OPENING REMARKS

What wonderful stories we are hearing from you about the generations of UK ties in your families. Here's just one of the responses we received. In future issues of the Kentucky Alumni magazine, we will print additional stories in the Class Notes section. You can also read more of the stories online at www.ukalumni.net under News and Events. Look for the convenient link for you to use to tell us your story. Send pictures, too.

A Legacy Family

To make a long story as short as possible, my husband, Kirk Chiles '72, was a walk-on for Coach Rupp the last year that he coached. (Kirk's "claim to fame" is that he was the last player substituted in Rupp's last game at Memorial Coliseum, 1972. Coach Rupp told Kirk, with less than two minutes to play and being ahead by 20 some points, not to give the "blank, blank" ball away.) Coach Rupp, truly, was a taskmaster; plus, this has been a great trivia question!

Years later, Kirk (a high school basketball coach) worked the UK summer camps, and although he had always dreamed of taking his little boys with him, we were blessed with three girls. When Kirk and I (and the two older girls) stood in line one day in the early '80s to have pictures taken with Coach Hall, I felt very uneasy, as little boys in basketball trunks lined the hall. Our "babies" were in sun dresses, white anklets and Sunday school shoes. When we reached Coach Hall and the photographer, I timidly asked Coach Hall if it would be okay if two little girls (as opposed to two little boys) sat on his lap with a basketball for a picture.

Being the class act that he is, Coach Hall said, "Bring them up here right now. Of course it's okay." (Kirk also played as a freshman walk-on for Coach Hall.)

Basketball Coach Joe B. Hall took "time-out" to pose for a photo with Katy Chiles '98, left, now married to Darrin E. Travillian '97, and Mandy Chiles"01, (on lap), now married to Matt Stone '01. At UK, Katy and Mandy were in the Honors Program and made their mark academically. Dianne and Kirk Chiles also have one other daughter, Lucianne, currently a sophomore at UK.

Time passed and our third baby girl was born in 1985.
When she was in elementary school in Western Kentucky, Joe B. and Katherine bought a house on a lake on the road where we lived. Having mutual friends (Ken and Vivian Collins and their daughter Kacy), Lucianne and Coach Hall met and became close friends. Years later, when we moved back to Lexington and Kirk got the head coaching job at Henry Clay (our alma mater), Lucianne, the third "baby girl" (12 or 13 at that time), took a trip back to the lake with Coach Hall to visit Kacy. Being the gentleman that he was, he walked to the door, rang the doorbell, and escorted her to the car for their big trip. Lucianne never really knew him as the coach who led the Cats to an NCAA Championship, but as a very gracious man who was kind enough to give her a ride to visit her buddy.

As far as the three daughters are concerned, they have done quite well at UK: two graduated with honors, two were Gaines Fellows, one received the Sullivan Award, and all three made the Dean's List each semester. (Lucianne will be a sophomore this year.)

My husband, Coach Chiles, is presently coaching basketball at Henry Clay and has taken three teams (from different schools in the state) to the Sweet 16 (two, of which, reached the Final Four). Wow! He certainly had the best mentors available as far as basketball coaches are concerned.

Thanks!

UK INIVERSITY OF KENTICKY

Attitude of Gratitude

In this season of thanksgiving I want to express personal thanks to the many faculty, staff, students, alumni, and friends of the University of Kentucky who are helping it achieve its dream, master the myriad challenges it faces, and contribute to its success as the flagship university of the Commonwealth.

We have so many wonderful accomplishments to celebrate. On measures of excellence, whether made by national organizations and colleagues or by the Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education or by our own Strategic Plan standards, we are succeeding in moving toward the top-20 goal set in HB1 in 1997.

UK is making an impact statewide by utilizing the Cooperative Extension Service network, which has an office in every Kentucky county, to deliver information and services on economic development and health to all Kentuckians. Whether you're living in the city, a small town, or the countryside, there is something of value to be found through our Cooperative Extension program.

Students at UK graduate at nearly double the rate of any other public university in Kentucky. We are either meeting or significantly progressing on goals set for student recruiting, excellence, retention and graduation. Part of UK's Capital Campaign fund-raising goal is dedicated to increasing scholarship opportunities at the university. Scholarship programs like Robinson Scholars, Singletary Scholars, Merit Scholars, Governor's Scholars, and Governor's School for the Arts scholars as well as strengthening on-campus academic support programs and services. Every day UK students are doing something or learning something extraordinary.

The UK health care enterprise has grown substantially beyond the Chandler Medical Center. Patients from all 120 Kentucky counties avail themselves of diagnosis and treatment in cancer, Alzheimer's disease, heart disease, spinal cord injury, obesity, ophthalmology, dental disease, and so much more. Every day UK researchers are working to find better ways to diagnosis, treat, and cure.

Our efforts to achieve all that this university can become are reflected in the need for specialized spaces. Some very important buildings are either newly occupied or under construction, including the Biomedical and Biological Sciences Research Building, the Center for Pharmaceutical Science and Technology at the UK Coldstream Research Campus, four residence halls, two parking structures, and the Main Building, brought back to life after the devastating fire in May 2001. In addition to administrative offices, the Main Building now contains the UK Visitor's Center, a public meeting room, and "smart" classrooms.

So let me say thank you again for your support through membership in the UK Alumni Association and your gifts of goodwill, time and money to your university and your college. Patsy and I appreciate the opportunity to work diligently on your behalf for our alma mater. We extend to you our holiday greetings as 2004 comes to a close and we look forward to all that will be done in 2005.

President Lee T. Todd Jr.

RESEARCH NOTES

UK Conducting Landmark Cardiology Trial

Dr. David Moliterno, professor of internal medicine and chief of cardiovascular medicine, UK College of Medicine, is serving as national principal investigator for a major U.S. multi-center trial for high risk coronary patients. Moliterno, an interventional cardiologist, is also co-director of UK's Gill Heart Institute.

The landmark trial is one of two announced by Guilford Pharmaceuticals that advances the field of interventional cardiology by attempting to determine the optimal therapeutic regimen for high-risk patients undergoing percutaneous coronary intervention. The study is looking at drugs that prevent the formation of blood clots.

The one-year study began this fall and is expected to involve about 8,000 patients and 200 hospitals, with 40 to 80 patients taking part at the UK Hospital.

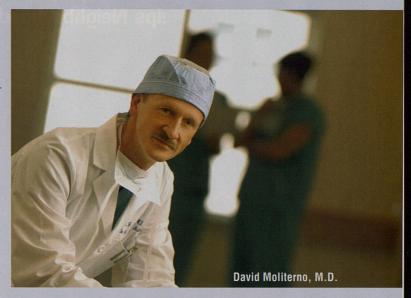

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) is the fourth leading cause of death in the United States, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Those seeking treatment for COPD in Kentucky now benefit from a new state-of-the-art clinic at the University of Kentucky's Kentucky Clinic.

"COPD, better known as chronic bronchitis and emphysema, is a preventable and treatable disease," said Dr. Dennis E. Doherty, chief of the Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine, UK College of Medicine. "The early signs of the disease include cough, mucus production, shortness of breath on mild exertion, and wheeze. People generally associate these signs as part of smoking, but do not realize that these can also be warning signs of imminent lung damage."

