Forums begin to review student affairs

By LINDA HENDRICKS
Senior Staff Writer

Students will have the opportunity to voice their opinions on the student affairs department during open meetings beginning tomorrow.

The forums are part of the administration's review of the division of student affairs.

"We need the student input and want to hold positive and constructive forums," said Michael Brooks, committee chairman and an associate professor of sociology. "We're not going to solve individual problems at these forums but discuss the kinds of problems students have had and what caused them."

The first forum will be at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in 308 Complex Commons. Another will follow at 1 p.m. Dec. 10 in 228 New Student Center.

The committee hopes the forums will discern student feelings and offer some insightful information, Brooks said.

"We're trying to find constructive input to make things better," he said. "We're looking for the solutions."

The goal of the forum is not just to air students' complaints, but their praise as well.

"The other side of the coin is if something good has happened to a student, we want to hear about that, too," Brooks said.

After the forums, the committee will consider the students' opinions and ideas and submit a report to Art Gallaher, chancellor for the Lexington campus, on Dec. 15.

For the last several weeks, the eight-member committee has met to examine the division.

Both Brooks and Gallaher said rumors have circulated indicating this isn't a normal review, but instead was prompted by the planned retirement of Robert Zumwinkle, who has headed the student affairs department for 16 years.

"The first thing to keep in mind is that this is a normal review that is done every four years," Gallaher said. "We review service units such as the student affairs division every four years, and even if Dr. Zumwinkle wasn't retiring we still would review it."

"This is just a standard review that happens whenever a major administrator leaves his office," Brooks said. "It will tell what changes might be in order. No division that big is problem free."

The student affairs division covers diverse areas such as financial aid, residence hall life, the Career Planning and Placement Center, intercollegiate debate, student billings and student publications.

The group recently appointed Jody Hanks as the new student member of the committee.

Speaker to discuss link of cartoons, child porn

By LISSA ATKINS
Staff Writer

Traditionally considered a humorous form of written expression, cartoons will be analyzed for their role in child pornography during a discussion session Thursday.

Judith Reisman will present "Pornography and Violence in the Media" at 8 p.m. in Seay Auditorium, Agricultural Science Center North.

The Student Activities Board, Feminist Alliance and the College of Library and Information Science (Graduate School) are sponsoring the presentation.

"It's a let's look at what's going on in a research way," said Lucinda Hill, a member of Feminist Alliance. "How do children appear over the years?"

Reisman, a professor at American University in Washington, D.C., will show a presentation on how children are represented in Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler from 1953 to 1985.

"It's 30 years of cartoons, not two hours of hard-core porno," Hill said, who saw the presentation this summer at a National Coalition Against Sexual Assault seminar. "It's very tastefully done."

The presentation is based on a two-year $734,000 research project Reisman recently completed for the U.S. Department of Justice. She has just received permission to release some of her findings.

The project, titled "The Role of Pornography and Media Violence in Family Violence, Sexual Abuse and Exploitation and Juvenile Delinquency," focuses on the most popular literature of a growing $7 billion industry, said Tina Payne, SAAB contemporary affairs chairwoman.

Reisman, who received her doctorate in communications from Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, will discuss how cartoons have an immediate and lasting effect on the reader.

"But she's not suggesting child pornography," Hill said. "It's a matter of people becoming aware."

"People need to be informed about it, be talking about it," she said.

"Our purpose is one of creating a situation where people can learn more about the issues and make better decisions."

Agency places film drop point in Student Center

By WENDY SUSAN SMITH

Photo processing now is as convenient as a drop in a box at the Student Center.

Student Agencies Inc. has provided a film developing service since 1983. But a couple of weeks ago, it decided to make things more convenient by placing a drop-off box in the upstairs main lobby of the Student Center, across from the information desk.

"We just wanted to make things more convenient . . ."

"We just wanted to make things more convenient for people to drop off their film since our office is only open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.," said Jane Tracey, manager of photo processing at Student Agencies.

Tracey said the station also will be convenient for people who are eating at the Student Center or who do not frequently go downstairs to where the Student Agencies office is located.

"I think it is a big advantage to have somewhere on campus to be able to drop off your film," said Lori Maslow, treasurer of Student Agencies.

"Not everyone owns a car, and mailing can be expensive."

"The convenience of the drop-off box will most likely increase our business," she said.

Tracey said business has been picking up rapidly in the two weeks since the drop-off box's installment.

"We are even trying for next semester or next year to locate drop-off boxes in the Commons and the residence halls," she said.

A month ago Student Agencies switched film developing companies from Thomas-Huston Inc. to Color Craft, Tracey said.

"Now we can offer our customers better prices," she said. "Also, the more business we do, the better prices we will be able to offer."

Customers are charged a developing fee plus a cost for each picture that turns out. They pay when they pick up their photos.

A one-day photo processing service also is available if the film is dropped off before noon.

although exceptions are made for parents and friends, Ketch said.

Lafayette Club members are invited for lunch at 11:45 a.m. The fashion show follows at 12:30 both days and lasts about an hour.

Retailers supplying merchandise include: Panache, Especially For You, Cat's Patch, Stewart's, Embury's, Behind Closed Doors, Playmates, George's Shoes, Ginkgo Formal Wear, Henri's and Hugg 'n' Eye.

