Hand may run the high hurdles if anything of better showing is made by either Kenchy or Emmerich in addition to the low hurdles. Emmerich and Hand run a double in the trials, but this year he is doing both events and looks to be even better than he was last year. His time in trials was 17.6. Ralph Kercheval, star football player, is being groomed for the other place, and will even outstrip Emmerich, as the sophomore has the form and needs only practice on his runs and steps to be a finished hurdler.

NATIONAL RIFLE CHAMPIONSHIP

Adding its very substantial contribution to the university's plan of publicity and progress, the varsity rifle team has climaxed a notably successful season with the winning of the National Rifle association championship.

There are, perhaps, few other sports more exacting in demand on time and energy than this one. Long hours of tireless practice and vigorous training lie behind the acquisition of skill in this field and the matches are more numerous than in almost any other sport. During this season, the university team emerged victorious from 68 matches and lost only eight. Such a record connotes a high degree of skill on the part of these men, and the acquisition of this latest honor comes as a fitting reward for their industry and perseverance.

Not only have the achievements of this team brought credit to the individual members, but in the process of their numerous matches with schools all over the country they have assisted very ably in reflecting credit on the university as a whole. To them and their coach, Captain W. A. Cunningham is due the heartiest congratulations and sincerest praise of the student body.

SPRING REVERIE

Neglecting our proffered ride, we walked to school Wednesday. The hour was earlier than usual; yet our stride was freer, lighter, more buoyant than ordinary.

As we swung jauntily along a campus path, the subtleties of the morning air caused us to raise our chin, lift our chest, distend our nostrils to their utmost, to realize in one delightful breath the full freshness of a budding season. A moist haze pervaded the atmosphere to find out and strengthen the every perfume of priming Mother Nature. The aroma of damp earth and stirring humus, the milder contrasting pungency of last year's moulding leaves, the smell of breathing cedar, the odor of dew-sweetened leaves, the scent of verdant grass, all drifted on the breeze.

Old Sol, thrusting up his head for an early morning stretch, was blinking happily in the eastern sky. The university campus, already awakened beneath the warmth of his smiling face, was rousing itself from under its blanket of vapor. As we walked, the longer shadows seemed to stir and draw backwards. A squirrel, with saucy tail aloft, skipped from light to shadow and to light again. With head and ears alert, he paused to rebuke us over his shoulder before he continued his search among the tree trunks for his breakfast of those delicacies that would tickle his squirrel palate. A robin red-breast hopped across the path and taking flight, winged skyward.

The campus was casting off its misty stillness and, with content but merry murmur, voicing its

DOTES AND ANTI-DOTES

By CRAIG VAN DRUTEN

Those up-to-the-minute stories concerning the university budget and flouting a Frankfort date-line are really Special to the Kernel.

Former Kernel editor-in-chief, Fiddell Bill Ardey, now Frankfort INS correspondent, writes them during off hours.

As we approached our destined building, the sun waxed hotter. Its rays laughed from every angle of the structure we were approaching and glittered from the windows in dazzling and confused merriment.

As we mounted the steps, the nearby trees rustling their leaves with beckoning and drowsy softness. Before it would be too late we turned again to catch one last breath of the season's freshness, and then, answering the summons of an irate bell, entered the anti-mated gloom of the building. As we Walked into the McVey hall typing room and encountered a High School week visitor busily pecking away. Curiosity got the better of me when I found he was writing to the Girl Back Home, and discarding my dignity I peered over his shoulder.

"Hooney, got here safe and sound—'Next' to every angle round—'Miss you sorely ev'ry day,' 'Can't say how I got that way!'"

Delitatory Mary Jo Armstrong discovers that you can't cheat your way and have it too. The lady determined to distribute her affections impartially—and bit by bit—among the campers. Pickap Coopy Foster pinned her and now demands that she discard her bitter ways.

