Duty On Christmas Day

Servicemen Keep Peace

By ROYCE TAYLOR, Kernel Staff Writer

Last year they were students like you and me looking forward to spending the holidays with family and friends. This year they will "have the duty" on Christmas Day.

A jeep crawls along the snow-covered trails of a forest near Coburg, Germany on patrol of the Iron Curtain only a few meters away; a marine patrols the fence separating the Guantanamo Naval Base from Castro's Cuba; planes take off and land as an aircraft carrier keeps station in Formosa Strait.

At Strategic Air Command airfields around the world, flight crews attend briefings and standby in ready-rooms; at an air base in Alaska, line crews service aircraft carrying war supplies to our allies; and in Vietnam, American fliers man helicopters transporting troops in an operation against Communist guerilla forces.

Regardless of their rank, duty or location, those members of the Armed Forces who "have the duty" at Christmas will share common emotions—loneliness and a longing for home.

These are men who help preserve "Peace on Earth" and pledge their support in attaining "Good Will Toward Men."

18 Students Initiated Into Phi Beta Kappa

Eighteen University students and recent graduates, 16 of whom are women, were initiated yesterday into Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor.

Selection to Phi Beta Kappa is based primarily on outstanding academic work, judged on approved courses only, not including so-called "skills" or "training" courses, and on the students' dedication to the ideals of philosophy, morality, and literature, said Dr. Robert O. Evans, associate professor of English.

The group is composed of two classes:

1. Those who qualify on the basis of eight semesters work, with an average of 3.5 or better.

2. Those who qualify on the basis of six semesters work, having achieved an average of 3.7 or better.

The students were initiated in a ceremony at the University Faculty Club, followed by a tea in their honor.

Those initiated were:

Patricia Ann Caudill, Lexington and Elkhorn City, psychology, a member of Psi Chi, psychology honorary, and Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Sylvia Carol Davis, Lancaster, modern foreign languages; Evelyn Miles Elton, Lexington, art.

Ann Gordon Evans, Lexington, journalism, a member of Links, junior women's honorary; Cwens, sophomore women's honorary; Mortar Board, senior women's honorary; Theta Sigma, women's journalism fraternity; Chi Delta Phi, literary honorary; Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary; and Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Jacqueline Driscoll Hasler, Lexington, English; Betty Love Hisk, Russellville, English; Phi Beta and Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Linda Lee McDowell Major, Lexington, modern foreign languages; Alpha Lambda Delta, and Chi Delta Phi.

Betty Jane Mitchell, Campbellsville, history; Mortar Board, Links, Cwens, Alpha Lambda Delta, Kappa Delta Pi, and Chi Omega sorority.

Morell Eugene Mullins, Richmond, English; Phi Eta Sigma, Keys, and Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

S Nancy Jane Percival, Hickory, N.C., social work; Jackie Fay Robinson, Lexington, philosophy; Omicron Delta Kappa, men's leadership honorary; Phi Eta Sigma and Eta Sigma Phi.

Ann Previtt Shaver, Lexington, English; Cwens, Links, Mortar Board, Chi Delta Phi, and Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Patricia Harris Walters, Carrollton, English; Michael Stroud Watson, Covington, psychology.

Gertrude Carrigan Webb, Lexington, education; Cwens, Links, Alpha Lambda Delta, Mortar Board, and Kappa Delta sorority.

Margaret Kingibe Wilson, Madisonville, psychology.

Vanda Catherine Marcum, Lexington, chemistry; Alpha Lambda Delta, Cwens, Links, Mortar Board, and Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Dudley Lanier Milward, Lexington, modern foreign languages; Phi Sigma Iota, modern foreign language honorary.

Sororities Announce Second Semester Rush

Panhellenic Council has set Feb. 9-17 as the dates for second semester rush. The number of sororities that will be rushing has not yet been announced, but this information will be available before the registration date.

The rushing period will consist of two sets of parties, open houses Feb. 9 and 10, and desserts Feb. 11-16. Pledges will receive their bids Feb. 17.

All women signing up for rush for the first time will be invited to all the open houses. In addition, the sororities will extend invitations to women who have participated in previous rush activities in whom they are interested.

Girls interested in the informal spring rush should sign up at the dean of women's office between Jan. 3 and 18. Entering freshmen and transfer students have until Feb. 4 at 5:00 p.m. to register.