The clinic, located adjacent to UK Hospital at 740 S. Limestone in Lexington, will work closely with the Asthma, Allergy, Sinus and Pulmonary clinics.

The clinic is focusing on a comprehensive approach to COPD. Dr. David M. Mannino, associate professor, Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine, UK College of Medicine, began seeing patients at the new clinic on Aug. 20.

"The goal of our new clinic is to make sure that the patients who come to see us get the best care possible," Mannino said. "Our clinic not only has the resources to treat patients with COPD, but also the option to be involved with cutting-edge treatments and research to evaluate potential new options or therapier"

The UK Division of Pulmonary Medicine offers complete diagnostic evaluation and clinical management of all respiratory disorders for inpatient and outpatient services. Diagnostic aspects include routine pulmonary function testing, and related and intrarelated pulmonary evaluation of interstitial lung disease, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, asthma, infectious lung disease, drug-related pulmonary disorders, and carcinoma of the lung.

For more information about the UK COPD clinic or to schedule an appointment, call 859-323-5365.

Campus Coffee

The UK Kentucky Clinic now has its own Starbucks, the third Starbuck location on campus. The three campus locations have expanded the menu to include sandwiches.

In November 2001, the first self-operated dining service in the country to operate a licensed Starbucks store was opened by UK. The newest Starbucks employs a staff of as many as 60 people. With one exception, every employee at the new Starbucks is a student.

The fourth Starbucks is expected to open at the new Biological/Biomedical Sciences Research Building in January

As part of Welcome Week in August, members of the UK community worked in small groups to complete service projects throughout Fayette County as part of UK FUSION (For Unity and Service In Our Neighborhoods). Participants met at 9 a.m. on Haggin Field for registration and transportation to various community agencies, returning to campus in the late afternoon.

Some of the 50-plus organizations benefiting from the efforts of over 1,000 students, alumni and faculty volunteers included the UK-LFUCG Arboretum, Habitat for Humanity, Central KY Blood Center, God's Pantry and Cardinal Hill Hospital.

Enrollment's Something To Talk About

UK had a record enrollment of 26,900 students for the fall semester 2004, a 2 percent increase over the previous year. It also was a year that saw a record number of undergraduate applicants, up 13 percent from 2003.

This year's freshman class increased by 9 percent with 3,987 students enrolled. This is the largest entering class in school history as well as the most selective and academically talented group of first-year undergraduates. UK's newest students include 303 Kentucky Governor's Scholars and Governor's School for the Arts students, 152 Legacy students, 157 high school class valedictorians (a UK record), 35 National Merit Scholars, and two National Achievement Scholars.

The middle 50 percent of the ACT scores of the incoming freshmen show a composite of 22-27, well above the national average of 18-25 and equal to or better than a number of UK benchmark universities. The middle 50 percent grade point averages of the new students remained steady at 3.3-3.9.

First KAPT Class

The first freshman at UK to pay for their education with KAPT, Kentucky's Affordable Prepaid Tuition program, were welcomed to campus by UK President Lee T. Todd Jr. and Kentucky State Treasurer Jonathan Miller. KAPT makes it easier for Kentucky families to afford a college education by guaranteeing the cost of tomorrow's tuition at lower prices today.

While the KAPT program was begun in 2001 under Miller's leadership, this fall marks the first opportunity that entering college freshmen have used KAPT funds to pay for their higher education. The program requires that a student be enrolled in KAPT at least two years before matriculating at college. Approximately 150 Kentucky

Mobley Leads Advancement

Terry Mobley recently was named vice president of a new UK Office of Institutional Advancement. Mobley, who served 28 years as chief development officer for UK and then vice president for development, has added the offices of Alumni Affairs and External Affairs to his plate.

UK President Lee T. Todd Jr. said that combining the development, alumni and external affairs (public, government and community relations) functions into one office provides "enormous opportunity to build in the synergy of these three groups as we work to enhance our development efforts and strengthen our partnerships throughout the Commonwealth and beyond."

Stan Key, director of the UK Alumni Association, noted that development and alumni affairs have a long history of working together. "The association appreciates Terry's past support and we look forward to working with him to advance the university's mission."

Mobley, a native of Harrodsburg, Ky., graduated from UK in 1965 with a BA degree in history. He was a Wildcat basketball player from 1961 to 1965. After graduating from UK, Mobley worked for IBM Corp. before returning to UK in 1977.

Kentucky Challenge Goes Out to 1995 - 2004 Alumni

UK is competing against five other Kentucky universities to see who can generate the most alumni giving participation. The win (and bragging rights) goes to the university that has the largest percentage of its recent alumni participating by making a contribution. The competition is open to alumni who received their undergraduate degrees between 1995 and 2004. Participation is not measured by the amount of the gifts, but by how many alumni participate.

In addition, the UK colleges are competing against one another to see who can generate the highest percentage of alumni participants. A running total will be available at www.kentuckychallenge.org/uk.html until the end of the competition on June 30, 2005.

If you are among the alumni who graduated within the last ten years, please participate! You can designate your gift to any area of UK you choose — your college, scholarship funds, a favorite program — it's up to you. Your gift will help current and future UK students and improve UK's national rankings in U. S. News and World Report. That makes your degree that much more valuable.

Participating in the Kentucky Challenge is quick and easy. A tax-deductible gift can be made by:

- Calling the Development Office at 1-800-875-6272.
- Mailing a check to Kentucky Challenge, 200 Sturgill Development Bldg., Lexington, KY 40506–0015.
- Using your credit card (VISA, MasterCard, Discover or American Express) to give a gift online.
- Responding to phonathon or direct mail appeals. And, if your spouse is a UK grad, we can count both of you as donors for a single gift from your household. Be sure to check and see if you or your spouse's employer participates in a matching gift program. You could double the amount of your gift.

Let's show the people of Kentucky why UK is #1!

Accept the Challenge

In the autumn of 2000, the University of Kentucky announced its first ever capital campaign. Thousands of alumni and friends responded to the $600 million Call to Greatness with their volunteer support and financial contributions. Three years later we celebrated the successful completion of that campaign, having raised $618 million.

The success of that campaign cannot be measured in mere dollars because the impact on the University of Kentucky has been far greater than achieving any fundraising goal, regardless of how formidable that goal might have been. Endowed chairs, professorships, fellowships and scholarships were established that now make it possible to recruit and retain the very best faculty and students for UK.

There are still many dreams that can only be successfully realized through private funding:

- We continue to aspire to be a "Top 20" public university as mandated by the Kentucky General Assembly.
- We must establish more scholarships and fellowships to continue to attract the best and brightest students, and encourage them to remain in Kentucky and use their talents for the betterment of our state.
- We must create more professorships and endowed chairs to recognize and support the outstanding faculty who teach our students, as well as those who conduct the cutting edge research that fuels our economy and positively impacts our well-being.

 We must build new facilities that will provide lecture halls and study areas for our growing student body, and offices and laboratories for our world-class faculty.

To meet these challenges, UK's original campaign goal has been increased to $1 billion, to be reached by the end of 2007. The state has continued to provide Research Challenge Trust Funds, matching money for private contributions, making this an excellent opportunity to double the impact of donors' personal gifts. With your generous support, the University of Kentucky will realize its dreams.

