lie in the field of secondary education, but she was kind enough to show us through the grade-school side of the building and tell us a little bit about how it works.

It seems the University Training school is operated as a distinctive unit of the University of Kentucky, the College of Education giving a cooperative and supervisory hand with the city and state school systems. There are twelve grades. Each pupil pays a tuition fee for the privilege of attending, as contrasted to tax-supported free public schools. Apparently Lexingtonians think the school one of the best in the city.

because there's a long list of parents who would like to have their children enrolled in the institution.

Fifth Grade Trains

But to get back to Miss Dale and progressive education. We took particular note of the fifth grade room, because it is there that Miss Dale has spent some time gathering practical knowledge to teach children these days. Take for example the class in reading. One day the class in reading came across something about trains. They became very interested in trains, and so decided to investigate the subject thoroughly. They even went to the railroad station to watch trains arrive and depart, and spent some time talking to the engineers. By the time the whole thing was over, the children knew all about pistons and steam power—and more about pressure than a University freshman.

The second grade planned its work with an Easter motif in mind. They made a long "List of Things We Want to Do for Easter," among which are included "Have an Easter Egg Hunt" and "Make a Calendar That Shows Where Easter Is." Until now the kids have had only a vague idea as to what a calendar is, but this is where they find out for sure. Another class has made a startlingly original series of illustrations for the story of "Goldilocks and the Three Bears." To rank outsiders such as we, this art work seems a very tangible measure of the children's progress. Though arms and legs may be askew on their beginning portraits, in a few years they can produce works with perfect symmetry and amazing detail.

Teacher's Responsibility

A large helping of responsibility is served to those who teach in such a school as this, according to Miss Dale. When progressive education is in operation, each pupil is considered as an individual and is treated as such. If he is interested in his studies and wants to go ahead faster than other members of his group, it is his right to do so. It's easy to see that when the teacher has a class full of "individuals" she has a job on her hands. She must suggest things in such a manner that the pupils think the idea was theirs in the first place. She must keep the children interested in their work without resorting to pedagogues, and at the same time see that they don't wander too far from the subject at hand.

Recently a science class became fascinated over a study of turtles—not the ocean-going variety but the kind you buy at the five-and-dime. So they built a terrarium, stocked it with turtles, observed turtles, and made reports about turtles. The investigation so bewitched one boy that he wanted to know all there was to know about turtles. His avidity not being shared by the rest of the class, he was given a list of references which he perused by himself and to his complete satisfaction. His interest was appeased without stopping the class, and everybody was happy.

Progressive education has chopped a lot of wood in the academic forest, Miss Dale avows that when it comes to chopping that kind of wood, the school from the kid's point of view. It's also one big job, says Miss Dale.

All Synthetics

Frankie And Jewell--

By Margaret Dickey

The girls of Jewell Hall call them Frankie and Jewell, and actually the night supervisors of the upper-class women's dormitory are students just like the other residents. Frankie, who has the very impressive name of H. Franklin Wolfe, is from Redondo Beach, Calif., and has been at the University since 1945. Jewell Bryce Waulizer is from Bumpus Mills, Tennessee (and doggone proud of it). Jewell has been here since 1944.

The jobs of these two girls take in just about everything and anything. Turning out lights, removing persistent dates, finding lost coats, cashing checks, and acting as hostesses after 7 p.m. are just a few of the many things important to the well-being of Jewell hall residents.

Before coming to the University of Kentucky, Jewell and Frankie were both employed. Jewell was a secretary and Frankie as a procurement inspector for the Army Air Forces. Jewell attended Bowling Green Business University before applying her knowledge of secretarial work, but like anyone else, she had hopes of some day fulfilling a desire to attain a goal—in her case becoming a medical student. And this is just the course she is taking here. She is now a pre-med junior. Frankie has aspirations of following the course in business administration which she is now taking.

Why two girls so far from home should choose to come to the University of Kentucky is now clear. Jewell's employer knew of her desire to return to college and suggested that she take a few courses by correspondence. That decided the issue. All she needed was a suggestion and back to school she came. Frankie was born in Kentucky and the desire to return to her home state brought her to the University of Kentucky and Jewell hall.