To be eligible for rush a student must have a cumulative average of 2.0 or a 2.5 for the previous semester.

Open Stacks Increase Library Circulation

The library's new stack system is responsible for a circulation increase of nearly 3,000 books over last year.

Miss Kate Irvine, head of the circulation department, said, "Because of the open stacks, students going to the shelves themselves find more books on the same subject.

Use of books inside the library has increased also, but we have no way of keeping records."

Miss Irvine said the staff originally expected circulation to decline under the new system because of students using the books inside the building.

Although the open stacks system has increased circulation, it has one major disadvantage, she said. Instead of the students returning the books themselves, Miss Irvine asks that they use the book truck.

"Too much misplacing of books could be chaos," she said.

Another problem concerns the use of the carrels, or study cubicles. Miss Irvine said that sometimes too many students study in one carrel, disturbing others around them.

"On the whole," she said, "the students' behavior has been good, and their enthusiasm shows that they want the open stack system."

Women Can Alleviate Shortage Of Dentists

The dental profession needs more manpower and must turn to women for the answer to its shortage, said Dr. Harry M. Bohannon, head of admissions for the College of Dentistry.

Women are good dental workers, Dr. Bohannon said, because they have a "fine aesthetic sense" and usually have the manual dexterity required for the job. They can also marry and fit their careers into family life easier than can women in some other lines of work.

The national ratio of dentists per patient is one for every 1,900 people. Dr. Bohannon said that even though there are 3,500 dental graduates annually, this is still insufficient with regard to the present population growth. Kentucky's ratio is one dentist for every 3,000 people, ranking 38th in the national category.

Statistics show that 51 Kentucky counties have a ratio of 1 to 4,000; 25 counties have a 1 to 5,000 ratio; nine counties have a 1 to 10,000 ratio, and nine counties have no resident dentist.

In making speeches throughout Kentucky, Dr. Bohannon stresses the fact that women make good dentists and that many of the disadvantages are fast disappearing as more women enter the profession.

Kennedys Celebrate Yule Away From Washington

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This story was compiled from several magazine articles concerning Christmas preparations at the White House.)

Christmas for our nation's first family is both a public season and a private holiday. The White House calendar of public events is filled many weeks before Christmas. However, the day itself is spent far from Washington, as the Kennedys gather in Palm Beach to celebrate the holiday with their family.

By the middle of December the White House has been decorated in true American style, with the emphasis on greenery. Mistletoe hangs over the wide doorways at either end of the main entrance hall. Ropes of greens wind up the staircases and wreath mirrors and portrait frames, and even festoon the chandeliers. Pots of red and white poinsettias bloom in every room.

But the big attraction is the huge indoor Christmas tree, which Mrs. Kennedy set up for the first time last year in the Blue Room, the central room on the public floor of the White House. It was an 18-foot-tall balsam fir which Mrs. Kennedy had trimmed with decorations derived from the Nutcracker Suite ballet, by Tchaikovsky. It was a real "children's tree," and this year's tree will be decorated in a similar fashion. The small lights used are shaped like candles, and a pale blue velvet ribbon twining around the tree seems to support the abundance of tiny animals, alphabet blocks, miniature musical instruments, woven straw ornaments, gingerbread men, and candy canes that hang on every branch. The very top of the tree is adorned with a gold star.

The Nutcracker tree and the other decorations are seen in full glory for the first time at the annual White House staff party. The nearly 1,000 members of the staff—ranging from the office personnel to the maintenance men—attended this very informal afternoon reception, held about two weeks before Christmas. There is no receiving line, no stiff ceremony. Instead the President and Mrs. Kennedy and Caroline move among the guests, and exchange personal greetings. Christmas gifts are given to the staff at this time; last year's present was a colored photograph of the White House autographed by President and Mrs. Kennedy.

The staff party is the traditional beginning of Christmas at the White House and is just the start of the busy weeks to follow. Another open house follows for the children of staff members. They gather on a Sunday afternoon to look at the official Christmas tree and carry away a candy cane compliments of Caroline.

Last year Mrs. Kennedy and her staff instituted a third White House party, this one for some 60 orphans from nearby St. Ann's Infant Home and Junior Village, joined by the children of the Kennedy family and their friends.