PLOHIDA VIRTUAL SCHOOL

10 KENTUCKY ALUMNI

Julie Young, president and CEO of Florida Virtual School

UK Grad Julie Young leads the Florida Virtual School — The Nation's Largest Precollegiate Online School

By Robin Roenker

Julie Young loves teaching.

So much so that at her first job, as a sixth grade teacher at Lexington's St. Peters and Paul School, she often forgot to pick up her paycheck.

"My husband used to tease me and say, 'This is not volunteer work. There must be a paycheck somewhere," jokes Young, a 1981 graduate of the UK College of Education.

"But I really enjoyed teaching so much, sometimes getting paid didn't enter my mind."

More than 20 years later, Young's passion for teaching is still going strong.

Now the president and CEO of Florida Virtual School — the nation's largest precollegiate online school — Young is one of the foremost authorities on issues of online education and distance learning in America.

A Vat of Chocolate

Julie Elkin Young and her husband, Bruce Young, a 1980 UK College of Engineering graduate, originally had no plans to leave Kentucky.

Young grew up in Lexington only a mile from Commonwealth Stadium; her father and older brother were UK alumni, and so going somewhere else for college "never got a second thought," she says.

Her four years at UK were full of great memories with her sorority sisters in Alpha Gamma Delta.

"I really loved the whole Greek experience at UK," Young says. "We had a great time, and I feel like I got a wonderful education."

When she graduated from UK, Young expected to teach in Lexington for a while, and then become a stay-at-home mom to concentrate on raising her kids full-time, as her own mother had done.

Those plans changed when Young stepped into the classroom and "fell in love with teaching," she says. It was a career that let her work and still balance the needs of her young family: sons Brett, now 20, and Taylor, 16.

Bruce's job with IBM took the Youngs from Kentucky to Ft. Myers, Fla., in 1984, and then to Orlando, where they've lived since 1996.

In Ft. Myers, Julie taught elementary school for six years before becoming a curriculum and technology specialist and assistant principal.

As technology coordinator in 1989, Young helped network her school, San Carlos Park Elementary, putting four computers in every classroom and launching an IBM pilot program called "Teaching and Learning with Computers."

That role led to a two-year joint position with the Lee County Schools and IBM, in which Young trained teachers throughout the district about how to integrate computers into the classroom.

These experiences were what laid the groundwork for Young's foray into virtual education in 1996.

Having recently moved to Orlando, Young got a call from the Orange County deputy superintendent, Bob Williams. He told her the district was interested in a technology grant and wanted to speak with her.

At their meeting, she soon suspected this was more than a casual chat.

"After about 15 minutes," Young says, "I asked Dr. Williams, 'Is this an interview?' And he said, 'Yes, actually it is.""

When Williams explained to Young that Orange County was looking for a principal for an online high school that it was developing, Young warned him that "what I knew at that time about high school stemmed from my experience several years ago in high school," she says.

Virtual learning has taken off in recent years. Across the country, some 40,000-50,000 K-12 students are currently participating in online courses. To date, 12 states have established online high school programs and 5 others are developing them, while 25 states allow for the creation of "cyber" charter schools, and 32 states offer elearning initiatives.

Launched in January 2000, the Kentucky Virtual High School (KVHS) currently has an enrollment of 550 students. It offers approximately 50 online courses, many of which were originally developed by Florida Virtual School.

Linda Pittenger, KVHS director, says Julie Young has been "gracious and a tremendous help" as Pittenger worked to develop Kentucky's virtual school program.

The role of virtual education, Pittenger says, is to help "model new ways of reaching students."

"It's crucial that we move away from an education model based on seat time in a classroom and move to one based on tailored learning," she says. "That type of thinking is natural in an online learning environment."

"But he chuckled and told me they were interested in someone who didn't know a lot about traditional high schools," Young says. "They wanted someone who knew a lot about kids, had good people skills and was able to carry a vision forward."

They wanted Young.

She accepted the position with what would become Florida Virtual School (FLVS) on Dec. 2, 1996. An assistant principal at an Orlando elementary school at the time, it was an unexpected career move — Young admits the position "kind of dropped out of the sky."

One of Young's colleagues likes to joke that Young "fell into a vat of chocolate" when she got the job. "That's true," Young says. Working with FLVS "has been the most wonderful, rewarding experience of my career."

All Students Can Learn

Launched in 1997 and based in Orlando, Florida Virtual School now offers 85 online classes — from English and biology to algebra, Spanish, art history, and even physical education — for students in grades 7 through 12.

It currently serves about 16,000 students who take, on average, 2.5 classes each with FLVS — for a total of some 30,000 active course enrollments.

In the past five years, FLVS has enjoyed "tremendous growth," Young says. Despite employing some 200 teachers and increasing its enrollments by 5,000 to 10,000 per year, it still has students on waiting lists.

"Julie Young has built one of the most highly acclaimed online high school networks in the world," says John G. Flores, executive director of the United States Distance Learning Association. "Her leadership, character, and caring personality have allowed her to nurture a program that others judge themselves against."

The vast majority of FLVS students are Florida residents who can take the courses for free, though it does serve about 300 tuition-based students from other states as well. FLVS also markets its courses to other states, including Kentucky, for their own virtual school programs.

Twenty percent of FLVS students are home-schooled. Other students sign up to take advantage of a class their local school doesn't offer. Still others may have a scheduling conflict or want to retake a class they didn't pass originally. Only one percent of the school's students use FLVS as their only source of education.

Young has worked hard to build partnerships with Florida's traditional school systems. The mission of Florida Virtual School, she says, is not to compete with other schools, but rather to "fill the gaps and broaden the base of opportunity for students.

"With Florida Virtual School, if I'm from a small rural district, all of a sudden I have an advanced placement program, whereas I may never have had one before" she says before," she says.

FLVS helps level the educational playing field, Young says. Now all Florida students — whether they live in rural or urban school districts — have "equal access to the same high quality courses."

Once enrolled, students and their parents correspond with instructors through weekly e-mails, phone calls, and instant messaging sessions, but there is no set online "meeting" schedule and no required face-to-face interaction.

Another difference from traditional schools: most courses do not use textbooks. Instead, the instructional materials are almost exclusively online, so that they can be updated at a moment's notice.

Robby Queen, now a college freshman at West Virginia University, enrolled in a Web design class through FLVS in 2000-2001 while attending high school in Logan, W. Va.

Individualized attention makes virtual learning an attractive alternative for many students, but at first, Queen was skeptical of how the online learning process would work.

"I wondered how an instructor in Florida, 17 hours away, was going to teach me," Queen admits. But once he got into a routine of almost daily e-mails with the instructor, he "saw that the distance wasn't going to be an issue. It was like the instructor was right in my home, teaching me one-on-one."

Young believes the school's high pass rate of 90-95 percent proves the philosophy of education she's always lived by. "Given the appropriate instruction and the appropriate timetable, all students can learn," she says.

Any Time, Any Place, Any Path, Any Pace

"The Florida Virtual School motto is any time, any place, any path, any pace," Young explains. "For the first time in my career, I really feel that we have the latitude with this technology to put together a truly student-centered program. That is not a criticism of our traditional schools. They have start times, end times, and bells and boundaries that we don't have. Now all of a sudden students can be in the privacy of their home with a Coke and a cookie and headphones if they want, at the time of the day that works best for them. And parents can be in their classrooms 24-7."