Israeli premier says apology lifts threat from U.S. relations

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said yesterday that his government's apology to Washington ended the threat to relations caused by the arrest of a U.S. Navy analyst accused of spying for Israel.

Peres told a closed meeting with visiting American Jewish leaders that he coordinated the apology in advance with Secretary of State George P. Shultz during a lengthy telephone conversation Sunday morning, Israeli officials said.

They said the prime minister reported that he and Shultz "reached complete agreement and understanding" about the case of Jonathan J. Pollard, 31, a civilian U.S. Navy counter-intelligence expert arrested Nov. 21 and charged with selling secret documents to Israel.

Pollard's wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, 25, was arrested the day after he was, accused of unauthorized possession of national defense documents.

"The matter was entirely cleared up," Peres was quoted as saying by Richard Cohen, a spokesman for the 80-member Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, which is on a fact-finding tour of Israel.

Uri Savir, spokesman for Peres, quoted the prime minister as telling the breakfast meeting that "in the last 24 hours we have clarified many misunderstandings between us."

Cohen said Peres called the espionage case "a test of the strength of relations with the United States which we have passed."

Peres told reporters after the meeting that the Pollard case was an isolated incident of "limited and passing importance" to U.S.-Israel relations.

Israel radio said the government may let U.S. Justice Department officials question three Israelis suspected of involvement, including Ra-

"I think that if you make a mistake the best way to handle it is to have the courage to admit it and apologize."

Shimon Peres, Israeli prime minister fael Eytan, who has been identified in U.S. news reports as chief of a clandestine intelligence unit that employed Pollard.

Eytan is a former anti-terrorism adviser to two prime ministers and served as operations director of the Mossad, Israel's intelligence service.

Sources identified the other two men as Yosef Yagur and Ilan Havid, Israeli science attaches stationed in the United States who have been called home.

Israel's statement of apology pledged that the secret intelligence unit would be disbanded and disciplinary action taken against those responsible for the Pollard affair. It made punishment conditional on a finding of wrongdoing by an Israeli investigation now under way.

Peres told reporters yesterday: "I think that if you make a mistake the best way to handle it is to have the courage to admit it and apologize."

Most of the American Jewish leaders said they did not foresee serious long-term damage to relations.

Israeli news media said most of the information supplied by Pollard concerned Arab and other countries without ties to Israel. The English-language Jerusalem Post said such information should have been made available to Israel through regular channels.

New student group goes public on PR

Majorless students to get career advice, professional experience in organization

By WENDY SUSAN SMITH
Staff Writer

Students who are interested in the field of public relations but are discouraged because UK does not offer it as a major shouldn't despair.

A chapter of the Public Relations Student Society of America has recently been organized by students interested in pursuing a career in PR.

PRSSA, a student chapter of the national Public Relations Society of America, is designed to introduce students interested in a PR career to what is available in the job market. The organization also attempts to give students an opportunity to gain work experience in the field.

"Students will be able to share ideas and interact with each other as well as link up with professionals in the community," said Beverly Davenport Sypher, a communications assistant professor and faculty adviser to PRSSA.

"So many people at UK are interested in majoring in public relations, but we don't have such a major," said Tish Crockett, president of the new chapter.

"If we start this group rolling, then it may just help us toward getting a public relations major at UK," she said.

Sypher said although there is a PR sequence for communications majors, PRSSA will give these students more visibility.

"It is more like a legitimate area, a recognized group that they can join," she said.

Home Ec students stage 'Festive Affair' of holiday fashions

By KIMBERLY SISK
Staff Writer

How to be stylish during the holiday season will be the focus for a fashion show coordinated by UK fashion merchandising students.

"A Festive Affair" will be presented at the Lafayette Club today and tomorrow.

The Lafayette Club has sponsored the fashion show for the last nine se-esters, said Karen Ketch, associate professor of business in the College of Home Economics.

Ketch's human environment and textile class is involved in the project, which began as a one-day event but expanded to two days.

The fashion show features local retailers' merchandise, Ketch said. Selections of businesses and apparel are made on the basis of the theme students choose.

Keeping with this semester's festive theme, the show will feature day and evening wear for men, women and children, she said.

Students in the fashion merchandising class coordinated the fashion show as a major part of their semester grade, said Patty Willinger, a home economics senior and publications chairman for the fashion show.

Students are responsible for most of the modeling and the commentary, she said.

The show provides retailers with publicity and provides students with experience, Willinger said.

"The class has a lot to do with advertising and special events and a fashion show is a special event," she said. "It lets you see if you want to do this type of thing."

"The fashion show is not just an exercise with professional models," Ketch said. "The students have to put it together. They usually end up selling a lot of stuff."

The show is not open to the public

Corporate officials charged

Indictment claims Defense overruns

WASHINGTON (AP) — James M. Beggs, the administrator of NASA, was indicted yesterday with three other current or former executives of General Dynamics Corp. on charges involving attempts to hide overrun losses on the Army's ill-fated Sgt. York anti-aircraft gun, the Justice Department said.

General Dynamics and the four men were charged with conspiring to reduce the firm's losses on their Army contract to build the prototype gun systems by illegally mischarging contract expenses to other government-funded accounts.

The seven-count indictment was returned in federal court in Los Angeles.

The individuals and the corporation were charged with one count each of conspiring to defraud the Department of Defense between January 1, 1976, and Aug. 31, 1981, in its function of administering and paying its contractors. They also were charged with six counts of making false statements.