At this gathering in the East room, the children, all eight years and under, sang carols and received gifts from Santa Claus. They also feasted on cookies and ice cream. And when they boarded the U. S. Army buses at the party's end they were given balloons and paper hats, and stockings of oranges, candies, and nuts.

Mrs. Kennedy has also started the custom of visiting the Children's Hospital in Washington distributing gifts of keepsake ornaments in the form of angel musicians to each of the patients there.

During all this party-giving the White House tours go on as usual—except that there are more of them, as vacationing families with children make it a special point to see the White House in all its holiday splendor.

Several days before Christmas the President delivers his traditional message to the nation in televised ceremonies marking the lighting of the National Community Christmas Tree on the White House lawn.

The President and his wife send out both a personal and an official Christmas card each year. Last year Mrs. Kennedy chose UNESCO cards for the family's personal greetings.

The end of the official Christmas season comes when the President and his family travel to be near the grandparents for Christmas Day and the two weeks that follow. "Home for Christmas" means Palm Beach, Florida, which has been the winter home of the senior Kennedys for years. This is where the President and his brothers and sisters spend the holiday season with their children.

The President and Mrs. Kennedy set up and decorate their private tree on Christmas Eve. The Kennedys do not have a Christmas tree in their private apartment at the White House, since they feel that two personal trees would confuse Caroline and John Jr.

On Christmas morning the family attends mass and the rest of the day is spent exchanging gifts and participating in family games and outdoor activities. There is an early evening meal for the children, climaxed by the traditional family feast at Ambassador Kennedy's home.

Greeks Provide Santa For Underprivileged Kids

Santa Claus, parties, and the Christmas activities of the conglomerations of turkey and toys provided a merry Christmas for a group of underprivileged children who were entertained by nine UK sororities and two fraternities.

Kappa Delta gave a party for preschool children of the Lexington Deaf Oral School, Saturday afternoon. Plans for the party included Santa, a magician, and refreshments.

Santa appeared at a dinner party for a group of children from Lincoln School last Thursday, given by the Kappa Kappa Gammas.

Another group from the Lincoln School was entertained by Delta Delta Delta Thursday.

Alpha Delta Pi gave a party for 12 of these children last night. Phi Delta Theta, Chi Omega, and Alpha Xi Delta gave parties Sunday. Tree decorating also falls under the Christmas activities of the sororities. Alpha Gamma Delta is decorating a tree for the children at Cardinal Hill Hospital. They also are planning a party for the children there this week.

Delta Gamma helped in decorating a tree at the International House Saturday.

Kappa Alpha Theta played Santa Claus this Christmas. They presented the Pine Street Day Nursery with over $50 worth of toys.

Caroling is on the agenda for Delta Zeta sorority. They held a party for the first grade of Lincoln School Saturday.

The members of Delta Tau Delta drove the children around to the sorority houses for the parties. This has been a tradition with the Deltas for many years. They also held a party for underprivileged children last Thursday.

Relax, Enjoy Your Vacation; Nothing Much Can Happen.

By NANCY LOUGHRIDGE

Yes, its finally arrived. What? Why Christmas vacation of course. For a while it looked as if that long needed break would never come, what with the weather, tests, papers, and Christmas shopping. Well buck up, in a few hours you'll be making your merry way homeward for the gay holidays.

Think of all the fun you're going to have reading those assignments you've put off all semester. Better yet the fun of writing your travel papers. Yes, vacation is a restful time.

There will be the usual round of parties while you're home but even these will bring little problems.

If you live in snow country there'll be skating and skiing and lots of other hearty outdoor activities. Think how much fun you'll have sitting around a roaring fire warming yourself with a "hot toddies" after an afternoon on the slopes. Sounds great doesn't it, until you remember you left all your slacks and heavy sweaters in a suit case, in the dorm, back in ole Kaintuck.

Look back on past experience and make a careful list of these frightening incidents.

Remember the time you had a brand new dress for the holiday parties? Lo and behold you go to your closet to yank it out and surprise, you didn't pack it. It's times like these that turn a coed's hair gray.

Or the time you packed for the big holiday weekend with friends, in another town, only to find you'd forgotten to include a few little things like your pajamas and the rest of your lingerie. Not even a robe could be found and it was 12 below zero.

