PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT THE MARGARET I. KING LIBRARY, UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY, LEXINGTON. KY.

ABOUT THE LIBRARIES:

LIBRARY PASTE; OR, LET'S ALL STICK TOGETHER.

This may be the only foolproof recipe in the world. You cannot, absolutely cannot, go wrong.

1. In a saucepan mix 4 tablespoons flour with 1 cup cold water. One teaspoon of alum may be added for extra cohesiveness but is not necessary.
2. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly. You can use an egg-beater if the flour is lumpy. Cook until mixture is just below the boil.
3. Add one cup of boiling water. This will cause the mixture to thicken fast.
4. When paste boils, remove from flame.
5. Add 1 teaspoon sugar which gives a fixative quality. You may add at this time a drop of oil of cloves. This gives a pleasant aroma to the paste but does not affect the consistency.

Keep paste in a covered jar in the refrigerator where it should last several weeks. When disposing of old paste (in time it will get moldy) wash it down the drain with water to prevent clogging. The paste can be used hot or cold and will work if it's thick or thin. After making it by recipe several times, you'll probably relax on measuring and realize that the formula works and that the only necessity is to boil the ingredients. It is basically the same process used in making gravy or cream sauce.

A TELECONFERENCE FOR LIBRARIANS IN KENTUCKY

A teleconference on continuing education for librarians in Kentucky airs on KET Saturday, October 20, 1979 at 10:00 AM. This is a discussion/call-in program which provides a survey of continuing library education and invites questions, suggestions, and discussion from librarians through a television-telephone network. During the teleconference librarians from across the state may call to ask questions, offer suggestions and express their needs regarding continuing education.

Our viewing site in Lexington is Lexington Technical Institute, Room 230. On hand will be a discussion leader, a television monitor tuned to KET, and a telephone to call KET studios in Lexington. Home viewers may place collect calls. To register for attendance at the viewing site call Nancy Little at 258-4908.

THE TROY H. MIDDLETON LIBRARY, LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY

A two-day program memorializing General Troy H. Middleton will be held at LSU on October 25-26. Four eminent librarians will speak on: "Why Research Libraries?"; "Book Publishing and the Future of the Book"; "The Research Library in the Network Environment"; and "The Research Library of 2001." The UK staff is cordially invited.
