

U.S. policy in Central America is subject of 2-day public seminar

By SCOTT WILHOIT
Associate Editor

Former Costa Rican president, Daniel Oduber, will be the keynote speaker at a two-day public seminar on U.S. policy options in Central America at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

Oduber, who was president from 1974 to 1978, is credited with governing one of the truly democratic political systems in the region, according to Kenneth Coleman, a professor of political science and chairman of the Latin American Program.

Oduber is one of the speakers in the Latin American Studies Program public seminar scheduled for Feb. 2-3. Coleman said the purpose of the seminar is "to expose Kentuckians to a variety of views of what the U.S. should do in Central America."

"There is still quite a bit of controversy surrounding the whole area," Coleman said. "And many people are questioning on which side the U.S. should be aligning itself with."

He said the goal of the seminar is to present different ideas. "The Latin American Program is taking no stance other than a stance of informing the public to the variety of options available," he said.

Other speakers will present a variety of opinions on the U.S. position in the turmoil-plagued region of the world. The speakers include Richard Holwill, deputy assistant secretary of state, Walter LaFeber, a history professor at Cornell University, and Abraham Lowenthal, chairman of the department of international relations at the University of Southern California.

Holwill, Coleman said, will speak on the rational behind current U.S. policy toward the region. Holwill and Lowenthal will compare and contrast the previous administration's position with the present in a speech titled, "U.S. Policy Under Carter and Reagan."

Tomorrow's seminar will begin with an address by LaFeber at 3:30 p.m., 206 Student Center. Later that evening, Oduber will deliver the keynote presentation at 8 in the Recital Hall of the Center for the Arts.

Friday's events begin at 8:30 a.m. with Holwill and Lowenthal's discussion. The debate will be held in the Recital Hall of the Center for the Arts. At noon Friday, Oduber, Holwill and Lowenthal will participate in a discussion titled "Policy Options: Toward a Creative Resolution of Conflict."

Coleman said questions from the audience will be entertained throughout the seminar. "We want the speakers to finish their addresses, but certainly once they are done, we will encourage questions from the floor."

He said money for the event was provided by a grant from the Office of the President, James O. King, vice president for administration, said his office has appropriated $8,900 for the event.

Summer course offers students Belize vacation

By SACHA DEVROOMEN
Staff Writer

Belize, Honduras and Guatemala — perfect summer vacation spots for those students enrolling in a special geography course during the 1984 summer intercession.

The class will spend the first week on campus studying and going through a geography of Belize textbook, said Percy "Doc" Dougherty, a geography professor and instructor for the three-credit-hour course.

The next two weeks will be spent, for the most part, in Belize. Dougherty said he would also like to go to Honduras and Guatemala for a few days.

"We will be out there doing things instead of reading out of textbooks," he said.

Each person will be expected to do a major project while in Belize, Dougherty said, and no tests will be given. "It is hard to give tests on techniques; the class will be very similar to a laboratory class," he said.

"Going over a number of techniques that they will be using in a lot of different research projects in a different type of culture and land area will have more impact," Dougherty said.

Cindy Taylor, a geography senior, said "to get anything worthwhile out of it (the class) you will have to put some effort into it."

The fourth week will be spent on campus where students will write their research reports, Dougherty said.

Belize, a former British colony, has a Creole population in the lowlands, Spanish culture in the mountains and Kechumarian Indians inland, he said.

"Belize is a tropical paradise with a little tension," Dougherty said. "There are British troops in Belize, which keep the country fairly stable, he said. Guatemala is also fairly stable, although there is some guerrilla artillery in parts of the country. The class, however, will not visit those areas, Dougherty said.

Taylor said the political turmoil in the countries adds a little spice to the trip for her.

Students will pay for their own trip. Dougherty said he has a tentative estimate of $380 per person, which includes airfare and hotel rates, but not food or spending money.

"With $380 on top of that is fairly cheap," Dougherty said.

Tuition will be $41 per credit hour for undergraduates and $59 per credit hour for graduate students.

Dougherty said he plans to take about 20 students and a graduate assistant. "I have a tentative list of 12 people already," he said. "I don't know how many of those are going."

Stanley Brunn, the chairman of the geography department, said the trip would be "a good opportunity for students who have an interest in this field for a very reasonable price."

Students also agree the trip is a great opportunity. "Students I know are really excited about it," Taylor said. "A lot of people are talking about going."

Dougherty said he chose Belize because "it is an area I know, I have done some field research there before." He took a group of students to Belize while teaching at Ohio University.

The course will be offered at both graduate and undergraduate levels during the summer four-week intercession. April 1 is the last day to register for the class and a $200 deposit is due by March 5.

Any student is eligible to take the course, Dougherty said. "As long as they have done some coursework in geography, geology and anthropology, they will be in good shape," he said. "Someone with a lot of background in other areas is more than welcome to go."

The course will not be all pleasure, however. "It is a working vacation," Dougherty said. "There is nothing wrong with mixing business and pleasure. Just having fun in a different culture is learning about it."

Dougherty said this course may not appeal to all people because Americans are used to clean facilities. "Belize is not the cleanest place in the world; some people are turned off by that," he said. "It will be roughing it."

BACCHUS plans speaker corp

BACCHUS has launched a speaker corp program with sociology professor Diane Taub slated as the first lecturer.

And the group has changed its meeting time to 7 p.m. on Thursdays, with Taub's lecture on alcohol and balance scheduled for tomorrow.

Key Conley, speaker corp chairwoman, said the club, formally called Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students, is hoping to boost concern for alcohol awareness through the new program.