A government source said $7.5 million was mischarged, resulting in a $3.2 million net loss to the government.

Beggs became head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on July 10, 1981, after leaving a post as corporate executive vice president of General Dynamics.

According to the indictment, the company officials fraudulently charged several million dollars worth of expenses on the contract as "bid and proposal" and independent research and development expenses.

They did this, the indictment said, to reduce multi-million-dollar losses on the firm's $40 million Army contract for the production of the Sgt. York prototype systems.

Contractors are reimbursed by the Department of Defense for those two types of expenses, but they are not permitted to use the funds for work required by an existing contract.

The Sgt. York was a gun mounted on a tank and was designed to protect tanks and infantry against enemy aircraft and helicopters.

Students, along with members of Lexington's professional Throughbred chapter of PRSA, approached Sypher and Jan Quarles, an assistant professor of journalism, who agreed to co-sponsor the organization.

"For the past several years, I have been director of the internship programs in the communications department and I have seen many students interested in the field of public relations," Sypher said.

"So based on the student interest and the fact that several other universities in the state have PRSSA chapters, we decided to start a chapter here," she said.

So far PRSSA has held several organized meetings and has set its goals for this year.

"Our immediate goal is to get all the students on campus interested in public relations involved in this organization," Sypher said. Barbara Jane Ownby, vice president of the chapter, said, "One of our primary goals is to be approved by the national organization as the UK PRSSA organization, then we plan to work with the local PRSA chapter."

PRSSA also plans to schedule several guest speakers next semester as well as take on a few PR projects on campus, she said.

Ownby said because the club is a joint effort of the journalism and communications departments, it will give students insight into the skills necessary to be a PR practitioner. "I feel that since the organization has members from several different majors, they can exchange ideas and learn more about each specific field," she said.

Sypher said membership in PRSSA has increased continuously since its start, and several people have expressed interest in joining the group.

The group will meet at 5 p.m. today in 228 Student Center Addition.

Selection of jury begins for state treasurer trial

By MARK R. CHELLGREN
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Jury selection began yesterday in the trial of state Treasurer Frances Jones Mills, and questioning of prospective panel members by the attorneys gave a hint of their trial strategies.

The process of selecting the 14-member panel is likely to be a lengthy one because Franklin Circuit Judge William Graham has agreed to the unusual step of individual questioning of prospective jurors. Such a process is usually reserved for juries in cases involving the death penalty.

The selection also was delayed when Graham indicated that he wanted to conduct the questioning in private, or put restraints on reporters covering the trial. That plan was dropped after an argument by an attorney representing The Associated Press and the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Six of the original 30 members in the jury pool were excused by Graham before individual questioning began because of various conflicts or their relationships with participants or witnesses.

Assistant Attorney General Thomas Wine asked potential jurors about their own political activities and whether they felt any pressure because an elected official was involved. Graham said any juror who was embarrassed by a question could answer in private. The situation arose with the first juror to be questioned when he was asked if he felt any undue pressure because Mills was involved.

Mills is charged with 10 felony counts of theft by deception and 15 misdemeanors for allegedly ordering employees to perform campaign or personal tasks while on state time. The incidents allegedly took place in 1983 while Mills was secretary of state and running for treasurer.

The employees are charged with performing the work and charging the state or ordering others to do so. All have pleaded innocent.

Julius Rafter, who represents Mills and another defendant Constantine Quintavalle, repeatedly asked jurors about Mills and the other Democrats who ran together in 1983 for state offices.

Part of Rafter's defense will be that the crimes charged against Mills are common practice in Frankfort political circles and that she was singled out for prosecution by Attorney General David Armstrong because of his own political ambitions.

Lady Kats soar past Eagles in late surge

By JASON WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

The Lady Kat basketball team survived a major scare last night in Memorial Coliseum, holding off Morehead State 73-58. In the process, the Kats learned they can't rely on reputation alone to win.

"We were a little tired," said UK coach Terry Hall, who picked up her 20th career win and her fourth this season without a loss. "This was our first game in four days. And Morehead played great."

So great that they led 24-12 with seven minutes left in the first half. Morehead's Janice Towlles and Kelly Stampler were filling it up from the outside while Sophia Renfro and Stephanie Bates passed the ball into center Melissa Iretion with ease.

On the other end, UK was often unable to get off a shot against the Lady Eagles' unusual zone.

"It's a zone-type of defense where our two inside people play man-to-man and the three up front play more or less a zone," said Morehead coach Lorella Marlow, whose team is 1-2 this season. "We go with it, and sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. It worked pretty good most of tonight."

And tired or not, the Kats appeared to be less interested in winning the game than the Eagles for most of the first half.

"I feel they overlooked us a little," Bates said. "The problem is, in the back of our minds we didn't think we could win."

That first became apparent when UK went to a half-court trap after falling so far behind. Morehead coughed up the ball against the pressure and allowed point guard Sandy

Auburn game rescheduled

Staff reports

UK's Jan. 2 basketball game with Auburn has been moved to Jan. 6, athletics director Cliff Hagan announced.

Hagan said the game was rescheduled to accommodate fans after Auburn received a bid to the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

The game is set for 8:30 p.m. in Auburn's Memorial Coliseum.

Hagan also said a limited number of tickets to the Cincinnati game tonight and the UK Invitational Tournament Dec. 20 and 21 are still available.

