They Have Earned Their "L" For Loyalty

Alabama alumni contributed $48,004.65 to its alumni fund in 1952. Centre alumni gifts totaled 22,849.75; Georgia Tech men gave $53,017.77; University of Louisville Alumni Fund gifts totaled $20,253.26; Miami (Fla.) alumni came through with $30,204.00; V.M.I. men contributed $28,327.70; Washington and Lee alumni $44,261.69—to mention a few—

AND WHAT DID KENTUCKY ALUMNI GIVE
$3,479.50

THE COMPARISONS ARE PRETTY EMBARRASSING, AREN'T THEY? The men and women listed below are those who, in many instances, make unsolicited contributions. They are the alumni who need no prodding, no urging. Their pocketbooks match their loyalties, and it is to them that young Kentuckians owe the opportunities which the Loyalty Fund affords.

WHAT ABOUT YOU—HAVE YOU EARNED YOUR "L"?

National Leadership For A Top Kentuckian

The University of Kentucky is honored by the selection of DANIEL V. TERRELL as president of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The dean of the University's College of Engineering thus opens still another chapter of useful effort. He has served for 40 years on the U. of K. faculty.

Dean TERRELL has devoted himself increasingly to the task of recruiting bright young people for the engineering profession. Last year he issued a strong statement on the shortage of trained engineers. Those concerned with the problem include everyone, he pointed out, "since the security of our nation can be maintained in peace or in war only by the adequate supply of scientifically and technically trained manpower to carry on progressive research in basic sciences." The United States, he notes, is "inferior to its enemies in gross numbers." Our hope must lie in "fruitful research and mass production."

The Dean has done his share in producing the type of scientist the country needs. He is himself a good example of the man who combines skilled specialist training with a broad outlook.

Lt. Col. Dulaney L. O'Roark has been transferred from the Signal Corps Training Center at Camp Gordon, Ala., to attend the Army Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Now acting chief of staff at SCTS, Col. O'Roark left August 23 to begin the 16-week course to prepare him for senior staff work.

Before going to Camp Gordon as SCTS director of the operations division in July, 1952, Col. O'Roark was Commandant of the U. S. Army Signal School in Ansbach, Germany.

He received degrees in mechanical and electrical engineering from the University of Kentucky in 1931 and accepted a reserve commission in 1937.

He became military governor of Kennath and later Straubing, Germany, during the occupation. In 1947 he returned to the United States for the advanced officers' course at The Signal School at Fort Monmouth, N. J. Upon completion of this course he returned to Germany where he was assistant commandant and later commandant of the Signal school at Ansbach. In July of 1950, while at Ansbach, he was promoted to lieutenant colonel.

Ky. Graduate Gets Clark Co. Cage Job

Maurice Jackson, 41, physical education director at the Lexington Y.M. C.A., was named head basketball coach at Clark County High School last July.

Mr. Jackson, a 1935 graduate of the University of Kentucky, succeeds Letcher Norton who took Clark County teams to the State High School Basketball Tournament six of the seven years he coached there. Mr. Norton accepted a job at Charlestown, Ind. High School last spring.

Mr. Jackson is a graduate of Henry Clay High School, Lexington, and the University, where he won a letter in basketball in 1935. He has coached at Cropper, Shelby County, Bryan Station and Lexington Lafayette his Lafayette team winning the State tourney in 1942.

He entered the Army in 1942 and from 1946 to 1952 was with the Veterans Administration as a training officer in Louisville.

Daniel Voiers Terrell, B.C.E. '10, M.S. '11, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Engineering, outstanding educator, alumnus and civil engineer, has been elected president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the first Kentuckian to be so honored.

Dean Terrell was inducted into office at the October convention of the Society in New York last month.

Dean Terrell has served as a director and a vice president of ASCE, and has been on the University of Kentucky faculty for 40 years. Since 1946 he has been dean of the college and director of the Engineering Experiment Station. He has been active in highway engineering research for almost four decades, and since 1942 has been director of the Kentucky State Highway Research Laboratory. He has been a leader also in furthering industrial development in Kentucky through research for more effective use of the state's natural resources.

The Kentucky alumnus and dean has been president of the Kentucky Society of Professional Engineers and formerly was president of the Kentucky section of ASCE.

Last September Dean Terrell was honored at a dinner given by J. Stephen Watkins, B.S.C.E. '30, and G. Reynolds Watkins, B.S.C.E. '38, UK graduates and Lexington consulting engineers, in recognition of the honor which has come to him and to Kentucky through his election to the office.