Any way you get the general idea, MAKE A LIST. If you don't, you may find yourself going everywhere in slacks, or party dresses, or better yet, just skirts—the slouses are still in the sorority house dryer.

As we've said, vacation time is a joy to all, as you can plainly see. Even if you do take the right clothes home, don't forget anything; and follow your study plan, there's always Christmas day.

For some strange reason Aunt Minnie can't seem to remember you're 21, not 10. After all, what use does a coed have for a hot-bath?

Then of course, if the gift bit goes to your satisfaction there's always Christmas dinner. Strangest thing about cranberry jelly; it always seems to have a way of sliding into your lap.

If none of these things happen to you go through the day safely, there's always the possibility you forgot to stamp all your Christmas cards and your friends paid four cents for them, merry little greeting from you. Yes sir, there's nothing like Christmas to fill the heart with peace and joy.

There's no place like home for the holidays, so have a wonderful Christmas, get those papers done, and drive carefully. We want you back in '63 to read the Kernel.

Even though we may be cynical at times, its all in fun and we hope you enjoy reading it as much as we enjoy writing it. So from all of us, to all of you, MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A Christian View On Academic Freedom

The Christian who has followed the issues of academic freedom evolving from the Grebstein case will find ingredients that are not foreign to the history of the Christian faith. Within its own community the church has had to deal with right and wrong teaching, the freedom and growth of the human mind. And, in considering the Christian implications of higher education, some outstanding Christian voices have spoken more directly to the Grebstein controversy.

"The true Christian has never tried to avoid exposure to the world as it is. Christ was concerned about 'right teaching,' but was made an object of controversy by the moralistic religious leaders of his day, and even by his own provincial disciples, because of the company he kept. This Christ brought light into the world wherever there was darkness. He would associate with the harlots, an adulteress (from a heathen country!), friends of Caesar, and those possessed by demons. To those who questioned the kind of company he kept, Christ would reply, 'It is not those who are well who need a physician, but those who are sick.'"

The harlots, the adulterers and other sex perverts are still with us in our society. In portraying this part of our society, some contemporary authors may have sensual appeal as their only goal. But, I find most authors speaking prophetically about the personal frustration and social breakdown which results from the misuse of sex. Jean Baptiste Clemence (The Fall, Camus) cannot escape the voice of judgment by his debauchery; Holden Caulfield (The Catcher in the Rye, Salinger) finds only more anxiety plus embarrassment when a harlot visits him in his hotel room. Cass Mastern (All the King's Men, Warren) destroys his best friend, a slave girl, and himself by his adultery. The moralist will look for the "naughty" parts of a book and will cast it into the fire in order to preserve the innocence of the college generation. The responsible Christian student will seek a fair sampling of today's modern literature and will take his English professor's advice by thinking to himself, "What is the author trying to say?" The Christian student will also ask, "If this author portrays life as it is, is my Christian faith relevant to the situations and characters in this book?" There is always some risk in this kind of exposure. But it is not unlike the situation of the prodigal son of whom Christ spoke in a parable. He tells us of a lad who could well be a college freshman; for he was eager to leave home ties and try new freedom, and he had an impressionable mind. The boy's father did not restrain the boy, but with deepest concern allowed him to be exposed to the world. There was always the risk that the boy would not return. The boy experienced the world at its lowest, as a swineherd, who because of his hunger, would have eaten what he fed the pigs. But having seen the world from this point of view, the prodigal son came to a moving revelation of what was good and true. He returned to his anxious father.

Cardinal Newman (The Idea of A University) aptly ties in this theme with the principles of higher education. "For why do we educate, except to prepare for the world? It is not the way to learn to swim in troubled water; never to have gone into them. Proscribe (I do not merely say particular authors, particular works, particular passages) but secular literature as such; cut out from your class books all broad manifestations of the natural man; and those manifestations are waiting for your pupil's benefit at the very doors of your lecture room in living and breathing substance."

Reinhold Niebuhr (writing in The Christian Idea of Education) quotes "A Letter to the Christian People of America," adopted by the General Assembly of the National Council of Churches in December, 1952; "In all education, and in culture as a whole, the interests of truth are dependent upon freedom of thought. . . . It is, in fact, good for truth to have to struggle with error. . . . Error must be met by truth in free and open encounter. The conscientious expression of ideas must not be dealt with by a dungeon, a boycott or an Index, nor by arbitrary governmental action, character assassination, nor by the application of unjust economic and social pressures."

