STATE HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI GYM

Hazel Green, Inez, Ashland, and Blue Devils Win in First Round.

ASHLAND - PARIS TILT FEATURES AFTERNOON. Four of Sixteen Entrants Are Eliminated in First Session.

FINAL SCORES LAST NIGHT. Daviess 14, Central City 16. Overturns. Highlands 25, Sacramento 16. Opening the annual state high school basketball tournament yesterday afternoon in the Ashland gym, 16 teams, all of championship caliber, played their first-round games before a capacity crowd.

None of the teams was seeded to win the tourney and each quintet played the team that was picked out of the hat. Throughout the afternoon there was colorful and fast playing on the part of all 16 squads. During the Ashland-Paris game, the gym was in a continual uproar. The rivalry between these two teams was something spectacular, and it took the fans' sense of humor to touch the fans' sense of humor.

The Hazard men made their tournament debut against Tompkinsville and emerged victorious by a score of 21 to 14 in a closely fought game. This tilt was the slowest of the afternoon, both teams consistently missing easy shots. Although doped to lose by a wide margin, Hazard's play yesterday afternoon did not have the qualifications for such reputation.

The Ashland-Paris game seemed to be the feature of the afternoon. Paris opened the game with the first half team, during the first half both teams played their utmost skill, and at half-time the score was tied, 10 to 10.

A MATTER OF CHOICE

Saturday night was one of the best examples of a drinking orgy to be seen at the University of Kentucky for some time. It will illustrate the fact that leniency toward students does not pay at the University. Now that this attitude has been taken by students attending dances, undoubtedly more strict disciplinary measures will be taken by authorities.

Does it not behoove every student at the University of Kentucky to go to the social functions and behave himself as a gentleman, or else refrain from going to them at all? During this past year the dances have been unusually free from drinking and disturbances, and it seems to us that this is decidedly the wrong time to begin such practices.

As a matter of sound advice The Kernel is asking the students, if they must drink, for their own good and for the sake of the University to refrain from attending gatherings in such condition. However, if students do insist, then the student must accept the punishment which will be meted out alike to all offenders.

A NOVEL PLAN

An outstanding newspaper publisher, Frank E. Gannett, has formulated plans for a Federal Department of Peace for the definite promotion of international friendship. This movement, unique in its very essence, is creating widespread interest throughout the country.

Gannett, publisher of 17 newspapers that bear his name, declares that talk against war, disarmament conferences, preparedness for war and even international treaties have proved futile in ending war. He further states that there is need for not opposition to war, but definitely planned promotion of peace. Gannett believes that other nations would follow America's lead if we should set up a Department of Peace with a Cabinet officer at its head "on a par in authority and influence with other cabinet members."

The newspaperman's idea would embrace the development of an international peace conference entirely apart from other international bodies, but cooperating heartily with them. This body would be chiefly concerned, not with the prevention of war, but the bringing about of better international friendships.

The publisher is of the opinion that such a department and such an international conference could be helpful in settling economic controversies which have been so prolific a cause of war.

Gannett spoke Wednesday over a National Broadcasting company hook-up, using as his theme, "Fighting for Peace." In this address he declared his optimism concerning the proposed idea and said that America need not despair of peace. He stated that all wars are due to economic pressure, to ambition, or to carefully-fostered national hatreds and that the manner in which these difficulties could be settled would take the same form as the settlement of problems by our business men, a round table discussion of perplexities and suggestions as to their alleviation.

As a newspaperman, Gannett naturally believes in publicity and declares that advertising can accomplish anything. That this is true is not to be denied. Gannett suggests that all modes of advertising be utilized in promoting this unique proposal.

The very originality and farsighted aspects of this plan makes it excellent food for thought. Is not the idea seeking, in an intelligent manner, to do away with war? Doubtless peace is most important and should be preserved in this country at any cost. Any plan or idea that aids the promotion of peace should have the whole-hearted cooperation of every university student, the men and women who will be vitally concerned should another war be declared.

Gannett's proposal is fundamentally sound in principle and, if properly fostered, will doubtless gain great impetus in public opinion, one of the greatest motivating powers in human society today. Public opinion in this country for the complete abolition of war is gaining strength daily and such a plan as the one outlined will surely be a means to the desired end.

The Kernel believes that the publisher's plan is of great merit and is of vital interest and concern to every university student. It will doubtless create great interest among students of international relations and also deserves the careful attention of all broad-minded university men and women.