A University of Kentucky research analyst, Thomas A. Kendall, '29, has invented an instrument which not only aids him in special UK research but also has been placed on the science equipment market by a manufacturing company. The invention is an electrical apparatus which mixes dry powder samples through both stirring and tumbling. Prof. Kendall is research analyst in the department of mining and metallurgical engineering.

Miss Helen King, our Alumni Secretary, proposed to me some days ago that she would give me a page in each issue of THE KENTUCKY ALUMNUS in order that I might communicate to you some message about your Alma Mater. I am delighted to have this opportunity to bring to you from time to time information about the University which I believe you will be interested in receiving.

You will have received before this issue of the ALUMNUS reaches you a copy of a brochure entitled WORKING TOGETHER TO SERVE KENTUCKY. The five state colleges and the University have cooperated in producing this bulletin which presents the needs of public higher education in the state at the present time. I trust you have read this publication carefully and that you have been impressed with the information it contains. Higher education in Kentucky is not keeping up with the procession of higher education in our neighboring states. Year after year we are dropping farther and farther behind the national average in support of higher education.

You are a leader in your community. Won't you familiarize yourself with the content of this brochure and seek an opportunity to talk on higher education, and particularly your University, before your luncheon club, or other clubs or societies, or group meetings of any kind that are being held in your community? If better support for your Alma Mater is ever to be obtained, it must come from the grass roots. Our own graduates should be interested in informing the people of their city or county on this subject. When the people are convinced that it is a good investment for them, they will take some action.

Kentucky is our campus. The University is glad to serve all the people who live on this campus. In your county there is a county farm agent and a home demonstration agent ready to give you advice regarding farm problems and home management. Feel free to call upon them for such assistance as you may need. During the year professors from the University will be visiting your community, speaking in the high schools and giving the students there such guidance as they may be able to offer. They will also be pleased to address an alumni meeting which we hope you will attend. These professors will be pleased to speak to a luncheon club on the day they visit in your county. I hope you will be glad to see them and help them reach the people because they will have a message worth hearing. We want Kentuckians to become better acquainted with our professors and our professors need to become better acquainted with our citizens.

During the past year 7,729 different students were in attendance at the University pursuing work for their degrees. These young people are better educated today than they were before they entered the University. The education of these boys and girls probably is our first and most important objective. However, the adult education program which the University is carrying on in all parts of the state ranks next in importance. During the past year our county extension workers made more than 100,000 visits to the farms and homes of this state. About 300,000 farmers and home makers came to the offices of our extension workers for information. There were over 60,000 meetings held in Kentucky last year by extension leaders and the number of people who attended these meetings approximated 2,000,000.

The number of people who visited the Lexington campus during the year was between 400,000 and 500,000 individuals. They came for athletic events, community concerts, farm and home programs, short courses for bankers, accountants, personnel directors, farmers, teachers, lawyers, pharmacists, engineers, and many other groups. This adult education program is of inestimable value to our citizens. More and more people are coming to us each year asking us for help on their particular problems.

In our laboratories each day there are scores of men and women peering through microscopes recording what they see. In other laboratories there are students and research workers examining what they observe in a test tube. In the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Engineering Experiment Station there are tests and experiments going on constantly to discover new truths. All over the campus there are highly educated men and women seeking to discover new knowledge that the world may profit from it. This is our research at the University. Out of research of this character come the discoveries that make the lives of our people richer, more satisfying and more interesting. It is largely from the ivory towers of our universities that industry and agriculture find facts that contribute to the health and well being of the peoples of our world.

You are our representative in your community. Help us to convince the citizens of Kentucky that they cannot have a better state without a better state university.

Nation's 'Winningest' Cage Cage

Top Flight Stars On UK's '53 Roster

By KEN KUHN
Sports Publicity Editor

Cagey Adolph Rupp, the Bluegrass Baron of brown suit fame who rules the basketball dynasty at University of Kentucky, puts on his best poker face but can scarcely conceal the gleam in his eye when talking about the future of his Wildcats.

The nation's winningest cage mentor hesitates to come right out and wax enthusiastic over the group of stand-out basketeers returning to the cage wars this season after a year's enforced layoff under discipline by the NCAA and Southeastern Conference. However, when asked about the prospects for a winning campaign in 1953-54, which most impartial observers are about willing to concede without batting an eyelash, Baron Rupp glances down his star-studded roster and admits "things look pretty good on the face of the matter."