"The BACCHUS speaker corp is one way in which (an) organization can show its concern for alcohol awareness," Conley said in a press release. She also urges all interested campus organizations to send a representative to tomorrow's meeting to discuss the corps' plans for the semester.

Sheehan to speak at law school

Daniel Sheehan, chief counsel and director of the private investigation in the Karen Silkwood case, will be speaking at noon today in the College of Law courtroom.

Sheehan, who investigated the claims of a worker who charged a nuclear power plant with negligence, will also speak at 1 p.m. in the Worham Theatre and at 7:30 p.m. at the Central Labor Council on 239 Southland Drive.

Bill to aid in-state bidders passes

FRANKFORT — The House of Representatives yesterday approved a measure to give Kentucky businesses an advantage when bidding against out-of-state competitors on state contracts.

Several problems with the measure were pointed out during committee consideration so a substitute measure was proposed by Rep. James Yates, D-Shively.

In effect, the new bill would give an advantage to Kentucky companies that face bids from competitors based in states that provide their companies with advantages over Kentucky companies. The percentage rate of advantage would depend on the rates given by the other states to their companies.

Fines for drunk drivers debated

FRANKFORT — Mandatory fines, jail time or community service work will force convicted drunken drivers into the General Assembly enact a new "Slammer Bill" proposed by Sen. Henry Lackey, D-Henderson.

Under the proposal, first offenders would be fined from $200-$500 or jailed for 48 hours to 30 days. The judge could also mandate community service work. If anyone is injured as a result of the offense, at least 48 hours in jail is required.

For the second offense, the penalties rise to a $350-$500 fine and jail time of at least seven days and up to six months. Again, the fine and jail time must be imposed and cannot be suspended. Community service work can also be mandated.

Those found guilty of a third offense must pay a fine of at least $500 and serve at least 30 days in jail.

Class provides students with field trip to France

THE KENTUCKY KERNEL Wednesday, February 1, 1984 5

By ANNA HARDY Staff Writer

The French department is giving UK students the opportunity to travel to France — and earn credit for it.

Jean Charron, a professor in the French department and coordinator of the program, said the trip is part of a "culture course." Not only will students be conversing in French, they will also learn the history and architecture of France, he said.

"I think the interest of something like (the trip) will be the realization that France is made of many different types of people and areas," he said.

They will travel and sightsee 16 to 18 hours a day, Charron said, and will visit French factories and plants.

Suzanne Flesch, a nursing senior, participated in the program two years ago. "I thought (the trip) was great," she said.

Charron said prerequisites of the course are French 202 or 203 or the equivalent. "The reason for the requirement is because we will be speaking French," he said. Charron said students must also keep a journal, write a research paper or take a final exam.

A $200 deposit is required to hold reservations and must be made one month prior to the trip at the latest, he said.

The cost of the trip is $2,000 and covers air fare, ground transportation, hotel accommodations and food, Charron said.

Flesch said that although it seems like a lot of money, the trip is "worth every penny of it." She said, "I would go back if I could."

The tentative departure dates are May 12-15. Return dates will be June 11-13, he said, adding that students will be back in time for the summer session.

Some of the areas they will be visiting are Paris, Orleans, Amboise, Cognac, Bordeaux, Le Normandie and Montpellier, Charron said.

Priority will be given to those students who sign up first, he said.

Interested students should contact Charron at 257-4330 or 1071 Patterson Tower. They can also contact the French department at 257-5721 or 1015 Patterson Tower.

Flutist, Zukerman, to perform with Israel Chamber Orchestra

By SCOTT WILHOIT
Associate Editor

The soft and melodic tunes of Mozart, performed by Eugenia Zukerman, will fill the chambers of UK's Center for the Arts, Feb. 15.

The world-acclaimed flutist will be accompanying the Israel Chamber Orchestra as part of the 1983-84 University Artist Series.

Nanci Unger, director of the Public Arts Program, said Zukerman's appearance is "one of the highlights of the year."

She said it took considerable planning to book Zukerman and the Israel Chamber Orchestra to UK. "We are very fortunate," Unger said. "She is so well-known and so talented."

"It's so unusual to see her in such a small hall as ours," she said. The Recital Hall seats 1,500 people, Unger said.

Zukerman appears regularly with major orchestras, in solo and duo recitals and with chamber music ensembles. She is, in addition to being a famous flutist, an accomplished novelist, screenplay writer and recording artist. She is also well-known for her work as a television commentator on "CBS Sunday Morning."

"She's certainly a true renaissance woman," Unger said.

Zukerman began her career after graduating from Juilliard School of Music and winning the Young Concert Artists Award in 1971.

She said her life revolves around music. "I often go to the flute for therapeutic reasons, like when I have a headache or am feeling depressed. I find it's my strength," she said.

Unger said Zukerman most enjoys playing chamber music. During the UK performance, she will be performing Mozart's Flute Concerto No. 1 in G Major. Works by Elgar, Stravinsky and Haydn will also be performed.

Davic Shalton will be conducting the Israel Chamber Orchestra. "Shalton," Unger said, "is quite gifted and young." As maestro, Shalton will be leading one of the most innovative orchestras in the world. In the past, the orchestra has used mimes and actors with their performances.

Unger said Zukerman's appearance with the Israel Chamber Orchestra at UK greatly enhances this year's draw of talent. "The University Artist Series allows music lovers to hear the finest in classical music under the most favorable of conditions," Unger said.

Zukerman's performance is scheduled for Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. in the Recital Hall of UK's Center for the Arts. Tickets are $13 for the general public and $8 for UK students and senior citizens. Tickets may be reserved by calling 257-4929.