Cincinnati tickets are $5 each, and UKIT tickets, which include admission to both sessions of the tournament, are $10 each.

Tickets are available at the Memorial Coliseum ticket office from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

After three breathers, Sutton not overlooking a deep Cincinnati team

By JIM WHITE
Staff Writer

The UK basketball team may have begun its regular season with three impressive wins over Northwestern, Chamaine and Hawaii, but that doesn't mean the Wildcats will have an easy game tonight against Cincinnati.

The Wildcats won the last meeting between the two schools 66-55 in the UK Invitational Tournament last year, but Cincinnati returns four of five starters from last year.

"They are a very good basketball team," UK coach Eddie Sutton said. "They have great athletes and played UK a very tough ballgame last year."

The Bearcats, who enter the 7:35 p.m. game at 1-1, opened their season with a 51-47 win over South Florida but lost their second game to Western Kentucky.

Like Sutton, UC coach Tony Yates is looking for another tough game against the Wildcats and is preparing for a different team than he coached against last year.

"Sutton has brought a whole new look to UK," Yates said. "Their style of play has changed. They are more of an up-tempo team, getting up the court. But when they get the half-court line, they tend to be a little more patient than previous UK teams."

Cincinnati is a team with good depth even though it has a lack of standout players, Sutton said.

"They are playing about eight people right now and that's all you need if you've got the right eight," he said. "Any one of their players can hit you for double figures so I think they are pretty well balanced."

The UC team is certainly well balanced in height. Brian Helm, a 6-9 senior, and Cedric Glover, a 6-8 sophomore, give the Bearcats good depth at center.

The forwards, Kenneth Henry (6-6) and Myron Hughes (6-7), were both starters last year. Hughes, however, has missed the last two days of practice because of a stomach virus and may not play tonight, Yates said.

Roger McClendon, a 6-4 sophomore guard, started last season for UC as a freshman. He is expected to be strong again this year and now leads the team in overall scoring with a 17.3 average.

"I think the key to the ball game against UK will be the defensive board game," Sutton said. "They are such a good group of athletes that even if they are having a bad shooting night, they can still go and get the ball and put it back in the basket on you."

Sutton said he believes that just having UK as an opponent tends to make teams play harder than they usually do.

"Like most teams that play the University of Kentucky, they will be on an emotional high," he said. "One victory over the Wildcats is probably worth two over most teams."

Once again the Wildcats will get a big boost from the home-court advantage, as seen in past games with UC. At Rupp Arena Kentucky leads the series with the Bearcats 16-2.

"I think that any time you play at home you have a definite advantage, especially when you play in an arena like we have," Sutton said. "In basketball, more than any other team sport I know of, you have a definite home-court advantage."

Sutton said the Wildcats are taking their season a game at a time and not overestimating themselves after the two big wins in Hawaii.

"I think we are confident, but not overconfident," he said. "The team takes the attitude that you respect everyone you play but don't fear anyone you play."

Students still have chance to tell SGA opinion on fee hike

Two weeks ago the Kentucky Kernel predicted that if the Student Government Association forums on the student fee increase became dominated by student politicians, the meetings would be not only short but boring.

The first two hearings may not have been all that short, but they have been boring — or at least not as interesting as they could have been.

And the fault lies in all the students who didn't take the time to make an appearance, not in the SGA and Student Activities Board representatives who were on hand to make their case.

Tomorrow afternoon students have one last chance to make their voices heard on an issue that directly affects their pocketbooks. The last hearing will be at 3:30 p.m. in 115 Student Center and will discuss student organization funding and how it will fit into the proposed increase.

Of course, maybe all the students know everything about the fee increase and are fully satisfied with SGA's plans to spend the extra $20 a year from each full-time student. The organization has its survey, in which 63 percent of the students said they favored the increase and 32 percent opposed it.

That means there must be at least a couple of students out there who don't want to pay that extra money every semester. Where are they? Don't they care enough to take advantage of the public debate SGA offers them? For that matter, where are the more than couple of students who wanted the increase? It would be much more interesting to hear what they have to say.

The SGA has done its part and provided the chance for public discussion of this issue; it's up to students to go and make the meeting worth going to.

SGA backs CHE plan

The Student Government Association will be lobbying in the upcoming session of the General Assembly for adoption of the Council on Higher Education's strategic plan. This plan advocates better education for your money, advanced equipment for research and a first-rate faculty with salaries competitive with other leading institutions.

As members of UK, you know the importance of higher education. Student government would like to encourage all students to join with us in writing your state representatives or senators and asking them to support CHE's plan.

Also, we would like to invite all students to a reception to meet the administrators of UK as well as the administrators of the Council on Higher Education. Their support is greatly appreciated. The reception will be at 7 p.m. Dec. 5 in the President's Room in the Student Center.

We encourage everyone to attend this reception in support of our campaign for higher education.

Donna Greenwell,
SGA executive vice president

Library door drive

As you all know the Student Government Association is currently in the midst of a fund-raising campaign. This campaign is to raise money to buy electric doors for M.I. King Library. These doors will allow UK's handicapped students to have easier access to the library. Also these doors would allow people who are loaded with books to enter the library with less difficulty.