A veteran lineup, headed by All-Americans Cliff Hagan and Frank Ramsey, has been bolstered during the past season that the Wildcats were under wraps by the addition of several top-flight freshmen prospects and Rupp has already pared his squad list down to fighting trim to make way for even more classy new blood to be injected. The result could be one of the greatest outfits since the 1948 team that captured the Olympic championship.

Unless the unexpected develops, all the regular mainstays of the suspended 1952-53 team will be around next season. Only three seniors — Hagan, Ramsey, and Lou Tsioropoulos—were members of last season's combine, and, under the rules allowing four years of competition within a five-year period from the time of first enrollment, they will have another season of eligibility remaining. Other regulars returning to competition include Bill Evans, junior starting guard; Gayle Rose, also a junior guard who likely would have been the fifth man in the starting lineup if UK had played last year; and Willie Rouse, still another third-year guard who was a top reserve two seasons ago. That's the cream of the old faces that Kentucky's foes will be seeing again.

In the newcomer category, the Wildcats began practice last season with 16 freshmen on the roster. Normal departures have reduced the number, but it's likely that eight or ten will graduate to the varsity. It's even more probable that the top performers in this group will find the transition to high-level inter-collegiate play much smoother than most yearlings ordinarily experience.

The one bright spot in the year-long lay off has been the rapid and encouraging development of Kentucky's freshmen cagers, according to the man who has guided the Wildcats to four national championships in the past seven years. He attributes this, among other things, to the left-handed compliment of the NCAA that allowed more time for practice. Whereas the team formerly got in only a couple of practices a week between games to work on fundamentals and the freshmen received comparatively little attention, last season was different. Practice went on every day with the frosh coming in for as much attention as the varsity. Fundamentals were stressed as much as needed, defense came in for attention exclusively a week at a time, new plays and defenses were developed and tested under simulated game conditions during four exhibition intrasquad scrimmages.

These unique public scrimmages, at which no admission was charged and pregame clinics explaining Kentucky's style of play were enthusiastically received by the fans, attracted a total attendance of nearly 35,000. At one such exhibition, the evenly-split squads played to an audience of 10,000—probably the largest crowd to witness a basketball contest in the south last season.

Coach Rupp noted so many encouraging signs in the play of the freshmen that one of them, six-foot-six hook shot artist, Jerry Bird, is likely to break into the starting lineup and others will oust some returning regulars for first string reserve jobs. Considered the best of the lot among the prospective second-year men, besides Bird, are a six-foot-seven center, Phil Grawemeyer; and Linville Puckett, a six-foot guard.

Already signed for the coming year are the state's top high school stars—Ray Mills of Clay County, a six-foot-four inch center and stellar rebounder; Earl Adkins, Ashland, a six-foot-three, high-scoring guard; Logan Gipe, a six-foot-two star forward from Hagan's hometown of Owensboro; John Brewer, a six-foot-three forward from Anchorage; Sonny Corum, a five-foot-eleven guard from Midway; and Jerry Calvert, Maysville, a six-foot-one inch guard.

The future looks bright, on paper, for Kentucky to continue its domination of the national basketball scene. Maybe the Wildcats will suffer, as their veteran coach points out, from the absence of a "big" man in the pivot and will be "on the spot" to live up to high expectations of the public. Perhaps the other teams will have more experience under competitive conditions and possibly it will take half of the season to become accustomed to collegiate competition again, as the Wildcat chief would have you believe.

But most opponents, including a few Southeastern clubs already quaking in their respective boots at the thought, are not taking much stock in the outside possibilities.

A large pond, on the site of Stoll Field, the present football stadium at the University of Kentucky, was drained and filled in shortly after the turn of the century.

It is estimated that approximately a quarter of a million visitors come to the University of Kentucky campus each year for festivals, conferences, field days, sports events and meetings of various kinds. In addition, families from all parts of the state visit students enrolled at UK.

Art exhibits are on display almost continuously in the Fine Arts Gallery of the University of Kentucky. Visitors to the Fine Arts Building are always welcome.

J. S. Watkins Acquires Taylor Collection For U. K. Library

Forty items connected with the administration, life and letters of President Zachary Taylor have been purchased by J. Stephen Watkins, '30, Lexington architect and past president of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association, and presented to the Margaret I. King Library.