Kernels

Sometimes when I consider what tremendous consequences come from little things—a chance word, a tap on the shoulder, or a penny dropped on a newsstand—I am tempted to think . . . there are no little things.—Bruce Barton.

The 'Killing' Season

Here it is again—the Christmas season with its gaiety, laughter, and senseless killing.

You may be tired of the "Slow Down and Live" campaigns, but with the traffic problem today they're necessary. Hardly a vacation period goes by that several University students are not involved in automobile accidents.

In their eagerness to get home a little earlier, these immature and thoughtless people press a little harder on the gas pedal. Actually the time saved is negligible.

So, if you're driving to Paducah, Indianapolis, or even New York, the chances you may take are not worth the tremendous risk involved.

If, however, you still aren't convinced and just have to go out and commit suicide, do it somewhere else and not on a superhighway.

More On The Band

To The Editor:

This is in reference to the letter of Mr. Heath's in the Dec. 5 issue of the Kernel. The fact that the writer of the article quit the band for obvious reasons does not give him the right to down-grade and ridicule the organization.

The Marching "100" was ordered off the field during one of its shows this year. The reason for this incident was that it got behind in the allotted time for the halftime festivities. It is a very sad thing when 88, not 85, people get out on a practice field in any kind of weather and work for six to eight hours for a 10 to 15 minute show and then are ordered off the field.

The fact that the hours are long attracts the interested musicians and weeds out the people who don't care and are interested only in what the band has to offer them and not what they can do for the school and the band. Also, the fact remains that there are no scholarships given for marching band at all.

The fact that there weren't more bands at band day is simply that there were no more bands invited. This is the second year that the Music Department has sponsored such a program, where the other schools mentioned have sponsored theirs for many years.

The fact that there aren't more than 88 members in the Marching "100" isn't our fault. Should the blame be placed on their heads that there aren't any more people interested in band? Also the size of a band has nothing to do with the quality of the group.

I would also like to inform the writer that Mr. Miller holds the same position as Mr. Lutz did, as clarinet teacher and director of the Marching "100."

It is about time that the people of the University of Kentucky woke up and took an interest in the Music Department. It has been kicked around and downgraded enough by various sources.

Carolina Outlasts Wildcats, 68-66

The only thing North Carolina failed to prove to Kentucky Monday night was that it is supposed to be placing a disemphasis on athletics. There was no such evidence in their exhibition as the Tar Heels refused to crack in the waning moments to win a thriller from the Cats, 68 to 66.

A pair of hot shooting five-year guards, Larry Brown and Yogi Poteet, paced the Tar Heels with 19 and 17 respectively. Billy Cunningham, a 6-4 forward, chipped in 13 and Charlie Shaffer added 15.

Five men reached double figures for Kentucky. High was Don Rolfes with 18, followed by Ishmael with 13, Nash, 12, Baesler, 11, and Roberts, 10.

Brown, one of the nation's leading free throw shooters, retained his accuracy in the clutch as he cashed in five of six during the final 2:23 to help ice the game.

It was close throughout, the score being tied 17 times, the lead changing hands on eight occasions.

North Carolina, paced by Cunningham and Shaffer, showed the Cats early that they meant business as they moved ahead, 11 to 5. But a crisp by Rolfes and two jumpers by Ishmael and Kentucky was back in business, downed only 14 to 13.

From here on no more than four points ever separated the two teams as they fought the remainder of the first half to a standstill, knotted at 32 apiece for intermission.

The Wildcats gave impressions of pulling away early in the second period as Scotty Baesler connected on two jump shots, giving Kentucky a 36 to 32 advantage.

But the Cats reckoned without Carolina and soon the Atlantic Coast quintet was back on top, 42 to 40.

Following several field goal exchanges, Kentucky edged back on top, 54 to 52 on a jumper by Rolfes with 8:48 left. Poteet tied it several seconds later but Ishmael hit a free throw to give Kentucky its last lead, 55 to 54, with 7:53 to go.

After Carolina moved back to the front by one, Nash hit a charity shot to even the count at 56 all.