ALL QUIET WITH "FRITZ"

The shadow of a giant war God has fallen upon Europe. War in the east seems inevitable; war, with Germany as the aggressor, is extremely improbable. Yet European countries look upon the Vaterland as the embodiment of armed conflict, and regard war between her and one or more countries as imminent.

Public journals are continually citing the dangerous results likely to follow, should Germany decide to open hostilities. Yet Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations and disarmament conference has prompted the fear that she will strike in an endeavor to regain losses which she suffered during the World War.

There is widespread fear in Europe that Germany will attempt gradually to build up an invincible war machine, as she did prior to the great war. The fact that Germany is not allowed to be equal in ratio to other nations in the matter of war preparation is humiliating, and she is stung to passive fury by such a step. Is she only biding her time? Her Adolf Hitler and his fiery Nazi followers are in the mood to start trouble, and this desire is accentuated by the burning passion to recoup 1914-18 losses. Still, we contend that war for Germany is practically an impossibility.

Germany might attack her weaker neighbors, but such a step would not be considered after thoughtful meditation. Fear of the mighty western powers, Italy, France, England, and the United States lessens the danger of any invasion of that sort.

For the successful warring of a nation must have necessary equipment, and neutral support of other countries, as allies. Germany's fighting equipment is limited, and she has no friends or sympathizers. When she entered into warfare in 1914, she was prepared. Her army was the best drilled and equipped in the world. She had the support of Austro-Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey. She had the useful, benevolent neutrality of other nations. She had access to financial resources of the Jews, from whom she has since become estranged.

Germany is in desperate poverty; her army is large, but untrained; she is short of artillery, and without border forts; her navy is good but hopelessly small, and her aircraft service is inadequate; no nation will extend credit to her; allies have been lost, and friends alienated; she can look for nothing from Russia, Belgium, France, Italy, or America, all of which could reasonably be expected to squelch her first offensive thrust.

No, Germany will not start the next war. Hitler is much too intelligent to allow such a thing. She is in a sad plight now, but her present predicament is preferable to total extinction of Germany. Let her go her own way if she so chooses, for despite threats of the fierce Nazi, the once powerful Germany is paralyzed.

Jest Among Us

We certainly would like to enter the "Best-Dressed" contest but since we have neither spats nor derby, feel that it would be useless.

With the increasing popularity of chess and ping pong, even some of us fat-footed, flat-chested, hollow-eyed, would-be athletes can also become college heroes.

That trite little phrase, "Wotta man," which we regard as modern slang, is really a relic of ancient times, originating during the reign of King Solomon.

off the train at Georgetown instead of Lexington on her way back from a visit over the week-end in her home town? . . . .

We wonder what the "Brown girl" from Bardotown would have thought if she had seen Kappa Psi Harvey Mattingly with the lovely Miss Friday night at the fraternity dance! . . . .

The two big romances of the week are both in the Zeta chapter. . . . . Pikaq "Bo" McMillan pinned Carolyn Sparks; and Sigepp Louie Chippe pinned Mildred Perry about fifteen minutes before the automobile crash Sunday night. . . . . that might account for Louie's mind not being on his business! . . . .

Fidelity and embers of romance, although Kappa Scotty Hobart says that she and "Happy" Houlihan have "serious intentions," a large picture of S.A.E. Gene Bryant is still prominent on her dresser and she is often seen gazing intently at it with a most endearing expression. . . . . maybe she is trying to forget the past. . . . . and begin afresh! . . . .

Interesting—To observe Kappa Emily Watson and Chlo Martha Wood Nettlet calling up their men "Last night forget!" also to observe that Tridelt Ruth Hodges and Kappa plebette Grace Fiddler early in the morning at the Dorm breakfast hour or whenever they are in a special hurry.

We have heard that the whole Phi Tau chapter is "nerfs" about Phyllis Cassidy. . . . . but Claude Terrell seems to have won the smile of the young lady.

It seems that Phitau "Bob" Taylor has a secret passion. . . . . she is. . . . . shall we tell, Bob. . . . . it is Betty Sewell! . . . .

We wonder what "great big man" swiped Betty Boop, mascot of the Kappa Psi chapter. . . . . she is greatly missed at the house. . . . . especially by a "certain" alumnus. . . . . who thinks that some of his brothers are to blame. . . . .