All 40 items were for many years in the possession of President Taylor's daughter and White House hostess, Mrs. Betty Taylor Bliss.

Following the deaths of President and Mrs. Taylor and Colonel Bliss, Mrs. Bliss took them to Winchester, Virginia, where her second husband was Philip Pendleton Danridge of that city. It was from the estate of a member of the Danridge family that the items have been acquired.

Included in the collection is an original autograph letter, signed by Millard Fillmore and addressed to General Taylor on June 26, 1848. Correspondence from one President to another has unusual interest and value for historians and collectors. In this case, the value is enhanced by the rough draft of Taylor's reply (in Bliss's hand) on the opposite page. The fact that Taylor and Fillmore were then running-mates on the Whig national ticket, and that this was Fillmore's first letter to Taylor, makes the signed manuscript and the penciled draft almost a unique combination.

Equally unusual is a second letter, in Fillmore's hand and bearing his signature, written the day after Taylor's death in the White House (and Fillmore's accession to the Presidency). In it, the new chief executive urges Mrs. Taylor "to continue to occupy the Presidential Mansion as long as it may suit your convenience." Fillmore also expresses his "deep sympathy" and offers to aid the widow "on this trying occasion."

There are also letters to President or Mrs. Taylor from Governors Isaac Johnson of Louisiana, John Motley Morehead of North Carolina, and William F. Johnston of Pennsylvania; an official certificate making President Taylor a "director for life" of the American Bible Society; a handsome copy of his inaugural address, reproduced in colors on silk, and the invitation to Mrs. Taylor to attend her husband's inaugural ball in Washington. Congressman Abraham Lincoln and Colonel Robert E. Lee were among the "managers" of the dance, and their names appear on the invitation.

Another choice item is a letter to Taylor, signed by his immediate predecessor in the White House, the Democrat James K. Polk. Dated July 3, 1848, this communication informs the hero of the Mexican War that a gold medal is officially presented to him in recognition of Taylor's "distinguished conduct" in the Battle of Monterey.

There is also a letter to Colonel Bliss, signed by five of the seven members of the Taylor Cabinet, and referring to the mysterious "Minutes of the Cabinet" which scholars have sought for years and have never succeeded in locating. Still another item was sent General Taylor by Polk's Secretary of War William L. Macy, with whom "Old Rough and Ready" had engaged in an eloquent dispute during the Mexican conflict.

Prior to their acquisition by the University of Kentucky, these letters composed one of the important presidential collections remaining in private hands.

There are some Taylor and Fillmore papers, and a far larger Polk collection, in the Library of Congress. However, the burning of his son's plantation home during the Civil War resulted in the destruction of what is presumed to have been the bulk of Taylor's private correspondence. Fillmore's son, Millard Powers Fillmore, ordered his father's papers destroyed; some, but by no means all, were saved and are now in the library of the Buffalo Historical Society in Buffalo, New York.

Zachary Taylor lived a longer time in Kentucky than any other President of the United States. Brought to Kentucky from Virginia when he was

Ben F. Reeves, '49, Awarded Fellowship

Ben F. Reeves, '49, a reporter for the Louisville Courier Journal, will do a 10-month internship in Congress under a new type of fellowship awarded by the American Political Science Association.

The University graduate will be a staff member of a senator or representative and for a Congressional committee after studying the organization of the two chambers at the Library of Congress.

Mr. Reeves has taken a leave of absence from the Courier Journal, as the $3,600 fellowship became effective September 1. He was one of six winners among the 150 who applied. An advisory committee composed of members of Congress, a newspaper editor, and political scientists made the choices on the basis of nation-wide interviews.

Reeves, 31, joined the Courier Journal in January 1952 after working a year in Indiana as a reporter on the Evansville Press. Previously he was chairman of the department of journalism at the Richmond Professional Institute of the College of William and Mary, Richmond, Va.

A native of Bowling Green, Mr. Reeves was graduated from the University in 1949 and did a year of post-graduate work in political science here.

James Albert Lyle, formerl of Lexington, who received the B.S. degree from UK in 1940, George Perry Summers, B.S. '28, M.S. '32, and Kenneth Nelson Vines, M.A. '47, all received the Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of Minnesota last June.

eight months old, he grew to manhood in the Bluegrass State. He entered the Army as a first lieutenant of infantry from Jefferson County, Kentucky, on the recommendation of the Kentucky congressional delegation.