So far, we have received contributions from these organizations: Alpha Delta Pi sorority, $200; Kappa Delta sorority, $100; and Panhellenic Council, $100. Their support is greatly appreciated. We encourage other organizations to contribute to this worthy cause. So far this effort has been very successful and we would like to see the momentum continue.

TV special selects aspects of state to give skewed image of life in Kentucky

This was the first Thanksgiving that my family sort of split up and had separate Thanksgiving meals here in Kentucky.

My immediate family gathered at my mother's little ranch (honey, it's not a ranch; it's not even a full acre) house in Frankfort and sat down to a typical Thanksgiving repast with friends who'd come down from Chicago.

It was a casual occasion: We didn't even change into dresses or whatever one is supposed to wear to impress one's immediate family. So that was our best Kentucky Thanksgiving, with some friends from another state entirely and not much pomp.

But this is not the picture of "Kentucky" that the rest of the nation will receive from a docu-special that is currently running on Super Station WTBS. "Portrait of a Nation—Kentucky" focuses on the "Kentucky Family Tradition," which from all appearances on the special is the singular tradition of handing down prosperity from generation to generation and raising horses.

Kakkie URCH

This makes for great cinematography, but it ain't the Kentucky I know and love.

Kentucky is a bunch of ranch homes and walk-up apartments strategically arranged around some horse farms.

And though the horse farms may be bigger, more Kentuckians live in ranch homes and $300-a-month apartments than in the "Main House" or the "Guest Cottage" (which always seems to be bigger than my mother's home).

Kentucky is a bunch of kids trying to learn to read despite the educational system's problems and hanging around record stores and malls.

Kentucky is a bunch of artists here in Lexington, in Berea and other areas of the state who produce nationally acclaimed works in visual and literary and musical media.

Kentucky is a pride you feel when watching the NCAA semifinal against Illinois two years ago.

Kentucky is a lot of people here in Lexington who don't keep up their family tradition... having left their families in other counties.

Kentucky is the families back in those counties trying to assimilate the modernity that their children and their children's television force upon them.

Kentucky has some of the best interstate and state highways in the country and is the home of the artificial heart.

Kentucky is a bunch of rock bands that sit here and play the real thing for half the club's entrance gate and free beer while imitators like Beat Rodeo and the Beat Farmers get recording contracts for their "country-punk."

Kentucky is a lot of beauty pagans and a slew of cheerleaders.

It's some cities like Louisville and Lexington that barely appear in "Portrait of a Nation—Kentucky."

And it's the fact that with an average population age of 27, Lexington is one of the "youthfullest" cities in the nation.

Kentucky is farmers who, yeah, have families, and traditions, but were silly enough to go into growing solid tobacco instead of risky horses and now watch the bottom fall out of their formerly supported market.

Anyone tuned in to WTBS for this portrait of Kentucky gets some beautifully photographed, touching, but air-brushed glimpses of the state. Because although the "docu-special" features the Taylors of Gainesway and Taylor-Made Farms, and the Samuels of Maker's Mark, and the Ritchies who left the Kentucky hills, the majority of Kentuckians are people who still live here and hope that the $2 to win will pay off enough to buy a bottle of Mark.

New Bible needed for Reagan's U.S.A.

Heavens, I've never seen anything so sleek, so beautiful, so awe-inspiring — yet there are those who deny the existence of an all-powerful deity.

— the Rev. Josiah Q. Roentgen, after viewing the MX missile, dubbed "Peacekeeper" by President Reagan

I read in the Nov. 7 Kentucky Kernel an Associated Press story that pointed out that $800 billion will be spent worldwide on arms this year.

Of that amount, the report continues, "the United States and the Soviet Union, with 11 percent of the population, account for more than half the spending."

The release went on, sadly, to bemoan the fact that nations of the world spend so much money on weapons and so little money on health, education and welfare. I could only think, My God! Here we go again, the liberal press bringing the Commies just that much closer to world domination. Jeez! As if Dan Rather weren't enough!

You see I, for one, approve of a strong defense, even if we have to starve a few people to get there. The trouble is we've got a liberal media constantly reminding people of something everyone's known for years: People are starving and we're spending money on arms.

What's the big deal? Christ said the poor would always be with us, so I figure why not hasten their way to heaven, especially if the outcome is a safer world?

As you can see, I've thought about this liberal conspiracy for a long time now, and I've figured out its source, too. It all goes back to a misreading of the Bible, particularly the prophets and certain of the Gospels.

So I've decided it's time we (myself and the State Department) came out with a new, state-authored Bible, called, tentatively, The Wall Street Version, with a commentary on Revelation by Caspar Weinberger. I'd like this Bible to be backed by McDonnell Douglas, Lockheed, General Electric, etc. And the profits from this venture, should it succeed, would go to McDonnell Douglas, Lockheed, General Electric, etc.

But now down to specifics. Although I'm no Bible scholar, it seems to me that people get these strange, pinko-pacifistic notions about peace and social justice from certain of the prophetic books and certain parts of the New Testament, of the latter particularly that odious and passe section of the First Gospel called the Sermon on the Mount.

That — the Sermon on the Mount — is pinko through and through! Do you know that at one point it even suggests that you give all your riches to someone less fortunate than yourself? Try making that into a general proposition and what kind of world would we have? Just ask John Rambo, friend. He'll tell you.