After a series of field goal trades, Brown, who admittedly played the worst game of his college career against Indiana Saturday, connected on two free tosses. Cunningham then stretched the lead to four with a tip-in as the clock ningham missed the second of two gift shots. With 26 seconds to go the Tar Heels held on at 67 to 64 but UK had possession.

Randy Embry, subbing for Ishmael, took advantage of the situation and hit a jumper to trim the margin to one, 67 to 66.

At 13 seconds Nash intentionally fouled out of the game, sending Brown back to the gratis stripe, showed only 1:56 remaining in the game.

Still Kentucky wasn't through as Ishmael was credited with a crisp shot. After Brown and Rolfes swapped pairs of free throws Cun-

The first attempt found its mark, but when the bonus rolled off Cunningham and Roberts survived the scramble for a jump ball. But now only six seconds were left to play.

Cunningham got the top but Embry picked it off for the Cats. The strategy nearly paid off but Embry's shot from the side fell short and the Tar Heels had produced the upset.

The win made North Carolina one of a select few to hold an edge over Kentucky in a series.

The state underwent a deemphasis of athletics after several players from North Carolina colleges had been involved in basketball scandals two years ago.

Kentucky, after being limited to a modest 10 field goals in the first half, singled the nets at a 71.4 clip the second stanza compared to 63.2 for Carolina.

The Ruppmen sank 25 of 48, or 52.1 percent for the entire game while the Tar Heels were one under, 25 for 49, or a percentage of 51.0.

In the preliminary tilt the UK Freshmen won over Winchester AAU, 85 to 75. The Kittens were paced in scoring by Mickey Gibson with 24, Larry Conley, with 19, and Tommy Kron, 18. Joe Farris was high for Winchester with 20.

The frosh moved on top at half-time, 51 to 39 and then staved off several Winchester comebacks late in the game.

The Kittens also won the battle of the boards, pulling down 48 rebounds to 40. Gibson pulled down 11 for Kentucky while Julius Berry hauled off 14 for Winchester.

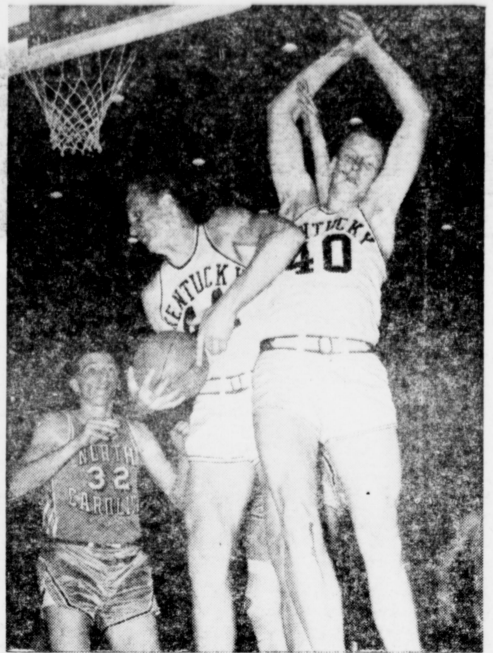

From the field the Kittens narrowly won out, 44.3 percent to 44.1.

The Kittens have now won five in six tries, having lost to Cincinnati's Bearkittens, a team they will encounter at home later on. The win was the second over Winchester, who lost only two games all last year.

Cotton Nash (44) and Don Rolfes (40) make certain that this rebound doesn't get away as they both pounce on a missed Tar Heel shot. North Carolina's Billy Cunningham (32) stands in the background with no chance of recovering. # Wildcats Face Iowa Hawkeyes; Oregon State Meets W. Virginia In Kentucky Invitational Friday

Memorial Coliseum marks the site for the battle of the All-Americans Friday and Saturday nights in the UK Invitational Tournament.

Each of the teams participating in the single elimination series displays either a top candidate for All-America honors or a star of extraordinary height.

The Wildcats, after playing three games in six days, now are faced with two more following only three days of rest.

Iowa, Kentucky's first round opponent, evened its record at two and two Monday night by beating Clemson, 74 to 64, at the Iowa Fieldhouse.

The Hawkeyes have eight returning lettermen and lost only two of last season's regulars. However, missing is All-Conference Don Nelson, who set seven Iowa scoring and rebounding records.

"Our main problem is to find a replacement for Nelson, but since that appears difficult, we must emphasize other phases of the attack," Coach Sharm Scheureman commented of his current squad.