Both Frankie and Jewell enjoy their work as night supervisors. Jewell says, "I like my work because it brings me in contact with girls that I might not have met otherwise." Frankie says she likes everything about the work—especially the variety. (Any Jewell hall girl knows what she means!)

There's absolutely no way to distinguish Frankie and Jewell from the other coeds on the campus, but if you should see a tall blond with a twinkle in her eye and an attractive brunette walking toward you, look hard. They are probably the night supervisors of Jewell hall.

A Greek Writes

By Lenora Henry

Enclosed in a letter to the University of Kentucky from Athens University, Athens, Greece, is a postal card which states, "A small token of gratitude to an unknown American friend for what Athens has done for Greece."

The letter, written by Miss Angeliki Kostantinidou, "Student of the Philosophy," says there is a junior organization of the Society of Friends of American Studies at Athens University.

She explains that the members of this society are mostly university students. Their aim is to augment the study of American ideals, methods, and practices. All of this is under the guidance and supervision of professors of the University of Athens who are graduates of universities in the United States.

"One way of accomplishing this would be by correspondence with individual members of your student body," Miss Kostantinidou states. Greek students will answer all letters. She suggests that students at the University of Kentucky who are interested might write and explain student life as it is in the United States, the methods of study, hobbies, or any subject of interest.

The letter with Miss Kostantinidou's address may be found in the office of the YWCA.

Bellevue Meet Re-Scheduled; Reynolds Elected Tennis Captain

Kentucky's tennis team lost another decision to the weather man this past Saturday when rain necessitated postponing until June 1 the meet between the Wildcats and the Bellevue all-Stars. However, the main didn't keep Coach H. H. Downing from giving his annual dinner for the members of the team. At the dinner meeting the squad elected Captain Al Reynolds to continue his duties next season.

his second year of tennis for the University of Kentucky. The 20-year-old player holds high rankings in singles and doubles in Eastern U. S. Tennis Association competition. He is majoring in journalism. At the beginning of the season, Al was appointed captain of the team, and following his impressive play this year was elected to the post for next season. This year's team with the exception of one man will be back next year and will be a more experienced bunch. Billy Hodges is the only graduating senior on the squad. Billy, who is a veteran player on Kentucky teams from before the war, fills the No. 2 position on the team. The members of the team in addition to Reynolds who will be eligible next year are John Meyerholz, Dick Meadows, Carroll Pears, Tommy Ashbury, and Bill Long. Meyerholz, Meadows and Pears played their first tennis for Kentucky this year, while Reynolds, Ashbury, and Long were members of last year's team.

Two Meets Remaining For Golf Team

The Kentucky linksmen will close their season one week from today when they play Xavier of Cincinnati. The Kentucky men have two more matches to play, both with Xavier. The first of these will be played tomorrow afternoon here at the Ashland golf course. The second meet will be held in Cincinnati.

The Kentuckians have won three matches, lost two, and tied one Saturday they defeated Miami University at Oxford by a score of 10-8. Hicks of Kentucky was low score of the day with a creditable 71. E. Ball of Miami ran a close second with 74.

The Kentucky men have defeated Miami U. (twice) and University of Tennessee. They have lost to Tennessee and Cincinnati. They tied one match with Ciney, thus bringing their record to three wins, one tie, and two losses.

Basketball Statistics Final Standing Of 1946 Wildcats

Here are the results of the 1945-46 basketball season. They are being re-printed in answer to several requests from fans and students to settle disputes that have arisen about various games.

Time Out!

By O. C. Halvard Jr.

At last the Athletics department has decided to put some light on the football situation. They recently voted to install new lights on Stoll field and make arrangements for more night football games. The new lighting system will be ten times as bright as the present one. And anyone who has tried to witness a night event on Stoll field knows that the present system is inadequate.

The new lights will be mounted on six towers, three on each side of the field. There will be 144 lights in each tower, making a total of 864 around the entire field. There are only 48 lights in the entire present system.

Arrangements have already been made to play two of this year's games at night. The opening game with St. Xavier on September 21 will be played at night and the Mississippi State game scheduled for October 5 has been changed to a night contest. This was done in order to give more persons a chance to see the Wildcats in action.

