Duke sneers at threats that he will be banned from GOP

By LINDA ASHTON
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Newly elected state Rep. David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader, said yesterday that blacks and Jews have nothing to fear from him and scoffed at the notion he would be banned from the GOP and not be seated by the state legislature.

"I repudiate any racial or religious intolerance," Duke said at a news conference. "Any group — racial or religious — has nothing to fear from David Duke."

Duke, 38, squeaked out a 227-vote victory over homebuilder John Treen, 63, to represent a nearly all-white House district in Metairie, a suburb of New Orleans. Duke received 8,459 votes, or 50.7 percent, to Treen's 8,232, or 49.3 percent, in Saturday's election.

Duke registered as a Republican two days before qualifying for the race. After Duke's stunning success in the Jan. 21 primary, the national party sent three advisers to help him in a mild-mannered opponent and persuaded President Bush and former President Reagan to endorse Treen.

Duke became an international spokesman for the Klan in the 1970s as grand wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. As a teen-ager he was photographed in a Nazi uniform.

U.S. senators, the governor and other community leaders of both parties warned that a Duke victory would ruin the state's reputation and harm already tenuous race relations.

While Duke said he was extending a hand in friendship to the Jewish community and inviting his opponents to talk with him, he did not mince words on where he stands on civil rights and affirmative action.

"I'm for getting the government out of our personal lives. I'm not for any law for segregation or integration," he said. "The right not to associate is just as precious as the right to associate."

Duke's victory was denounced by national Republican Chairman Lee Atwater, who vowed to have Duke censured and barred from using the GOP name.

"David Duke is not a Republican," Atwater said in a statement. "He's a pretender, a charlatan and a political opportunist who is looking for any organization he can find to try to legitimize his views of racial and religious bigotry and intolerance.

"We repudiate him in his views and we are taking immediate steps to see that he is disenfranchised from our party."

"Is he going to censure me for my past? How many Republicans, how many Democrats have done controversial things in the past?" Duke asked. "The actions of Mr. Atwater are really un-American."

Several lawmakers said they expect an attempt in the legislature to refuse to seat Duke by challenging his qualifications, namely his residency in the district.

It would be the first time the House has ever taken such action. The legislature convenes for a special tax session on Wednesday.

"It all depends on what the majority of the House wants to do," said House Speaker Jim Dimsos, a Democrat. "Unless someone makes a motion to disqualify him, then he will be sworn in. I know the people in his district elected him by a small margin, but he still was elected and has to be treated as a member."

Asked if he had been a resident of his district the requisite one year before the election, Duke said: "Absolutely I am. It's a frivolous question."

Metairie attorney Dave Sherman, who said he represented several unsuccessful candidates from the primary, claimed to have irrefutable evidence that Duke failed to move into the district until September. He said he has a statement to that effect from an alleged roommate of Duke and power company records indicating utilities were not turned on in the Metairie condominium until September.

"You see, these guys are all winners. I don't care if we have a losing record, this team that I'm coaching right now, they're all winners. They may have learned more than any Kentucky team — more than any other in the history of Kentucky basketball."

Embattled coach remains steadfast despite adversity

By JIM WHITE
Managing Editor

While in the midst of one of the worst seasons in the history of UK basketball, UK coach Eddie Sutton is still able to deliver a spirited and optimistic message to fans.

But Saturday, after UK's 71-67 loss to the University of Alabama, the Cats' fifth consecutive loss, Sutton's message sounded somewhat hollow.

"I gave a little speech to our players a little while ago," the coach said. "You just have to reach down there and regroup. Who said life was going to be easy?"

It wasn't easy for the Cats Saturday. Despite a hard-fought game which saw several lead changes, UK came up short at the end of the game. The Cats let their 29-36 halftime lead slip away to a powerful Alabama inside game. Crimson Tide forward Michael Ansley scored 24 points, 13 of which came in the second half.

UK is now 11-15 overall, 6-8 in the Southeastern Conference. They are in sixth place in the league.