Scheureman, 28, has been coaching at Iowa since he was 23.

The Hawkeyes have two of the tallest players in their history on the same team in seven-foot sophomore Don Faes and 6-9 junior Bill Shea. Both are reported as slow and lack the intricate coordination needed to be high scorers.

Other returning starters are Andy Hankins, a 6-0 guard, who Kentucky as a team is averaging 71.7 points per game compared to 62.8 for the opposition. The field goal average is 38.0 thus far.

The Wildcat's last meeting with Iowa was in the 1956 Midwest Regional of the N.C.A.A. Tournament at Iowa City. The Hawkeyes came out victorious in the conflict, 89 to 77, and proceeded on to the final round before dropping the championship to San Francisco.

Iowa, after dumping Evansville in its opener, hit an early season slump. Following the Evansville tilt, the Hawkeyes fell to St. Louis and then were upset at home by Ohio University's Bobcats. Iowa got back on the winning side Monday night with the win over Clemson.

Kentucky has had its troubles in the early going. The Cats were stunned in their opener by a supposedly mediocre Virginia Tech five, 80 to 77, in a game played at Lexington. But VPI has since proven that it must be reckoned with after dumping fifth rated Mississippi State, 82-65.

After the opening setback, Kentucky had shaky moments before edging by Temple, 56-52. A tremendous first half effort offset an ice cold second stanza as the Cats belted Florida State, 83-54.

In a rugged contest at the Coliseum Saturday, UK won in the closing seconds from Northwestern, 71-60. Then came the North Carolina loss.

In the tournament's opening game (7:30 p.m.) the Mountaineers of West Virginia oppose Oregon State's Beavers in what could develop into a scoring duel between West Virginia's Rod Thorn and seven foot Mel Counts of Oregon State.

The Beavers, two wins in four starts, will be making their first start in the 19th annual UKIT, which has seen UK reign as champion five times and West Virginia twice.

Oregon State, however, will have All-America quarterback Terry Baker joining the squad after his successful performance in last week's Liberty Bowl. Baker was a 10.7 scorer last year and has been cited by coach Amory Gill as being the team's floor leader.

Counts led the Beavers a year ago with 18.5 points per outing and wound up the campaign with 401 rebounds. He hit 29 of 30 free throws in the team's first four games.

Gill stated that "Counts is improved from last year and has been hitting jump shots from 39 feet out."

A California coach said he felt that with Baker back, "Oregon State would be among the best," and that there aren't "too many men in college basketball who can handle Counts."

West Virginia, supporting a three and one record this season, is being led by 6-4 Rod Thorn and his 22.7 average. He has posted a 47.4 percentage from the field and 66.7 at the foul line.

The other Mountaineer guard, Jim McCormick, 6-2, is the second scorer, averaging 15.3 a game. Gale Catlett, the third player in double figures, has 11.0.

So far, West Virginia has beaten The Citadel, 86-81, VMI, 109-74, lost to Ohio State, 76-69, and beat Richmond, 78-59.

This will be the Mountaineers' fourth appearance in the tournament. West Virginia has won two titles and once finished second in its three previous stanzas.

In 1957 the Mountaineers won the title by beating North Carolina for the championship after having ousted Kentucky's national champions to be in the first round.

The next year the Cats got revenge and beat the Jerry West led team that later finished second in the N.C.A.A.

West Virginia regained the title with a 79-70 win over Kentucky in the final game of the tournament.

Under My Wings

was second in scoring last year with a 10.3 average, and captain guard Joe Pellington, 6-1 senior, who poured through at a clip of 8.6 last season.

After its close loss to North Carolina, Kentucky will enter the tournament with three wins and two losses.

Cotton Nash is leading the Cats in nearly every department after five games, most widely in scoring with a 23.7 average. Next is Don Rolles with a 9.2 average, and Scotty Basler, 8.2.

Nash has hit a percentage of 41.8 from the field and has a leading rebounding average of 14.5.

Learning never stops for engineers at Western Electric

There's no place at Western Electric for engineers who feel that college diplomas signify the end of their education. However, if a man can meet our quality standards and feels that he is really just beginning to learn . . . and if he is ready to launch his career where learning is an important part of the job and where graduate-level training on and off the job is encouraged - we want and need him.