And speaking of Rambo, what about all that crapola in Matthew about the peacemakers being blessed? More pinko-pacifistic trash from the Mount. If someone socks me in the jaw, you think I'm going to offer him the other one? Hell no! I'll redo his face with a Louisville slugger because the Bible (the Old Testament, at least) says "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" period. That's enough for me!

However, I'm digressing. Back to the Wall Street Version of the Bible: My new edition will do away with any pinko allusions in the prophetic books to peace and social justice. Utopian sentiments in the hard reality of a competitive market we don't need. It just encourages soft-heartedness and soft-headedness.

Naturally, too, I'd do away with the Sermon on the Mount, and no great loss there, either. It's all sappy, pinko garbage. Nuclear deterrence, for example, is premised on the law of talion, not that "and the meek shall inherit the earth"

I'd rewrite the Golden Rule, too. My version of it would be more in tune with today's economic landscape: Love thyself above all else. Thy neighbor? He can go to hell.

Plus the added advantage that the man pushing this book — Pat Robertson — may be running for president in 1988. Granted, with billions of dollars going into arms every year, the sale from the Wall Street Version of the Bible will only represent an ant hill. But as I see it, it's one small step for arms profiteers, one large step for Christ-inanity.

Start taking the Sermon on the Mount seriously, and we'll need more Rambo and Chuck Norris than Hollywood can produce to keep the Reds out.

Anything that even smacks of soft heart/headedness would also go. And I'd rewrite the Golden Rule, too. My version of it would be more in tune with today's economic landscape: Love thyself above all else. Thy neighbor? He can go to hell.

Like it? I thought of it myself while watching "The Tac Dough" on Christian Broadcasting Network one night. Oh yeah, speaking of CBN, I'm hoping I can talk Pat Robertson into pushing the Wall Street Version of the Bible on his show, "The 700 Club." Can you imagine that? Why, The Book is already going like Cabbage Patch Dolls — it's a multimedia event!

Plus the added advantage that the man pushing this book — Pat Robertson — may be running for president in 1988. Granted, with billions of dollars going into arms every year, the sale from the Wall Street Version of the Bible will only represent an ant hill. But as I see it, it's one small step for arms profiteers, one large step for Christ-inanity.

Less fatalities this Thanksgiving weekend

FRANKFORT — State police can't pinpoint why there were half as many traffic fatalities during the 1985 Thanksgiving weekend as there were in 1984, but they hope the trend continues throughout the month.

Capt. John Lyle, the agency's chief public information officer, said yesterday that he would like to think promotions urging use of seat belts and the dangers of drinking and driving contributed to the decrease.

Six people died as the result of accidents on Kentucky's highways in the period from 6 p.m. Wednesday through midnight Sunday, compared to 12 in the corresponding period of last year, state police said.

Thief swipes students' homework

CINCINNATI — Two college students say a thief swiped their research projects and term papers and they are wondering whether their professors will accept the excuse.

"I don't know what to do," Tahani Nabi, a student at Northern Kentucky University, said after the weekend theft. "I'll have to tell all my professors, but I can just imagine what they'll think."

Nabi and her companion, Mark Shareef Abdoushi, a University of Cincinnati student, were at a coffee house taking a break from studies Saturday night when a thief smashed the rear window of Abdoushi's car and stole the students' book bags. Inside were their research work, term papers and class notes, worthless to anyone except them.

"Both of us had all our work in there," Nabi said. "That was a semester's worth of work for me and a quarter's worth of work for him."

Lung cancer declining among white males

WASHINGTON — Deadly lung cancer is finally declining among white American men after worsening for more than half a century, the National Cancer Institute reported yesterday, crediting the good news to millions of smokers giving up cigarettes.

However, officials said the generally fatal disease is still increasing among women — with females' lung cancer deaths expected to exceed those from breast cancer this year — and is continuing at a high level among black men.

The institute also reported the five-year survival rate for American victims of all cancers has leveled off at just under 50 percent after rising slightly in recent years.

Midwest digs out after snowstorm

Much of the upper Midwest was paralyzed yesterday by snow that drifted up to 6 feet high, clogging highways, stranding hundreds of travelers, and closing schools and universities. A new Pacific storm, meanwhile, slipped the Northwest with wind and wet snow.

"Does outer Siberia ring a bell?" asked Marty Jenel, director of a community center turned into a shelter at Sycamore in northwestern Illinois.

"It's been the earliest storm in December we've had in years," said Mary Faulber, a National Weather Service forecaster at the Marquette County Airport in Michigan.

The storm was blamed for at least 14 deaths in the upper Midwest.

Philippine leader reinstates army chief

Assassinated foe's widow expected to oppose Marcos in presidential election

By RUBEN G. ALABASTRO Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — President Ferdinand E. Marcos reinstated Fabian C. Ver as armed forces chief yesterday, hours after a court acquitted the general, 24 other soldiers and a civilian of assassinating opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

In their 90-page decision, the three civilian judges accepted a version Marcos gave a day after Aquino was killed Aug. 21, 1983, while stepping off a commercial airliner that brought him home from voluntary exile in the United States — that the assassin was Rolando Galman.

Galman, a purported communist, was killed by soldiers immediately after Aquino was shot.

Ver, an old friend and confidant of the president, was on leave of absence pending the court verdict. Marcos signed a law yesterday setting a special presidential election for Feb. 7 that may be a contest between him and Aquino's widow, Corason. She called a news conference for later today, and supporters expect her to accept the opposition's nomination.