What makes an ideal online student? It's an issue of self-motivation rather than a question of GPA, Young says

For some students who've struggled in a traditional classroom environment, the virtual courses offer a different type of learning venue in which they feel comfortable asking questions or seeking additional help.

"With the online format, I get to teach in a classroom of one," says Jo Wagner of Ft. Myers, who has taught an online physical education course with FLVS for the past three years. "If one student needs 45 minutes of my time on the phone to explain a concept, that's fine. I can provide that attention without inconveniencing or holding any other student back. I wouldn't be able to do that in a traditional classroom setting."

Making a Difference

As a hall of fame inductee and board member for the United States Distance Learning Association and a board member on the North American Council for Online Learning, Young's expertise in educational technology and distance learning is in high demand.

She's quoted routinely in national articles on online education, and she travels frequently, helping advise

But the heart of her work is still the same as it has always been: making a difference in the lives of her students.

Earlier in her career as a teacher in Ft. Myers, Young came across a third-grade student who was "such a struggle." She worked with him, intent on helping turn things around. At the end of the year, when he won an award for character, he rewarded her with a hug, saying, "I am me because of you."

It was a watershed moment for Young, reminding her just what it is about teaching that she loves so much.

Announcing UKAN...

By Liz Demoran

Then alumnus William Schuetze of Jefferson County went to visit his state senator about the University of Kentucky, the senator remarked it was the first time any constituent had talked to him on behalf of UK.

Now other alumni from throughout the state can join Schuetze in making an impact on behalf of their alma mater, thanks to the University of Kentucky

Advocacy Network (UKAN).

UKAN is a network of university advocates that work together throughout the state to send a positive message about UK to legislators. UKAN's mission is to promote the university through constituent-based advocacy, trying to impact the way elected officials vote on legislative issues important to the university.

UKAN held its inaugural kickoff October 1 on campus. About 50 advocates who have established relationships with legislators were invited to attend. After a meeting in which UK President Lee T. Todd, Jr. provided a State of the University address and the UKAN members received Advocacy training, the group was invited to Maxwell Place for a reception. Coming from all corners of Kentucky, these advocates share the same passion – a love for UK and a burning desire to help the state's flagship university.

"I can tell you that the alumni of the University of Kentucky have waited a long time for this," said Schuetze, who also serves as a member of the UK

Alumni Board of Directors.

Dr. Todd said UKAN is an ideal opportunity for UK to initiate conversations that are meaningful to the university and to the Commonwealth in many communities across the state.

"We need to tell the elected representatives of Kentucky in the House and Senate about how this university positively affects them, their constituents, and this state. They need to hear from alumni, the voters and the taxpayers of this state. They need to hear that the people of this state want to see UK become one of the nation's top-20 public research universities, just as the General Assembly mandated in House Bill 1 in 1997. But they need to know that UK needs significant state support if we are going to achieve that mission," Todd said.

Developed by the UK Office of Government Relations, UKAN works very closely with the UK Alumni Association and other friends of the university. It serves as a pipeline of information to the UK family on legislative issues important to UK and higher education. Volunteer advocates within UKAN carry that information to members of the Kentucky General Assembly.

Schuetze said he learned as a student at the University of Wisconsin about the power of advocacy. That experience showed him university advocacy can positively shape public policy in a state. Wisconsin's Badger Advocate Network has a 14-year history of successful advocacy for UW.

Steve Byars, director of government relations at UK, says his office seeks to educate alumni, employees, students and friends of UK through ongoing communication with them about the successes, the needs and the issues important to UK as well as the process of advocating for the university. UKAN members will be contacted about the current issues affecting the university.

"You will be our eyes and ears in your community," said Byars." "The best advocates for our university are our alumni and supporters. You have a pulse on what is happening outside the university, giving us and our legislative delegation needed guidance and understanding. Your awareness and insight will help UK and Kentucky prosper.'

Occasionally there may be a call to action centered around issues in the General Assembly that will require immediate attention. The most important part of this program is advocate participation. Calls to action are issued by UKAN through e-mail, telephone and mail. They describe the current issue and the University of Kentucky's position, give clear instructions for contacting a legislator and include a request for feedback to the Government Relations staff.

Through the UKAN Web site at uky.edu/government, information about the legislators and how to contact them is available. UKAN will be most active during a legislative session convey-

Quick Fact

UKAN Make a Difference for UK! ing information about the university's legislative agenda as well as current issues. In addition, information will be made available regarding key pieces of legislation and how each legislator voted on those bills.

UKAN will provide members of the UK family with information about legislative races in their district. While UKAN will never endorse candidates, questionnaires on issues important to the university will be distributed to all the candidates in each district and their responses will be made available to alumni and employees that live in that particular district.

Todd also sees the program as an opportunity for alumni and friends of the university to start a conversation about something they are so passionate about.

"When I visit various communities throughout Kentucky, the message I walk away with from our alumni is resounding," said Todd. "They want to know what they can do to assist UK. Now I have an answer– become a UKAN member.

"There is no doubt that we have the most passionate and dedicated alumni base in the country. Now, we finally have a way to channel that passion to make this university one of the 20 best public research institutions in the nation."

UKAN is currently open to those wanting to join. Please contact the UK Office of Government Relations at 859-323-6580 for more information or sign up on the website – uky.edu/government.

Two do fitting to the swing and punch of this time

A Family Legacy Tradition, Loyalty Richard Johnson and Ancestors

By Linda Perry

In the Breckinridge Room at University Archives, Phillip Johnson and his son, Richard Johnson, display music written by their ancestor, Carl A. Lampert, that is one of the most famous tunes to UK alumni.

Richard Johnson is proud of his family heritage, just like most anyone would be. Fact is, Richard has something extra special to be proud of: family members on both his paternal and maternal side had an impact on the University of Kentucky, academically and on the basketball court and football field.

Have Strong Ties to UK

His father, Phillip Johnson, was a reserve forward on UK's Fiddlin' Five basketball team that won the 1958 NCAA tournament. His grandfather, Bert Johnson, was UK's second All-Southeastern Conference player, named in 1934. Richard's great grandfather, Carl A. Lampert, founded the UK music department in 1918, along with the UK Marching Band. He also wrote the music to UK's traditional fight song, "On, On U of K" and "Alma Mater.'

Richard's mother, the late Mary Joyce Proffitt Johnson, was also a UK grad. Two of Richard's uncles, through his mother's ancestry, were connected to the UK sports and academic family, too. Jim

My UK Family FEATURE

Proffitt played football for Coach "Bear" Bryant, and John Proffitt was assistant dean of students in the 1950s, according to Richard.

With the likes of that heritage, one might be tempted to think Richard lived in the shadows of his family. But Richard, who grew up in Louisville and now lives in Lexington, also made his mark on the history of the University of Kentucky. Having already earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from UK in 1987, he became the first person to graduate with a combined JD/MBA degree in 1991.

Starting at the Beginning

Although not a University of Kentucky graduate, Richard Johnson's great grandfather, Carl A. Lampert, certainly left a legacy that echoes throughout UK today. A German immigrant who came to the United States with his parents as a six year old, Lampert studied at Elmhurst College in Elmhurst, Ill., at the Chicago Musical College, and at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago. In 1910 and 1911 he studied in Prague and Berlin and also played in an orchestra conducted by Johannes Brahms. He was with the Chicago Symphony for two years and also taught at the University of North Dakota. A friend of UK President Frank McVey, Lampert arrived on the UK campus to be a professor of music in 1918 and continued to inspire students through 1944, when he retired. Lampert was affectionately referred to as "Prof" during his many years on campus.