Taylor's first military assignment was recruiting duty at Washington, Mason County, Kentucky. He was married in Kentucky. Nearly all his children were born in Kentucky. He owned property in Kentucky for forty years, and he lies buried in the Zachary Taylor National Cemetery near Louisville.

Wildcats Look Good By Mid-Season

Bryant's Faith in Team Is Justified

By KEN KUHN
Sports Publicity Editor

Back in early September, when practice for the unpredictable 1953 gridiron campaign was just getting underway, Kentucky Football Chief Paul (Bear) Bryant offered a bit of advice to intimates watching the daily training grind.

The man, who has been probably more accurate in his predictions of things to come than noted commentator Drew Pearson, declared: "Do not give up on us if we get off to a poor start. . . . We have what I believe is the makings of a good outfit. . . . If they study and pay the price, I am sure that they will improve from Saturday to Saturday and along about '55 we will be beating somebody."

At this writing, with the first four games under their belts and the mid-season turning point almost at hand, the amazing accuracy of that now-prophetic, off-the-cuff analysis seems the best possible summation of Kentucky's surprising football Wildcats.

Harrassed by inexperience to an unexpected extent and faced with an unexpectedly-difficult schedule, the youngsters had grown up rapidly under fire and improved with each week—as Bryant had predicted.

The cold figures in the won and lost columns mean little. Two losses were recorded at the very opening of the season for the poor start feared by the U.K. taskmaster. Texas A. and M. annexed a heartbreaker, 7 to 6, and Ole Miss managed a 22 to 6 win in an off-day performance by the Cats. Then the Wildcats sprang out of their lair to claw highly-favored Florida into Gator bait by a 26 to 13 measure and improved on even that showing to gain a "moral victory," 6-6 tie (and nearly an upset win) over the powerful Louisiana State Tigers.

Apparently Kentucky, which had been counted out of the Southeastern Conference picture almost entirely in pre-season forecasts, was beginning to

FOOTBALL BANQUET

Tickets for the event will be $2.50 each, and reservations may be made by calling the Alumni Office, Phone 2-2200, ex. 2152, or by wiring or writing the office, Room 124, Student Union. Any unclaimed reservations must be paid for.

find itself. But as the prophetic coach warned, "we're not out of the woods yet."

The schedule ahead included such pitfalls as Mississippi State, the hottest "darkhorse" in the Deep South and a most dangerous aggregation sparked by All-America quarterback candidate Jackie Parker; Villanova's big and always tough Wildcats; highly-regarded Rice, a favorite for the Southwest Conference championship; Vanderbilt; Memphis State, a little team with a lot of trouble for anyone taking them lightly; and troubled Tennessee, who could be rolling by the time they invade Lexington on Nov. 21.

But regardless of the future success or disappointment, the Bryantmen deserved much of the rave notices sports-writers were beginning to shower them with after their surprising improvement on two successive weekends against opponents rated nine to 14 point favorites.

In the very opening game against the Texas Aggies, who proved to be a much stronger team than pre-season strategists figured, the young Wildcats gave the home folks a taste of things to come. Taking a leaf from the history of last season, UK surged from behind in the final period of the contest to score what could have been the prelude to a tie. Only a snafued try for the extra point, started by a premature snap from center and ended by an unsuccessful, desperation pass, resulted in the 7 to 6 decision in favor of Texas A. & M. It was a heartbreaking defeat but some measure of hope was reflected by the memory that the loss was not as easily accomplished as the 25-6 setback inflicted by Villanova in the '52 opener and might have been a tie game except for the failure to convert.

Two-touchdown underdogs in the Mississippi game at isolated Oxford the next week, Kentucky made the host Rebels happy by their mistakes of inexperience and ineffective defensive play. The scoreboard read 22 to 6 in Mississippi's favor when the gun sounded, but the Wildcats had given it a good old college try before the Rebels' superior depth wore them down. Only brightness in the darkening picture on the Cats' chances for getting into the win column was the appearance in this contest of passing potential. With soph Dick Shatto and Prestonsburg freshman Delmar Hughes doing the heaving, Kentucky showed a promising aerial game that connected 12 out of 27 times for 133 vital yards and the lone touchdown.

The second defeat forced Kentucky's football stock down to rock bottom and most share holders were ready to give up until the '55 season that Coach Bryant talked of as his target date in a new five-year plan started after the spectacularly successful end of the first plan in 1950.