The president's foes had predicted the acquittal, but there had been rumors some defendants might be found guilty of negligence, a minor offense.

Aquino said the verdict did not matter because Marcos was her "No. 1 suspect" in the death of her husband, who was Marcos' main political foe.

Opposition leader Salvador Laurel called the acquittal "madness." Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime Sin, the nation's most prominent religious leader, said the verdict "could push our country to the brink of violence and despair."

With its finding, the court rejected a year of investigation by a fact-finding board, which concluded that the killing was a military conspiracy.

Small but noisy demonstrations against the verdict occurred outside the courtroom and in a street leading to the presidential palace. Marcos said in a statement that he hoped "calm and reason will settle on this most distressing and tragic case."

The qualification appeared in tended to blunt criticism here and in the United States of the return to command of a man under whose direction the army has been accused of widespread human rights abuses.

U.S. officials have demanded reforms in the military to counter a growing communist insurgency.

Sen. Richard Lugar, chairman of the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee, criticized the verdict and Ver's reinstatement. "The court ruling does not contribute to the crying need for credibility in the Philippines government, nor does it answer the need for reform and reorganization in the military," the Indiana Republican said in Washington.

Indian demonstrators recall Bhopal leak

The largest effigy of (Union Carbide chairman Warren) Anderson had 13 heads — representing Union Carbide's 12 industrial plants in India and one in Nepal — and held an infant dying of gas poisoning.

By SEEMA SINGH Associated Press

BHOPAL, India — More than 3,000 people waving torches and shouting "Down with the killer!" burned about 100 effigies of Union Carbide's chairman yesterday night outside the plant where a leak of deadly gas created the world's worst industrial accident a year ago.

"Hang Anderson! Hang Anderson!" survivors of the gas leak screamed as they poured kerosene on the effigies of corporation chairman Warren Anderson at the gates of the closed pesticide factory. A leak of methyl isocyanate gas there on Dec. 3, 1984, killed more than 2,000 people and injured 300,000.

Demonstrators cheered, applauded and jumped up and down as the figures burned. Some hit the effigies with sticks, or stamped on the smoldering remains.

The demonstrators, gas victims from the slums around the plant and activists, demanded Union Carbide's expulsion from India, a boycott of products made by U.S. multinational companies, and more help for gas victims.

Metal barricades and more than 1,000 heavily armed police around the plant kept protesters out. Protest leaders assailed "the killer multinational" in speeches, but no violence or injuries were reported.

Reinforcements were moved into this central Indian city of 900,000 to prevent violence, and a boycott of 150 people thought to be potential troublemakers were detained beforehand.

The largest effigy of Anderson had 13 heads — representing Union Carbide's 12 industrial plants in India and one in Nepal — and held an infant dying of gas poisoning. Most of the 13 plants produce dry-cell batteries.

More than 40 tons of methyl isocyanate gas leaked from a storage tank at the plant in the middle of the night a year ago. It killed nearby schoolchildren and felled people and animals as they fled.

Thousands of survivors suffered permanent lung damage. The cause of the leak has not been determined. Some Indian scientists say the gas that leaked was cyanide, even more deadly than methyl isocyanate.

The Central Bureau of Investigation, India's equivalent of the FBI, said yesterday it would file criminal charges against Anderson and top officials of Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary, the United News of India reported.

Astronauts say tests preparing for space station

By PAUL REECER Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Atlantis' astronauts yesterday said their test assembly of a large framework in orbit was an "exhilarating" experience and a major step in learning how to build a permanent orbiting space station.

The astronauts, replying from orbit to questions posed by journalists at the Johnson Space Center, said they expect after their return to Earth today to assist the engineers who even now are beginning to design the first U.S. space station.

"It was one of the most exhilarating experiences I have ever had," said Sherwood Spring of the two spacewalks he made with Jerry Ross. "It was a first effort at trying to understand how we'll probably construct a space station."

Ross said he and Spring will spend time with space station designers "to assist them in understanding what it means to build a space station and what is the best and most efficient way of doing it."

Both men said the spacewalks exhausted them, but that they were not as tired after the second excursion Sunday as they were following Friday's spacewalk.

Astronaut Mary Cleave said the crew took pictures of Haley's comet, but "I'm not sure we saw it. . . . It's really not that distinctive."

Mission commander Brewster Shives said the crew took a "whole string" of pictures over Somalia and Ethiopia using a variety of cameras. Experts had asked for the pictures on hopes they could find geological evidence of hidden water. The countries have been hit by drought and continuing famine.

Atlantis is scheduled to land at 4:34 p.m. EST today on a concrete runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California, completing a seven-day mission that included the launching of three satellites as well as the spacewalks.

McDonnell Douglas engineer Charles Walker, who flew on Atlantis to operate a pharmaceutical purification machine, said he completed processing all of his sample and that the results look promising.

"We'll be ready soon to go into pharmaceutical manufacturing using space," said Walker. He predicted that eventually the need will be so large that it will require facilities on a space station.

During excursions into Atlantis' open cargo bay Friday and Sunday, the astronauts built and disassembled a 45-foot tower and a large pyramid. They also manipulated the two structures by hand, proving that astronauts in space can manually control the beams and metal framework that could be used to build a space station.