What Kappa Psi stands in front of the long mirror in the living room of the house and says "I sure am a good-looking boy. . . . . ain't I?"

We were surprised to hear that Bob Malloney is "gone" on Zetatau Lucy Jean Anderson. . . . . to hear of all the romances we feel that there is only one solution. . . . . that of spring fever!

ENDURANCE
There are moments when the quickened heart will hold its more. This snow upon these trees that now are started by their own beauty soon will pass, stark limbs will stretch their dark, and shaken loveliness against a cold bright sky, the heart that opened for an instant there will close again, and there will be a lasting silence here, a hunger on these limbs: For beauty is no more enduring than the wind.

The above poem was written by Miss Gladys McLaughlin of the University of Vermont, and is reprinted from the current issue of "The Motter Board Quarterly."

SHOP SIGHTS

H. G. Wells has nothing on the YWCA Social committee just because of his "Outline of History." They are going to give an outline of the new feminine fashions. The downtown stores are cooperating with the committee and are going to allow the choice items of their stock to be modeled. The styles will run from morning wear through formal evening attire. The grand finale, BRIDES-TO-BE PLEASE NOTICE, will be the correct styles for a formal evening wedding. All girls and boys interested in the whims of Dame Fashion may learn what her most recent ones are, if they come to Pat hall Friday, March 23.

There are two places in Kentucky where one can get tucked kid shoes. One is in Louisville and the other is at Baynham's. It seems that just one woman makes this type of shoe. She has a $35,000 machine running 24 hours a day in an effort to supply the demand. As the name implies, the shoes are tucked as a dress would be. It requires twice the amount of kid ordinarily used in a shoe for this work. Quite a different shoe is the gray Tyles sport model of Man-drucra. It has interlacings of blue and a zipper which ends in a tiny flap. Then there is the pump of a material like a miniature tile walk and with a kid saddle.

Rough grain leather is the spring material for pocketbooks. The bags have many new frames and novelty clasps. Most of them have the zipper pocket inside. Meyer & Hinkle has a fascinating black bag called "The Gallant Lady." It is a two-in-one bag because it is really two bags fastened on a pivot of white celluloid. One is patent leather and the other is calf. Thus you can give your costume quite a different accent depending on which side you turn to the world. A black bag with the new dull gold clasps is made of Schiaparelli's calf. The calf gives the impression of fine tucking so it will match your tucked shoes.

Lamentations of
Freshman Girls

By VIRGINIA ROBINSON
If you're a freshman girl.... And you can't even enjoy the snow for fear you might fall down; you're practically always sure the seams in your stockings are crooked; you're a nervous wreck from worrying if your slip shows; you are utterly disillusioned because the cute boy you met at the last dance looks so funny in the daylight when his nose is red and drippy; you can't see why the heck people like to bore themselves for hours chewing straws in the Commons; you wish you could make yourself enjoy it, but you can't; you'd feel very uplifted if a library attendant would smile—just once; you are utterly depressed because everyone studies so hard in the library room with the lamps; you'd like to feel like studying, but you don't; you hate teas; you don't see why you came to college anyway; you wish you had a lot of swell clothes like other girls; you can't even remember what standing you promised to make this semester; you can't think of anything to write a feature story about; you don't want to write a feature story, anyway; you wish it would get warm; you're old—dull—stale; if you get positively scared to death when you see a cute new girl on the campus.... THEN... you might just as well be a sophomore!!!!

Much Money Made
Making Many Mops;
Modern Mops Made

By MIRIAM ROSEN
Witness the industry of one of our own college brethren! He has started a business of his own, acting as his own manager, salesman, and overseer. Furthermore, he has a miniature factory, where he makes (of all things) mops!
Lloyd Langston, freshman in the College of Commerce, hailing from North Carolina, started this enterprise last fall and has sold more than 15,000 mops, entirely paying his way through college. Helping him are Arnold Siler, freshman, and Joe Weller, junior.
The mops are being sold all over Lexington — at the University, to wholesale groceries, the Glass stores, hotels, even some to the State Purchasing Commission — mops of all kinds, mop heads, for roofing, household mops.
The miniature factory is located on Euclid avenue. The equipment consists of only one machine that will turn out two mops a minute! So thriving has the business become that Langston plans to expand this summer. A new machine will be purchased and broom-making will be added. The machine will cost about $300 and will be purchased from money made by the business.