But the never-say-die coach and plucky "Tucky pulled a fast one on followers and opponents selling them short.

Florida's impressive Gators, led by their All-America fullback Rick Casares, came to town rated better than one touchdown favorites to inflict loss number three on the floundering Wildcats. Stopping the highly-touted Casares and company cold, Kentucky was not to be denied this one and surged to an amazing 26 to 13 upset win over the Sunshine State crew that had tied Georgia Tech only a week previously. A couple of bench-warming quarterbacks, Bob Hardy of Paducah and Herbie Hunt of Mayfield, powered a new-found aerial at-

BOOK WRITTEN BY FACULTY-ALUMNS

"Basic Principles of Supervision," a book published last June by the American Book Company, was written by Dr. Frank G. Dickey, '42, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Education, and Dr. Harold P. Adams, '34, associate professor of education.

The book covers major phases and techniques of supervision. Some 1,000 students in the authors' classes of supervision at the University have used materials in the book "successfully," according to the publisher.

Dean Dickey returned to the University last June after spending most of the 1952-53 school year at Harvard University in special graduate study. Dr. Adams serves as assistant director of the University's Bureau of School Service, in addition to his teaching duties.

Margaret Gooch Kiser, '29, formerly of Lexington, is now with the Pan American Union in Washington, D. C., serving as school secretary in the Division of Intellectual Cooperation. She has written a handbook on the "Organization of American State," for use in schools, college and adult study groups, which is in its third edition. Her husband, Orlando F. Kiser, is a 1928 graduate of UK.

Wildcats Look Good

tack with Parilli-like efficiency against the nation's best pass defense which was kept honest by the bulllike rushes of All-America Steve Meilinger and fullback Ralph Paolone, the latter one of the pleasantest surprises of the season.

Next came LSU, touted as high as fourth in the nation by some polls on the basis of the Tigers' smashing victory over well-regarded Texas and tie with powerful Alabama. Again the Kentuckians didn't bother to read the form sheet and proceeded to act the part of ungentlemanly upstarts against the rough Bayou Bengals. Spotting their hosts a one-touchdown advantage (which Coach Bryant thought until two hours after the game included a successful extra point), UK proceeded to leave the Tigers holding the bag as they roared back to make a break that allowed them to score a TD that knotted the count and resulted in the final 6-6 tie.

In the closing minutes of the contest, the Wildcats proved to the world their superiority over the Bengals by driving to the one yard line and leaving LSU hanging on the ropes thankful to settle for a tie.

In the opinion of Coach Bryant, the Wildcats were playing well by mid-season but still were making a few too many mistakes of inexperience that would have to be corrected before they could count on definitely controlling the ball against the many good teams still ahead on the tough schedule.

In the opinion of Joe Fan in the grandstand, this was a Kentucky team that had wonderful morale and spirit, that was playing not over their heads but better than anticipated, and was improving steadily with each game. It was a team that was going to lose some and almost sure to win some more good ones somewhere along the line.

Hudson M. Nichols, '49, of Danville, and Betty Lou Turner, '49, of Ashland, were granted master's degrees at the June commencement exercises at the University of Missouri. Mr. Nichols' degree was in the field of zoology and Miss Turner's in the field of social work.

Coach Bryant Picks UK "All-Star" Team

By PAUL BRYANT
Head Football Coach

A few weeks back some of the sports-writers who loyally follow the ups and downs of University of Kentucky football prevailed upon me to pick an "All-Star" team limited to former Wildcats.

I agreed only on the condition that players on our present squad be excluded from consideration and that the selection could be a two-platoon lineup in order to give recognition to men who might not fit into a catch-all category. Since the eve of the rebirth of one platoon football is here, this seems an appropriate time to honor these two-platoon stars of the passing generation.

My first selection was for the stand-out offensive players whom I have been fortunate enough to work with during the past seven seasons as Kentucky's football coach. While it's likely that my mail in the weeks to come will reflect considerable disagreement, here are the boys that I'd go with when the chips were down: Ends—Al Bruno and Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones; Tackles—Walt Yowarsky and Bob Fry; Guards—Gene Donaldson and Wash Serini; Center—Doug Moseley; Quarterback—Babe Parilli; Halfbacks—Emery Clark and Harry Jones; and Fullback—Wilbur (Shorty) Jamerson.