Lampert was the architect behind many musical "firsts" at UK. He became the first head of the Department of Music, and organized the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, the University Philharmonic Orchestra, and the Central Kentucky Choral Society. He also instituted a music contest for high school students in Kentucky and at one point, took $500 from his family savings account to outfit the UK band with new uniforms because he "just got tired" of seeing the students in the military uniforms of World War I. (The university later reimbursed Lampert.)

Even with all these fine accomplishments, Lampert is most noted for his contribution to the musical traditions that have lasted for more than 75 years at UK. These musical compositions — "On, On, U of K" and "Alma Mater"— are repeatedly performed during events on campus and continue to resonate with thousands of UK alumni years after they graduate. Marcia Lampert, his daughter, frequently recollected that her father composed the music for "On, On, U of K" during spring 1922. He later offered his students a $5 prize to come up with suitable words. The story goes that no student came for-

On, On, U of K

On, on, U of K, we are right for the fight today, Hold that ball and hit that line; Ev'ry Wildcat star will shine; We'll fight, fight, fight, for the blue and white As we roll to that goal, Varsity, And we'll kick, pass and run, 'till the battle is won, And we'll bring home the victory.

Richard Johnson has proposed this basketball revision to On, On, U of K:

We are famed for the Wildcat Way;
Drive that ball on down the floor;
Another win for Wildcat lore.
We'll fight, fight, fight for the Blue and White
We continue to make history;
We'll run, pass and score to the Final Four
And bring home the victory!

UK Alma Mater

Hail Kentucky, Alma Mater! Loyal sons and daughters sing; sound her praise with voice united; to the breeze her colors fling. To the blue and white be true; badge triumphant age on age. Blue the sky that o'er us bends; white Kentucky's stainless page.

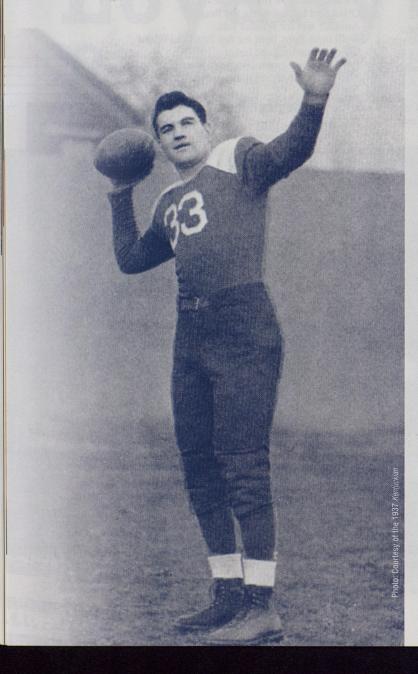

Carl A. Lampert, founder of UK's music department, wrote the music for "On, On, U of K," and "Alma Mater" ward to try. Lampert asked a student by the name of Troy Perkins to attempt lyrics, and he complied. Later, in 1923, "On, On, U of K" was publicly performed for the first time at a convocation for students.

Lampert had penned another composition that waited several years for just the right lyrics. The "Hail, Kentucky" score was originally written by Lampert in 1917, but was titled "Alma Mater" after Josephine Funkhouser, wife of W. D. Funkhouser, suggested words for the composition. The piece was first performed by the University Men's Glee Club in 1927 and has been part of the pomp and circumstance at many campus ceremonies since then.

Halfback Heaven

In the summer of 1936, Wilhelmina, one of Professor Lampert's daughters, married a junior attending the University of Kentucky. But not just any junior — she picked UK's All-Southeastern Conference halfback, Bert Johnson. Bert, a native of Ashland, had been UK's star halfback for three years. In fact, in 1936 when he hit Bob Davis on an 84-yard touchdown pass during a UK-Xavier game, it became the longest TD pass in UK's early history. Bert also was famous for scoring two touchdowns against an Alabama team that went on to win the Rose Bowl. UK scored more points against Alabama than any opponent that year.

Bert was dubbed "Man O' War" by some Wildcat fans because he was known for consistent gains, speed, accurate passes, blocks, nice punts, and vicious defensive work. Weighing a solid 200 pounds, there was little doubt that he was one of the greatest football players to call Stoll Field home, and, by all accounts, onlookers loved to see him break away for at least one long jaunt down the field during each game.

UK Athletic Director and Head Football Coach Chet Wynne lost Bert to the pros after the 1936-37 season. He signed with the Brooklyn Football Dodgers after being approached by several professional teams. In 1937 Potsy Clark, the Dodgers coach, was reported to say that Bert looked like the greatest find for professional football since "Bronko" Nagurski. (Nagurski, a Chicago Bears team member, was later inducted into the National Football Players Hall of Fame in 1963.)

Bert also played for the Chicago Bears, the Chicago Cardinals, and the Philadelphia Eagles, putting in seven years of playing time before retiring from the NFL. He later went to work for Brown & Williamson Tobacco Company, settling down in Lexington.

Bert Johnson, UK's all-Southeastern Conference player, was dubbed "Man O' War" by some Wildcat fans.

Marching Forward

Bert Johnson and Wilhelmina Lampert Johnson were the proud parents of Phillip Johnson, a lad who grew up in Lexington at 348 Aylesford Place. He went to UK's University High and eventually stood at 6'-6"— no doubt a factor in his fine performance in basketball, his chosen sport. To that end, while at University High, he was an honorable mention All-State choice for three years. In his senior year, he scored 527 points for a 25.1 average.

Referred to as "Big Red," Phil Johnson says he had offers from Ohio State, Clemson, Transylvania, and Texas A&M, but he always knew he wanted to play basketball for UK. "I guess I always knew deep-down that I'd come to Kentucky because that's every kid's dream — to play for the Wildrats" he said for the Wildcats," he said.

Phil was a UK letterman in 1956, 1958, and 1959. "One of the perks of being a basketball player was I got to register for classes first," he said.

He was a reserve forward and wore No. 14 on what was to be Coach Adolph Rupp's 1958 NCAA Championship team. Team players that year included names Cat fans also will recall: Vernon Hatton, John Crigler, Ed Beck, Adrian Smith and Johnny Cox, to name a few. The team came to be known as The Fiddlin' Five because of a remark Rupp made early in the season. He said his boys were fair fiddlers but weren't violinists who might appear in Carnegie Hall. The team rose to the challenge, won the SEC title and went on to claim the NCAA championship.

Phil married Mary Joyce Proffitt, a 1959 UK College of Education graduate, who went on to teach at Wilder Elementary School in Louisville. After college, Phil taught history and was head basketball coach at Fern Creek High School in Louisville. He later entered the grocery business and worked for Winn-Dixie in Louisville for 31 years, most of those as human resources director. Phil now lives in Sarasota, Fla., and also holds a real estate license.