Avenues of Fashion
by Esquire

Powell Croesley, Jr., the young Ohio millionaire who just bought the Cincinnati Reds was a star pitcher in the years when he was first studying engineering and law at Cincinnati University. The Croesley who turned into the big antenna and dist man is also a collector of rare antiques—he bought the Reds and Dazzy Vance on successive days.

Talking about Reds, Red seems to have sneaked up on us in formal wear. Waistcoats for wear with dinner jackets have gone colorful on us with little or no warning. These are favored mostly in a not too conspicuous shade. They are also to be seen in a chalk blue, deep green, and yellow. They follow closely the popular fashion of wearing a dark red carnation with formal dusters, in itself a rather startling innovation. Ruby colored studs, an accepted, but not too frequently seen touch of color will no doubt find wider acceptance, as the appropriate type of jewelry worn with a wine waistcoat.

No less a social function than the annual aristocratic New York Horse Show seems to be the birthplace of this fashion which is authority enough even for sticklers for authenticity of fashion. Possibly the sponsors gathered the idea from those Oxford "Dons" who wear club colored "weskies" at their formal University dinners. While on the subject of evening wear—the smart "tails" turnout is completed by the two-stud shirt in fine pique weaves.

The return of "fleece" London to the grunt and grapple industry drew a crowd of almost 30,000 to the Garden the other day. P. M. Fratching Hinds, in his pre-midnight, an embryo sports scribe cracked, "He smells like a bird-cage but he can't sing..." and then we all went out and had a drink.

A wee drop o'Scotch is invigorating outside as well as inside. So the country squire and the campus fashion plate choose Harris tweed or similar rough Shetland fabrics with definite patterns for their Balmuccia top coats. The military type collar and raglan sleeves together with the full, loose sweep of the skirt, have a bit of "to-hell-with-you, Sir" swagger touch.

Camel's hair goes "horse" and the polo coat still gallops through chafed from money made by the business. Suggestions have been made that this be made into a student industry, giving part-time employment to several University students. So, let's wish success to Blue Grass mops (for so they are called) and to a student who deserves it!

Seventeen etchings by well known contemporary artists have been presented to the University of Nebraska department of fine arts by a prominent graduate of the institution.

A new system of debating at Georgia Tech, that of open forum discussion, has been inaugurated, resulting in debating and increased attendance at debates.

State High School
Tournament Opens

markers, Spicer and Tice led the Blue and Gold attack with 13 and 11 points respectively.

After a brief interlude of one hour, Horse Cave opened the night session of the tourney by defeating duPont Manual of Louisville, by the overwhelming score of 33 to 14.

This victory, being totally unexpected, came very much as a surprise. Manual started off with a burst of speed, but was soon toned down by its opponents as they became warmed up.

At the half, the score stood 10 to 8 in favor of Horse Cave, and by the end of the third quarter Manual was on the small end of the 23 to 9 score. This afternoon Hazel Green will stack up against Inez, and Hazard will play Ashland in the second round of games. Tonight Lexington will oppose Horse Cave, while the winner of the Danville-Central City game will play the winner of the Highland-Sacramento fracas.

Saturday afternoon the semi-finals will be played, and Saturday and Saturday night the final game of the tourney will be played. Manual will be broadcast from 3 to 4 o'clock over WHAS Saturday afternoon along with a resume of the other semi-final game. Saturday night the high spots of the final game probably will be broadcast over the same station. Coach Adolph Rupp and Wesley Carter will do the announcing.

PAUL NICKELL GIVES SOME POINTS ON STYLE

BEST DRESSED CONTEST

The most popular trend that I see at U. of K. this Spring is the tendency toward rough fabrics in sport suits. At The Tavern, on the campus, in the frat houses, you'll see these suits in Bellows Back models, as well as the new Norfolk Jacket model. Men on the campus are going for these styles in a big way. The coats, worn separately with flannel trousers, look well... either plain flannels or trousers in checks or plaids. The suits range from $22.50 up at Graves - Cox.

The new Arrow Shirts for Spring are mostly patterned with stripes well out in front. The new round pointed collar, worn pinned, seems to be replacing the tab collar in popularity. Lots of U. K. men have been selecting two-toned sport shoes to wear with the new sport suits... As for hats, the narrow snap brim hat is still the winner.