On defense, I would nominate a team composed of the following: Ends—Dominic Fucci and Charley McClen-don; Tackles—Bob Gain and Lloyd McDermott; Guards—Pat James and Bill Wannamaker; Linebackers—Jay Rhodemeyer and Harold Wooddell; Halfbacks—Dick Martin and Bill Moseley; and Safety—Jerry Claiborne. Again, the task of narrowing down the list to 11 men was most difficult due to the great many good boys of nearly equal calibre.

One cannot help thinking how pleasant the fall months could be this year if only the native Kentuckians on the two squads were still around to plug some glaring gaps. That would give us Wah Jones from Harlan, Clark from Carlisle, 1A Jones from Louisville, Jamerson from Henderson, McDermott from Covington, Rhodemeyer

Maj. R. E. Vick, '48 Decorated in Korea

Maj. Robert E. Vick

After receiving the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Bronze Star Medal, Maj. Robert E. Vick, of Greenville, Ky., was congratulated by Col. Albert O. Connor, his commanding officer, at a ceremony in Korea. Major Vick, whose wife, Geneva, and two children live on College St., Greenville, Ky., was cited for meritorious service while serving with the Training Branch of X Corps Headquarters. A former student at Western Kentucky State College, he was graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1948. Vick entered the Army in July 1941 and holds the Silver Star and the Army of Occupation Medal for service in Japan.

Alexander S. Chamberlain, 51, of Ashland, was granted the M.A. degree at commencement exercises held at Syracuse University last June.

Parilli Receives '52 All-Star Award

Vito "Babe" Parilli, '53, the University of Kentucky's all-time passing star, received the 1952 Most Valuable Player award between halves of the Detroit Lions-College All-Star football game August 14 in Chicago.

Ed Ashford, Lexington Herald Sports Editor, in reporting the event said: "It seems that Chicagoans learn something new about the Babe every year. Last year they learned he could run. This year they learned he could talk." Parilli responded to the presentation with a short but well-worded speech.

Bill Rives, outgoing president of the Football Writers Association made the award.

Kentucky is one of only three schools to furnish two of the annual game's most valuable award winners during the 20-year history of the game. Wisconsin and Minnesota are the other two schools. Kentucky's other honored player was Center Jay Rhodemeyer in 1948. Both Rhodemeyer and Parilli were coached by Paul Bryant.

UK Will Build New Men's Residence

Final federal approval to build a men's residence hall to house 366 students and provide dining facilities for 1,200, has been received by the University from the U. S. government.

A $500,000 allocation from the Kentucky property and Building Commission and a loan of $1,400,000 from the Federal Government will finance the dormitory. Bids were received Sept. 10.

The lowest single bid covering all the proposed construction amounted to $1,394,922. It was submitted by Hargett Construction Co., of Lexington.

The bids on separate phases of the work, as well as the lowest single bid were to be presented to the Board of Trustees on Sept. 22.

The residence hall will have a capacity of 366, and will be of brick and concrete construction.

On the University of Kentucky campus may be seen a section of the original strap rails and limestone sills used in the first railroad in the West.

Tom Scott Authors Current Music Hit

Tom Scott, native Kentuckian and former University student who is one of the nation's leading contemporary composers, has authored a potential jukebox hit in a melody called "The 38th Parallel."

The strange theme, which grew out of a radio show last summer, has just been released on records with Scott himself doing some "baritone whistling." It also features a banjo, harmonica and guitar. The result is reminiscent of, yet vastly different from, the theme music from the movie "High Noon," comments Charles Truax in a by-lined story in the October 26th issue of the Courier Journal.

Scott's "Fanfare and Cantilena" a symphonic composition, was one of four works commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra in 1952. He's also done many choral arrangements for Fred Waring in addition to bringing his folk ballads from New York to Lexington.

"The '38th Parallel' was originally written to tie together a documentary radio show which portrayed the effect of the Korean War on people living on the 38th parallel of latitude in America, which roughly coincides with the Mason-Dixon line in the eastern United States," says Mr. Truax. The 38th divided North Korea from South Korea.

Mr. Scott was asked to arrange the music for a 10-inch record. "The result," comments the Courier Journal writer, "has been an arrangement described as puzzling but highly moving."

Encouraged by the success the new composition has had already, Mr. Scott plans to do an opera in a folk-song vein based on its theme. The opera will portray soldiers through history who have fought in the vicinity of the 38th parallel, in each case for similar ideals but in different times.