Coaches Ray Baer, of Louisville, and Ralph Mills, of Hopkinsville, have been selected by Paul Bryant to assist in the University of Kentucky's football coaching school to be held August 28-31. Although it hasn't been officially announced at the writing of this column, Coach Adolph Rupp will probably select the two coaches whose teams played in the finals of the Kentucky High School Basketball tournament to assist him in his basketball clinic this summer.

Faults and Penalties: In last week's Kernel, a story appeared about Coach Rupp. In that story the Baron of Basketball was connected with another sport, namely, baseball! We knew that a lot of the players on last season's basketball team are playing baseball, but we didn't know that Rupp had taken up coaching 'the sport'.

'Speaking' of basketball, we suppose most of the UK students saw the belated reward of parts of the Kentucky-Rhode Island game played in Madison Square Garden over a month ago. Not only did it show shots of our team playing some good ball, but it also showed a good shot of our coach in action. However, someone should inform Paramount News that the Kentucky team is known as the Wildcats and not the Colomels.

Candidates for office include Ruth Wilde and Margaret Wilson, president; Margaret Hall and Ethel Norwood, secretary; Jo Hampton, Betty Crowe, and Millie Johnstone, treasurer.

Jim Weber Scores Five Points For Kentucky In S.E.C. Track Meet

By Don Twines

The Kentucky track team completed its 1946 season last week by sending three men to the SEC meet at Birmingham, Ala. Under the able coaching of Sully Jacobs, the trackmen faced stiff competition at the SEC meet and managed to come out with one fourth place and three fifth places.

Elongated Jim Weber, UK track star, made all the points to gain the honors. Weber made five points and came very close to winning several of the events. Kentucky ranked fourth in the discus throw and fifth in the shot put event and the high and low hurdles. Weber was leading the group in the hurdles and was expected to win until he pulled a muscle in his leg, which caused the six foot, seven and a half inch Weber to lose his lead. Weber defeated the winner of the hurdles in an early heat before his leg gave way under the strain.

sixth place in the javelin throw but was not able to gather any points. Dean, who took part in the 100-yard dash, did not qualify.

Kentucky had only one meet this year after having four scheduled. Three were cancelled because the opponents were unable to muster up enough men to put on track. In the lone meet, the Wildcats easily defeated Tennessee Polytech, 84-33. Weber paced the UK men in that event by winning both hurdles, the shot put, and the discus throw.

No men have been awarded letters or numerals as it is not done on the success on only one regular meet. Coach Sully Jacobs said, however, that he would have the men compete against each other May 31 and those winning and making the best record and time in that interterm event would be awarded letters.

State Athletics To Be Improved By Clinics

A long-range plan to improve the quality of athletics in the state of Kentucky has been approved by the athletic board of the University of Kentucky, it was announced by Bernie A. Shively, athletic director at the University, following a meeting of the board today.

The plan will be introduced August 28, 29, 30 and 31 when head football coach Paul 'Bear' Bryant and his staff, in conjunction with Frank Thomas, coach of Alabama's 1946 Rose Bowl champions, and two outstanding Kentucky high school coaches will conduct a football clinic at the University. At the same time Coach Adolph Rupp, whose basketball team won the National Invitational Tournament championship, will conduct a basketball clinic. He will also be assisted by two outstanding high school coaches.

Feature of the clinic will be a basketball game played Friday night, August 30, between the Eastern and Western all-star high school teams. The Kentucky High School Athletic Association has already endorsed this game as well as the East-West all-star football game proposed for next year. The plan is to conduct these games as annual events.

Tuition to the clinic is free and coaches attending the school will be furnished with free rooms in the Kentucky dormitories. Motion pictures of important games will be shown and explained to the coaches. Outstanding track and baseball coaches will be added to the staff of next year's school, Mr. Shively said.

University of Kentucky basketball and football squad members will be used in the demonstration. Athletic Director Bernie A. Shively has announced the approval of a new lighting system for Stoll field by the Athletic council of the University of Kentucky. Work on the new installation will begin in the near future in order to have the field ready for football season.

As a result of the new installation it is expected that the Wildcats will play to much larger crowds than they have played to in the past. Two football games on the 1946 schedule, one with the University of Mississippi September 31 and the other with St. Xavier University October 5, have already been placed on the night schedule.

The new lighting system, which will be ten times as powerful as the present system, will have three towers on each side of the field, each containing 144 lights. The present system has only 48 lights altogether.