With petitions for May Queen now in order, the nomination is decided to Guignolite Frank Fowler. Advised of a lady's wedding soon to be, the indiscreet gentleman volunteered his services as Flower Girl. Before the offer was accepted, however, he aspired to the more worthy post of Maid of Honor, and to cinch the appeal, added, "For all I have left is Honor."

Nowadays all signs of spring aren't under the mattress. Prof. E. Parquhar appeared in class Thursday morning wearing his bird but customary spring boutonniere—parade of wild-eyed eds trouting bed-ward at 3 a. m. heralds open season in Lovers' Lane. And the band sponsor on parade, has difficulty in keeping up with the sprightly drum major. The birds twittered and the squirrels minge on sorority house porches. The literary editor is overwhelmed with poetic contributions. And the boss hands over his typewriter overcome with blissful reverie or bum liquor. And then, without offering a defense I publish another's poetry.

Winston Churchill once became a trifle too forceful in pushing an argument with his dinner hostess. Angered, the lady remarked that she didn't care three skips of a house for his reticence. He at once wrote on a placard and sent it to her:

A lady has told me, and in her own house,

2:00-4:00 p. m.—New York Philadelphia Society Symphony Orchestra. CBS, WKRC.

"The Man Who Played God"

"The Man Who Played God" will be the current offering, starting Saturday, at the Ben All theater. The story deals with a great pianist who lost his hearing and is consequently forced to learn lip reading. Hating and disbelieving God, the long forgotten genius lives a life of seclusion in an apartment overlooking Central Park, N. Y. By using powerful binoculars he watches the people below. Being able to read their lips, from his Olympian heights he learns their joys and sorrows. Since he is rich, he takes a hand in some of their lives, while assuming the all seeing kindness of the Divine Providence he doubts, he comes to believe again.

The suave, sardonic, and gracious George Arliss is admirable as the pianist who plays God; and is ably supported by a talented cast.

Hell Divers Returns

"Hell Divers," Metro Goldwyn Mayer's sensational romance of naval aviation, is now showing at the Strand theater. The story deals with the rivalry between Wallace Berry, as the veteran of navy service, and Clarke Gable, a new type of sailor, and tries the conflict between old and new ideas in naval operations. There are sensational crashes, a heroic rescue, salvos fired from battleships—the whole awe-inspiring peasant of a great navy in action. Amid this is a romance with tropical lure, sacrifice, and the call of duty.

COW DOWN, COW A REAR

South Africa's wife market is undergoing a depression, and modern methods are being used by fathers who wish to dispose of daughters and be paid in cows.

The slump in marriages is severe because would-be suitors could not deliver the bovines. Prospective fathers-in-law with supplies of eligible daughters are now offering especially attractive terms. You can obtain immediate delivery by paying one cow down and promising the rest at the rate of one a year. You will find, though, that your father-in-law insists upon security. Any girl babies become his property until the wife is paid for.

FUTILITY

I burdened myself with toil, Painfully troublesome and sweaty, Endlessly trading with what Had else been done already.

I hardly know with what a heart I must accept new tasks, And when a hill I dig away The rail "But why," it asks.

Staff Completes Preparation of Year Book Copy
Preparation of copy for the 1932 Kentuckian has been completed and the year-book is now in the hands of the printers, according to an announcement by Frank Stone, editor.

In the feature section are included full-page autographed pictures of the winners of the beauty contest, pictures of the military officers and sponsors and snapshots.

Other sections of the annual contain pictures and notes of interest concerning the subject of the division. Pictures of the football and basketball teams have been made for the athletic section.

The seven division pages of the annual depict scenes suggested by appropriate quotations from Tennyson's 'Idylls of the King,' the theme of the book, were made by Joe Tillotson, artist for John and Ollie, engraver. Each subdivision page, made by Doris Smith, art editor of the annual, shows a half-trail in gold, with tiny cartoon figures, indicating the subject, placed with it.

The front end-sheet of the book shows the knights of the Round Table setting forth on the quest for the Grail. Throughout the book the Grail, wreathed in thorns, is veiled until the end of the quest and Galahad's achievement. The dedication and table of contents, as well as the division and subdivision pages are adorned with designs symbolic of the quest.