At Western Electric, in addition to the normal learning-while-doing, engineers are encouraged to move ahead in their fields by several types of educational programs. Western maintains its own full-time graduate engineering training program, seven formal management courses, and a tuition refund plan for out-of-hours college study.

This learning atmosphere is just one reason why a career at Western Electric is so stimulating. Of equal importance, however, is the nature of the work we do. Our new engineers are taking part in projects that implement the whole art of modern telephony, from high-speed sound transmission and solar cells to electronic telephone offices and computer-controlled production techniques.

Should you join us now, you will be coming to Western Electric at one of the best times in the company's history. In the management area alone, several thousand supervisory jobs are expected to open up to W.E. people within the next 10 years. And our work of building communications equipment and systems becomes increasingly challenging and important as the communications needs of our nation and the world continue to increase.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6206, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Christmas Around The World

Holidays Celebrated In Different Ways

By BOB BAUGH
Kernel Staff Writer

In the home, in the nation, and even on the campus, traditional observances spring up at Christmas time, enriching, warming, and inspiring all who participate. At UK, of course, there is the Hanging of the Greens, the program of the Choristers, the parties for underprivileged children, and others.

Around the world, Christmas has been the inspiration for an amazing variety of customs. For example:

In the Northlands of Canada the Eskimos have a unique Christmas custom. During the holiday season entire Eskimo communities set off and visit neighboring towns. The following year the visit is repaid and the visiting town becomes the host.

In Yugoslavia the Christmas celebration is centered around the yule log. Early Christmas morning, a young tree is felled and brought into the house. As it burns it is struck with an iron rod causing sparks to fly up the chimney.

Tradition has it that blessings as numerous as the sparks will fall on the family during the coming year.

In Holland and Belgium they celebrate Christmas on two different occasions. The first of these, celebrated Dec. 6, is the feast of Saint Nicholas which is the children's holiday when customs associated with our Christmas are observed.

On the night before Saint Nicholas day the children of these lands leave their wooden shoes filled with hay for the saint's white horse.

Dec. 25, the second occasion, is a religious holiday with services in the churches and quiet family gatherings at home, where Christmas cakes and other favors are served.

An important Christmas custom in Mexico is the breaking of the "pinata"—an earthenware jug filled with fruits, nuts, and candies. Blindfolded children armed with sticks try to break it open. When they succeed, all join in the scramble for the goodies that pour out.

In many parts of Mexico, where most of the people are Roman Catholics, homes are decorated with flowers and often have an altar erected with a representation of the nativity, in preparation for the Posadas. This means "resting place" and commemorates the journey Mary and Joseph took from Nazareth to Bethlehem.

The Posadas begins Dec. 16, and groups of nine families hold one each night before Christmas Eve, meeting in the different homes.

Carrying candles and following an image of Mary and Joseph they reenact the search for shelter, stopping at the door of each room pleading for entry. In the last room they are admitted and there sing their thanks.

Christmas in Brazil falls in mid-summer, during it the characteristics of a summer festival with flowers for decoration, fireworks, picnics, fiestas and boating excursions.

The religious phase is the same as it is in other Catholic countries, with a Presepio in homes and churches. Presepio, or miniature representation of the nativity, rather than the Christmas tree came to be the holiday symbol in Italian homes.

The midnight mass, with an out-of-door procession of the priests to the church, is a colorful part of their festival. Family suppers are served on Christmas eve. The people hold carnivals in the streets, and everywhere there is much gaiety.

In Greece special loaves of bread are baked for the Christmas celebration. Each loaf is marked with a cross on top and a silver coin concealed in each. According to custom, the person finding the coin is destined for a prosperous year.

Finland has a different custom. All members of Finnish families must take a steam bath before the festivities of Christmas can begin.

Santa Claus who is known under such aliases as Kris Kringle, La Befana, Yule Tomten, and Christkindle, takes on different forms abroad and visits at different times in certain countries.

In Spain he bears his traditional gifts Jan. 6, the feast of the Epiphany which celebrates the arrival of the three Wise Men. Spanish children fill their shoes with straw for the camels of the Wise Men and place them on the window sills.

In Germany Santa wears a big chain which he rattles at the door. Candy and cookies go to the good youngsters; the bad ones get empty potato sacks.