Contemporary Times

This brings us back to Richard Johnson, son of Phillip and Mary Joyce. Richard admits that although he played football for Ballard High School in Louisville, as a National Merit Scholar he put sports aside when he entered college. Richard says he knew he wanted to go to school in Kentucky and UK had the best options for him. However, at that time in the mid-1980s, UK didn't offer a scholarship for National Merit Scholars. That bothered his parents, Richard said, and his mother worked extensively with UK to get the seeds planted for a program to benefit merit scholars.

Richard came to UK and in 1987 he earned a bachelor's degree in business administration. As president of Phi Kappa Tau fraternity in 1986, Richard was named the fraternity's outstanding undergraduate in the nation. Luckily for Richard, his interest in business and law continued to develop around the same time that UK was considering offering a combination JD/MBA degree. Richard said he worked with the late Paul Van Booven, UK's general legal counsel, to customize a plan for students like himself. "Paul worked with me on resolving little snags in the Law and MBA program. He used to joke that he had to work with both the computers and the manual registration process so much that he ended up knowing my social security number by heart," Richard said.

The end result of this collaboration was that Richard was the first person to graduate with a dual JD/MBA degree from the University of Kentucky. Today, he is managing partner of Perkins – Johnson – Repasky PLLC in Lexington where he focuses on corporate law, contracts, commercial litigation and mediation.

Though the everyday world of an attorney is not as glamorous as that of a sports figure, Richard says his career occasionally provides its own share of diversions to keep it interesting.

"Very early in my career, before portable computers were available, I was in a small Kentucky town trying to obtain public records from the local fire department. The fire department would not provide the records without a court order. I tried to get the county attorney to help, but he would not. It turned out that the only way I could get the records was with a court order signed by the local judge. The only way a judge would give me an order was if there was a pending lawsuit. My client desperately needed the records that day.

"To get the suit filed, I had to go to the local Dollar General store, buy a legal pad and handwrite the complaint, outlining why I needed the documents. I then had to go to the one ATM in town, withdraw cash for the filing fee, and then file the lawsuit at the courthouse. I obtained the order I needed and was able to get the documents that my client needed. I dismissed the lawsuit the very next day." Richard said.

"That experience taught me that the real world is very imperfect, and that there are many ways to do things to get the result that you need. With persistence, creativity and resourcefulness, you can accomplish almost anything. You just have to take the initiative."

Future Generations

Richard Johnson's UK family history might be a tad unique, but the University of Kentucky has seen many other families who consider it a point of pride that generations of their relatives have also called the campus "home" for four years. And Richard hopes that the tradition of attending UK doesn't stop with him, but he will leave that decision to his children. Richard and his wife, Jill Keller Johnson, who is a 1992 UK grad, have two children, Gracie and Max.

"I will probably do as my parents did — expose them to UK, but not push them in any direction. I was able to make my own decision to come to UK, without influence from my parents. And it's a decision I have never regretted. I will tell my children that UK has produced leaders and successful alumni in all walks of life, who are scattered around the globe," Richard said. "UK is a place that can equip them to do anything they want to do with their lives, if they will take the initiative and take advantage of all that UK has to offer."

2003-04 Alumni Association Strategic Plan Report

Dear Member.

It has been an honor to serve as your president of the UK Alumni Association during Fiscal Year 2003-04 and bring to your attention the work the association has performed on your behalf and on behalf of the University of Kentucky.

Each board meeting your elected representatives and the past presidents of the association looked forward to all of the good news the association staff had to report about their efforts.

What follows is just a short summary of the progress made toward the goals established in the 2004-2006 Dream, Challenge, Succeed strategic plan for the association. On every measure the staff is making progress, and in some cases has already met the goals set out. If you would like a copy of the complete report, send your request to Strategic Plan Report, UK Alumni Association, King Alumni House, Lexington, KY 40506 or view the report online at www.ukalumni.net.

I hope that you will share my sense of satisfaction over the progress made and the direction the alumni association is moving. The UK Alumni Board of Directors and the staff welcome your comments and thank you most sincerely for your membership in the association that makes all of these good works and connections possible.

Yours for Kentucky,

Frankl H. Farrie J.

Frank Farris '72 2003-04 President

From the Director

The strategic mission of the UK Alumni Association is to foster intellectual and emotional fellowship through quality services, programs, and benefits, and to provide an on-going connection between the alumni and the university community while developing goodwill, support and loyalty to the University of Kentucky. At the association, we crystallize that mission into one word: friend-raising. My staff and I thank you for your continuing friendship as a member of the UK Alumni Association. Your membership enables us to meet our goals in supporting you and the university in many ways, some of which are presented in this annual report. Please feel free to call me with your ideas of how we can make your membership in the alumni association more worthwhile.

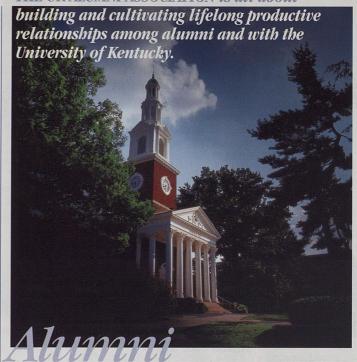

Sincerely,

Director

Stan Key '72

THE UK ALUMNI ASSOCIATION is all about

- ◆ Coordinated and/or sponsored 375 alumni programs/events with participation of more than 21,000 alumni and friends to build loyalty and support to the university.
- ♦ 840 alumni career counseling sessions sponsored by the association through the Jane Morris Endowment Fund and offered through the UK Career Center.
- ♦ Delivered nearly 1.5 million contacts to individual alumni on behalf of the association, the university, the colleges and other units carrying the Strategic Plan message of Dream, Challenge, Succeed with emphasis on the success component of the equation by publicizing the success of alumni, faculty and students.
- ♦ Growing participation on the Internet as the association Web site reached over 750,000 hits, ranking between 38th and 42nd out of approximately 2,500 Web pages tracked by the university. Dues collected online surpassed $60,000.
- ◆ Increased advertising revenue in the Kentucky Alumni magazine to $55,673.
- ◆ Legacy Tuition Program assisted 250 students who are children of UK graduates living outside of Kentucky and whose parent(s) are dues-paying members of the association to attend UK.
- Presented six Alumni Service Awards to:

Jack C. Blanton, Lexington, Ky., has worn many hats at UK and advanced the mission of the alumni association as a former UK vice president for finance and administration, an admired teacher in the classroom and a very involved life member.

Kevin Collins, Mason, Ohio, is recognized for his many contributions and leadership in his community and in the UK Alumni Association, serving as club president and member of the UK Alumni Board of Directors.

Honored for their service to the UK Alumni Association with the 2003-04 Alumni Distinguished Service Award were, from left, Stan Key, Charles M. Moore Jr., Jack C. Blanton, Elizabeth Hatcher Springate, Kevin Collins and Richard L. "Dick" Hurst.

Richard L. Hurst, Lexington, Ky., has served on the alumni board for many years and demonstrated his support of many programs beneficial to the university. For 35 years he has also distributed bumper stickers promoting UK football and basketball.

Stan Key, Lexington, Ky., joined the staff of the UK Alumni Assocation as associate director ten years before being named director in 1999. Today membership in the association is up and there is a wide range of programs involving UK alumni and providing support for the university.

Charles M. Moore Jr., Bowling Green, Ky., has been involved with the UK Alumni Association on many levels locally and nationally. During his term as president, he traveled from coast to coast to meet with UK alumni.