One of the most beautiful sections is the group of pictures of campus scenes printed in deep blue and creating the effect of a moonlight scene. Each full-page picture is accompanied by a small photograph placed in the lower corner.

The preparation of the 1932 Kentuckian has been made by staff of the university under the direction of Frank Stone, editor, while its financing of the business staff directed by Lynch Hillard. Pictures were made by Young and Carl, Cincinnati. The contract for printing was given to The Kernel and sub-contract for binding was let to the Ellis Printing company, Louisville.

"It is advantageous to have a printer on the campus who can see the students so that if there is a mistake in copy, he is sufficiently acquainted with the students to discover errors and call attention to them. The editor may watch the make-up of the book as it goes along and change the arrangement if necessary," Frank Stone said, in discussing the publication of the annual.

An interesting feature of the new annual is the arrangement of material so that it will 'blend' pages, or we extend completely the edge instead of being surrounded by a border. This method has been used for portions of other annuals, but it is believed that it is the first time this type of arrangement has been used throughout a year book.

Statistics Show Sex Is Factor in Grades Given

By JOHN M. KANE
The time has arrived when the intelligent student in search of a grade and the recognition of his industry will have anywhere from 15 to 30 per cent more chances of securing that grade if he will heed to the warning issued from the Personnel Bulletin. According to the publication of the Personnel Bureau the results of studies on the effect of sex in the grading of students at the university has been shown to be a factor in the assignment of class and semester grades.

His suspicions aroused by studies made at the university during the previous year, Prof. E. L. Gillis, registrar, asked for a report from each of the colleges and universities in Kentucky. He chose English and mathematics as the representative departments from which the grades of the second semester freshmen would be studied.

Twenty four schools returned results in the attempted discovery of the effectiveness of those intangible persuasions of the fair co-ed on the sympathies of the good grade of her male instructor.

The results were interesting in their indication that men students of the classes and who received higher grades from women instructors than did a similar group under the instruction of male professors. Based on the work during the semester, the chances of a student getting a satisfactory or passing grade was 72 in 100 while with a woman professor in the same class, the mortality rate has been reduced considerably and the struggling student had 87 chances in 100 of passing the course.

Further ramifications which came same line show that the co-ed's chance of getting a by in a course is only 69 per cent if her instructor belongs to the same sex as the student, while 87 per cent of them have been prevailing on the male instructors to give them a grade which will not add to their disgrace.

next year's schedule. The freshman team of the past season was most successful...

George Yates, elected to captaincy last year, failed to serve his term due to illness, will be on hand, and may be counted on as a regular member of next year's team.

Will Sale and DeMoisy at forward, Darby and Kreuer will have to hustle some if they intend to remain first stringers.

The guards will not be as crowded, but with Davis a sophomore next year, the going will be tough.

It is hoped that the schedule for next year will be completed within a few weeks.

Wildcat Trackmen Will Meet U. of L.

William E. Florence, cadet captain of the track team...

The loss of Bud Gavan by graduation left the coach with only Kelly in the blue and white leg...

The field events are much stronger than they were last year with the exception of the pole vault...

The identity of the broad jumpers for the meet Saturday will remain a deep secret until the morning of the meet...

John Mains has brought strength to the shot putting department with his long leaves of 42 feet and better, he once tossed the big ball 43 feet and seems a sure bet to win several events...

The starter for the meet will be M. E. Potter, freshman track coach; the judges will be announced later.

Berea To Be Foe Of Tennis Team

Bishop, after serving a year as tennis manager, showed talent at the net game, and George Yost, this year's manager, has followed suit.

Downing expects to have the finest team he has ever had, but he is not as sure of his number one and two positions as he was last year.

The work on the hardwood indoor floor has not hindered the tennis team in the least, but the players experienced a peculiar situation when the wood dried them quickly.