Wacky 'Noises Off' a dual sexual farce

By GARY PIERCE
Arts Editor

If you like sex, and you like British comedy, especially British comedy about sex, then "Noises Off" might be the play for you.

"Noises Off," the latest Broadway Nights presentation at the Opera House, opens Thursday night. The tour has garnered critical acclaim from such diverse sources as The Wall Street Journal ("Nonstop laughter"), CBS flagship station WCBS-TV ("a slam-bang splendid uproar") and Women's Wear Daily ("laughter to the point of tears").

Hailed as a comedy in the wild and wacky Mosty Pythian tradition, "Noises Off" tells the misadventures of a low-budget British acting troupe, touring small English towns in a lousy sex farce called "Nothing On."

The first act follows the final rehearsal of the play. The fast-paced Act II is the sex farce as seen from backstage, where the actors whip through a few escapades of their own, which parallel the onstage action and dialogue.

Act III shows the farce near the end of its tour when all hell has truly broken loose.

Noel Harrison stars as the director of the play-within-the-play. In keeping with the finer points of British humor, the head man in "Noises Off" is also on the receiving end of many of the show's outrageously irreverent slapstick routines, including one particularly zany piece of business involving a cactus and a portion of the director's anatomy which is greatly unused to such pointed intrusions.

Harrison, son of Rex "Doctor Doolittle" Harrison, is best known to American audiences as the sidekick of April Dancer (Stefanie Powers) in the television's mid-60s spy spoof, "The Girl from U.N.C.L.E."

He has appeared on episodes of "Mission: Impossible," "The Love Boat" and "Hart to Hart," in addition to notching a Top 40 hit with his 1966 recording of Leonard Cohen's "Suzanne." He is currently preparing a one-man show about Belgian poet-singer Jacques Brel.

Lydia Laurans plays the gorgeous but stupid sexpot, whose antics forever plague Harrison.

For trivia fans, note that Laurans' body was once matched with the head of Dolly Parton in a video cassette ad for "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." For academic fans, note that Laurans is also a lawyer, holding a doctoral degree from the University of Maryland

School of Law as well as a bachelor's in biology.

"Noises Off" will be performed at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Opera House, with a matinee at 2 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are $26 and $16 for evening shows, $24 and $14 for the matinee, available at the Rupp Arena box office and at the door beginning 90 minutes prior to each performance. Groups of 15 or more get $5 off each ticket price. For more information, call 233-3335.

Cruzados not the band they are reputed to be

By KAKIE URCH
Staff Writer

REVIEW

Cruzados The Cruzados
Arista Records

The Cruzados ain't all that. Lauded by the music press almost everywhere, their debut album is not all that it's cracked up to be.

Los Lobos, to whom the press link Cruzados both musically and by their common Hispanic heritage, are great, but Cruzados are a sham created by record companies and the music mags.

How mediocre is this record? A record described as "hot," "fresh" and "new" that sounds like Steve Perry and Journey from Close to South of the Border is a pretty mediocre record.

"Wasted Years" could be a track from the new Journey record, with lead singer Tito Larriva's full-blown rock crooning laid over Steven Hufsteter's technically perfect but unexciting guitar.

"Some Day" takes guitar and vocals straight from Tom Petty, with lyrics that chide the girl who went away, and will probably stay away if she cares for musical originality. The single, "Motorcycle Girl," is a good song and also a good deception. With its George Thorogood/Los Lobos dirty guitar, it leads the listener to believe the whole record could sound like that. It doesn't.

"Flor de Mal" begins with an interesting Spanish guitar line but ends up sounding like a Julio Iglesias ballad minus piano glissandos. "Cryin' Eyes," "Seven Summers" and "Just Like Roses" are all titles that could point to potentially great songs, but don't. They are predictable and could have been recorded by any number of generic American bands.

The polished musicianship here is excellent, but evidently the live sound that graces the L.A. clubs was squelched and overproduced by a nervous record company.

"1,000 Miles," "Rising Sun" and the single "Motorcycle Girl" come close to the Cruzados sound that is purported to exist. Some of the meaningful guitar, bass and lyrical originality shine through on these songs, but nothing here really comes through as hot, fresh, new or worth the price of a record — unless you don't mind buying a record for that one good song on the radio.

Reagan honored by longtime Hollywood stars

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

BURBANK, Calif. — Old Hollywood turned out in force Sunday for a television special honoring former movie actor President Reagan, who was kidded by such stars as Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin.

"We are here to honor the only man from our community to move into public housing," host Sinatra quipped, bringing roars of laughter from the star-studded audience.

Martin said he believed it was a party for Burt Reynolds, who also was on hand for the taping.

"To all those who said such nice things about me," Reagan said, "I wish you were all members of Congress."

the stars attending the "All Star Party for 'Dutch' Reagan," taped at the NBC studios.

"Dutch" was the president's nickname from his early days in show business.

Reagan, his wife, Nancy, and their party arrived at the studio complex in three helicopters and were driven to an entrance by limousine.

"This is not a political evening," Monty Hall, president of the sponsoring Variety Clubs International, said at the start of the show. He then added, "That's for the three Democrats here tonight."

The president and Mrs. Reagan flew to Los Angeles Sunday morning after spending a long Thanksgiving weekend at their Rancho Del Cielo in the Santa Ynez Mountains, 30 miles north of Santa Barbara.

Although taped at NBC, CBS will broadcast the special Dec. 8.