Elizabeth Hatcher Springate, Harrodsburg, Ky., has been a local alumni club leader for over 20 years, serving in every officer's capacity, and elected many times by her district to the UK Alumni Board of Directors.

◆ Presented three Joseph T. Burch Young Alumni Awards to:

Barbara Michelle Filer, class of 1998, Hampton Roads, Virginia UK Alumni Club. She has helped her club achieve many of its goals. She has helped give new freshmen a positive introduction to UK. Filer inspired 67 students to acquire admissions packages to UK with seven students being accepted.

Kelley Sullivan Holland, class of 1993, Fayette County UK Alumni Club. Her personal desire, energy and dedication are true attributes of this local alumni club president. She has also served as president of the club's Young Alumni group. For 10 years she has been involved in the club's scholarship program and other student related groups. She continues to support and encourage the students at UK.

Hannah Miner Myers, class of 1993, Hopkins County UK Alumni Club. She has served as president of her local club, focusing her goals for the year on students. She planned several new programs at the college and high school level. Her biggest goal was the establishment of a $10,000 endowed scholarship. This year the fifth student from her county will be attending UK with the assistance from the club.

♦ Alumni Travelers numbering 130 ventured to 14 destinations abroad in 2003-04 including Holland in Bloom, Village Life in the Cotswold, Spain-Castile, Passage of Russia's Peter the Great, How the West Was Won, Alaska: Cruising The Inside Passage, Trans Canada Rail Odyssey, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Cabot Trail, D-Day and Battle of the Bulge, Greece: Poros Island, New England Foliage in Autumn, Wonders of China and the Yangtze River and Italy: Orvieto. In addition the association hosted a dinner of previous and potential travelers with 88 participants in attendance.

Membership

- ◆ During the fiscal year of 2003-2004, duespaying membership in the UK Alumni Association increased to 34,028 members.
- ♦ The number of members renewing or joining online increased from 860 during 2002-2003 to 1,225 this past fiscal year.
- ♦ The number of participating locations offering discounts to association members under the Member Discount Program more than doubled to a total of 65.
- ♦ A staggered dues option was implemented to provide discounted memberships to students and recent graduates. As a result, the number of paid student members increased from one to over 620 within the fiscal year.
- ◆ Member keytags were introduced to remind members of their tradition, loyalty and spirit to the association and to make discount redemption easier.
- ♦ The renewal notice was redesigned to make the renewal process easier and more convenient for members. In January 2004, the first month of the implementation of the new design, the association's retention rate increased by 8% over the average of the past three years for that same month.

University

- ◆ $60,000 funding to the 16 academic colleges for their alumni affairs programs

Student loan rates at historic lows

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY
Alumni Association

Consolidate today and lock in an incredibly low rate!

The University of Kentucky Alumni Association has teamed with Nelnet to offer student loan consolidation. Qualifying borrowers can lock in a fixed interest rate as low as 2.875% for the life of their loan and take advantage of great repayment incentives that can reduce the rate even further.*

Borrowers have the option to choose one of the following:

- 3.33% principal loan reduction to be applied after 30 initial, regular, on-time payments when an application is electronically signed. Borrowers must also maintain a valid e-mail address to be eligible for this option, OR
- 1.0% interest rate reduction after 36 initial, regular, on-time payments
 In addition, borrowers can receive a .25% interest rate reduction for making auto-debit payments.

Today, eligible borrowers that choose a Nelnet Consolidation Loan will not only reduce their monthly payment, but also experience the following benefits:

- Flexible repayment terms
- No fees

- No credit checks
- No prepayment penalties

To determine your loan eligibility and discuss the best loan options for you, contact a Nelnet Loan Advisor today.

Toll-free 1.866.4CONSOL (426.6765) www.alumniconsolidation.nelnet.net

"The Consolidation loan inferest rate is calculated by taking the weighted average of the rates on the federal loans you are consolidating, rounded up to the nearest one-eighth percent. Nelnet reserves the right to modify or terminate its borrower incentives at its discretion without prior notice.

Interest rates described above are in effect through June 30, 2005, unless otherwise indicated. Other conditions including the length of repayment are as important as the interest rate when considering whether consolidation is right for you. Your borrower's rights may change when you consolidate your student loans; please refer to your Borrower Rights and Responsibilities statement or contact a Nelnet Loan Advisor for more information. To qualify, borrowers must be in repayment or in the grace period with a combined total of at least $7.500 in qualified student loan debt, and less than

New Features on the Web

Have you visited the UK Alumni Association Web site lately? We have been very busy making changes which include a complete redesign of the entire site, a new ePostcard section, screensavers and desktop wallpapers, new features that are accessible to registered members of our Online Community, and many more. I will introduce you to a few of the new features that we've added.

Our brand new online store, called Kentuckygear.com, has lots of new and cool merchandise. You can find apparel for football and basketball games, novelties like bumper stickers and key chains, and of course, we have alumni gear so you can let everyone know you are University of Kentucky alum. Visit www.kentuckygear.com to see the wide variety of merchandise that we have available.

One of the most recent additions to our Web site has been the student blogs. Don't know what a blog is? A blog is short for a Web log, or an online journal. We've recruited a freshman and a senior to log in and share their college experience with the rest of us through their own online journals. Each week you can find a new entry from each of them at'www.ukalumni.net/pubs/journals/ journals_main.htm.

We've also updated our information for the Lyman T. Johnson Alumni Association. You can find that new page at www.ukalumni.net/clubsandgroups/ltj.htm. On that page you can find information about upcoming events, the Commission on Diversity, Office of Multicultural Affairs, and the Martin Luther King Jr. Cultural Center.

Another great new feature of our Web site is new accessibility to our Online Community. If you are a registered member of the Online Community, you can now use the log-in on our home page. It will take you to a "Members Only" page that lists exclusive features for you like special ePostCards and desktop wallpapers, or existing features such as lifetime e-mail forwarding, class notes, and the alumni directory. If you aren't a registered member of our Online Community, signing up is easy and free. Visit https:// www.alumniconnections.com/olc/pub/UKY/register/ register.cgi to register today.

We are continually updating content and adding new dimensions to the Alumni Association Web site so keep checking back at www.ukalumni.net to see what we have done lately. If you have any suggestions, please let us hear from you at ukalum@ukv.edu - Brian Helm, Webmaster

Scholarship Dinner Honors Recipients

The UK Alumni Association hosted a banquet to honor the recipients of 25 Alumni Association scholarships and 45 Alumni Club scholarships, totaling approximately $80,000. The event had a large turnout — 90 people enjoyed the evening, including special guests 2004 Great Teacher Award winners Brian MacPherson and John Yannelli. Ann Haney, Alumni Association president, presided.

The deadline for 2005-2006 club scholarship applications is January 17. Download an application at www.ukalumni.net or call 859-257-3801 or 1-800-269-ALUM for more information.

ALUMNI JOB SEEKERS

As a member benefit, the University of Kentucky Alumni Association provides free career advising to Alumni Association members through the Stuckert Career Center. You are eligible to utilize CyberCAT for your job search. Go to www.uky.edu/CareerCenter.

EMPLOYERS

To schedule on campus interviews with UK students and alumni, call the UK Career Center Recruiting Coordinator at 859-257-2746.

To advertise your job announcement, e-mail the announcement to the job opportunities specialist at gena.beatty@uky.edu or fax it to 859-323-1085. Students and alumni will contact you directly to apply. Announcements of full-time, careerrelated opportunities will be posted on CyberCAT and in the career library for 30 days.

If you have recently been let go (laid off or fired) from a job, focus on your accomplishments in that position and what you have learned. If yours was one of several eliminated positions, mention that your termination was the result of a company business decision. Be careful and do not fall into the trap of bad mouthing your former boss or employer. Take control of the situation and clearly state why you are a good fit for the new position, listing examples of relevant skill sets. Be sure your exit story is congruent with your past employer's account. If you are not sure what type of reference your past supervisor will give, try to use another former supervisor or coworker from that company. You also may wish to have a friend do a reference check on your behalf.

If you have had frequent job changes, highlight some common features in your past jobs and the one for which you are applying such as industry, products, or departments. Stress why you are especially committed to a more lasting position now. This is also an excellent opportunity to focus on your ability to adapt to ever-changing business climates.

If you do not have the specific experience for the target position, focus on transferable skill sets, again pointing out any similarities between past jobs and the job in focus.

If you suspect that the target employer is seeking a younger candidate, focus on your energy level, ability to relate well to people of all ages, open-mindedness, and desire to have a rewarding, productive career. (Be sure to have an updated haircut and wear current fashion business attire.) More mature workers can also stress loyalty, stability, and past record of achievement. Conversely, if you suspect that the employer is seeking an older candidate, mention long-term goals, community volunteer work, and anything that shows you have put foresight and planning into your career path.

Take Advantage of Mock Interviews. Being able to describe your relevant skills and experiences in an interview is vital. The best way to "ace" an interview is practice. Your alumni career counselor will help you learn the art of interviewing by role-playing in a videotaped practice interview. This will help you eliminate common mistakes made in real interviews. The Career Center's Katherine Kemper Library houses many books and videos on interviewing, with examples of questions frequently asked by employers.

> Caroline Francis, NCCC, Ed.S., is available for in-person, telephone, or e-mail consultation. She may be reached at 859-257-9323 (voicemail) or cfrancis@uky.edu. Alumni Career Services are made possible by a generous gift from the UK Alumni Association's Jane I. Morris Endowment.

Wendell E. Berry '56 '57 AS and James Baker Hall '57 AS have coauthored "Tobacco Harvest: An Elegy," a book that combines the photos of a 1973 tobacco crop harvest shot by Hall with Berry's insightful essays about the economic, political, and societal changes that have forever altered Kentucky's rich agricultural traditions.

During the harvest, Hall photographed the tobacco rows stretching toward the horizon while laborers cut the crop, one plant at a time, until the last row was cut, hauled and housed in the barn. These photographs powerfully convey the physical experiences of a Kentucky tobacco harvest: the heat of the sun, the dirt, and the people hard at work.

Berry's accompanying essays add a deeply personal perspective to Hall's eloquent visual testimony. Owning a farm nearby, Berry was a longtime friend and neighbor of the families shown in Hall's pictures and he took part in their work swapping. In addition to Berry's detailing the repetitive, strenuous labor involved in harvesting a tobacco crop, he relates stories told, laughs shared, meals savored, and brief moments of rest and refreshment well earned.

In the early 1970s, the country saw an irreversible downturn in tobacco's reputation and its economic viability as a staple crop. Berry's words and Hall's photos not only capture the final days of that 1973 harvest, but also, in many ways, they capture the end of an era.

Berry is a poet, novelist, farmer, conservationist, and a former professor of English at the University of Kentucky. His books include "The Unsettling of America: Culture and Agriculture," and "Life Is a Miracle: An Essay Against Modern Superstition."

Hall is a former Kentucky Poet Laureate and taught creative writing at the University of Kentucky between 1973 and 2004. He is the author of five volumes of poetry, two novels, and four collections of photography. His works include "Praeder's Letters" and "A Spring-Fed Pond."

Media Rights Contract Contains Unprecedented Support for Academic Mission

Embedded in the new media rights contract for athletics recently awarded by the university is a bonus for UK academics. In its ongoing commitment to support the university's academic mission, UK Athletics will continue to provide the university with no cost, premium radio and television advertising, valued at $25 million over the life of the contract.

The Athletics Department will also contribute $1.36 million annually from this contract to help fund the university's Singletary Scholarship program, providing five additional scholarships to bring the total to 20. This is in addition to the 10-year, $10 million athletics' commitment to fund general scholarships on campus.

UK awarded the university's expanded athletic multimedia marketing rights to Host Communications Inc. and Gray Television Inc., commencing April 16, 2005. Host, UK's radio and television rights' holder for most of the past three decades, will team up with Lexington's top-rated television station, WKYT-TV, to pay the university $80.5 million over the 10 years of the agreement, making it one of the most lucrative deals of its kind in NCAA history.

Among the new initiatives offered by Wildcat Properties will be a "super" radio network that would air six to 10 of the men's basketball broadcasts in markets throughout the country; 10 magazine-style television programs annually highlighting UK's Olympic sports; the "Daily Wildcat," a three-minute daily radio update on UK sports that will be distributed to all Big Blue Network affiliates; and live televising of select women's basketball and baseball games and the Catspys, UK Athletics' annual awards show that honors its student-athletes and coaches.

Lexington-based Host Communications is a subsidiary of the Bull Run Corporation, while WKYT-TV is owned by Gray Television. The current agreement between UK and Host, which includes radio and TV rights to Kentucky's football and men's basketball games and the football game program, is worth $17.65 million over five years and expires April 15, 2005.

Hayes, Azubuike, Potts Named Preseason All-SEC

Kentucky forward Chuck Hayes and combo player Kelenna Azubuike were named to the 2005 Preseason All-Southeastern Conference men's team. Hayes, a 6-6 senior from Modesto, Calif., was named to the first team, while Azubuike, a junior from Tulsa, Okla., earned second-team honors. Hayes and Azubuike are the only returning starters on a young Kentucky squad in 2004-05. The Wildcats welcome six newcomers to the roster, including Western Kentucky transfer Patrick Sparks, who joined the squad last year but was forced to sit out the 2003-04 season under NCAA transfer rules. Five freshmen join the Wildcats this season, including three McDonald's All-Americans.

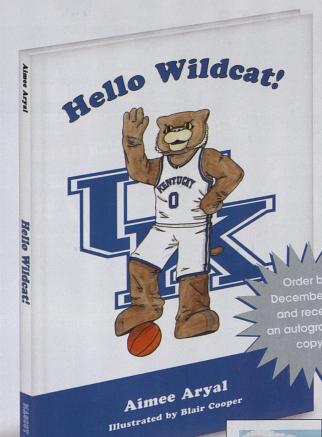

UK women's basketball senior Sara Potts was named to the 2005 preseason All-Southeastern Conference team, the first ever annual women's basketball preseason All-SEC team selected by the SEC office. Potts, a native of Rochester Hills, Mich., was selected to the second team. She is one of only two starters returning for the Wildcats this season. The southpaw ranked among the SEC's best last season and was the Cats' leading scorer. She led the SEC in three-point shooting and currently ranks 21st on the all-time leading scorers list. She also was a second-team All-SEC selection by The Associated Press and the league coaches in 2004.