"The effort on the part of our hallcats was outstanding," Sutton said. "I thought our players played extremely hard. But we just didn't do as good a job as we needed to in order to win."

The last time a UK team lost five games in a row was the 1924-25 season. Sutton said he realizes this is something new for everyone associated with UK basketball — including the fans.

The simple solution, he said, is to start winning.

"I've never had a team lose five in a row," Sutton said. "It's a new experience for all of us. I mean that's why it's difficult for these coaches and certainly for the players. . . . I certainly feel for our fans because I know how much they like to win."

"No one wants to lose," said UK center Leifon Ellis, who scored only five points in the game. "That solely keeps your morale up, just not wanting to lose. It's frustrating, you know. None of us have ever been in losing teams before, where we have lost consecutively as many games as we have this season."

Tonight, UK will take its losing streak on the road to Auburn University. The Tigers are struggling as well — 8-14 overall and 1-13 in the league. They occupy last place in the SEC.

The game, since it is only two days after the Alabama loss, will be a strain. Sutton said that, although his team is not one to be overconfident against any opponent, he is glad Auburn is the opponent tonight and not a tougher team.

"I'd rather be going to Auburn, baby, than Syracuse at this point," Sutton said. "Since that's another place we have to go."

If the Cats are to have a winning season, they will have to win their remaining five games. If they lose any one of the remaining games, they will finish below .500. The last time UK had a losing season was in 1927, and Sutton's predecessors, Adolph Rupp and Joe B. Hall, finished their worst seasons with 13-13 records.

Sutton is aware of the numbers. "Surely, I don't look at this situation in a way that I'm pleased about it," he said. "But again, I know, when I get up every morning, and I look in the mirror, I know I'm doing the very best job that I've ever done. So when I know that I'm giving everything I can, then it's easier to live with that."

Moslems see disputed book differently

'Satanic Verses' controversy based on interpretation

By HARRIETT HENDREN
Contributing Writer
and The Associated Press

Although the Western media have reported an uproar over the book The Satanic Verses, a UK professor of sociology from Iran says not all Moslems are upset over the work.

"This is an issue of interpretation," said Hamid R. Khusa, an instructor of sociology at UK and a native of Iran. Khusa said he recently talked to some friends living in Iran who weren't disturbed by the book.

"Not everyone in the Islamic world is outraged the way it is being portrayed in this country," he said.

The book prompted Iran's leader, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, to threaten the life of its author, Salman Rushdie, and offer a $5.2 million bounty for Rushdie's death.

"A number of Islamic scholars are saying this kind of literature is a conspiracy against Islamic religion," Khusa said. "This is an attack on their tradition, on their belief system, on what they hold very dear."

Khusa offered a comparison between the recent movie, The Last Temptation of Christ, and Satanic Verses to show the effect of the controversy.

Some fundamentalist Christians were offended by the movie. The Last Temptation of Christ, which included a dream sequence in which Christ had sexual intercourse.

But as all Christians were not offended by that portrayal of Christ, not all Moslems are angered over The Satanic Verses, Khusa said.

"I'm not offended," he said. "I look at it as a form of expression, as an art. I do not find it a suitable medium for dialogue about Islam."

Viking Penguin, the publisher in the United States and Britain, has expressed regret for any distress caused by the publication but has not said it will withdraw the book.

The book is out of stock at both Joseph-Beth and Waldenbooks in Lexington. Copies of the book will not be available for the next few days, workers said.

Students, faculty, alumni among 500 attending first campus formal

By ELIZABETH WADE
News Editor

"Excelsior" stood up to the expectations of its creators and its meaning Friday night.

The formal, which was sponsored by the Student Government Association and other student organizations, was classy, extravagant and the ultimate, according to many in attendance at the dance.

More than 500 people attended the event, which included students, faculty, alumni, and administration.

"It is a chance for administration and students to get together in this type of atmosphere," said Tim Canselor, an agriculture economics senior. "I think it is very exceptional and anyone not here is missing out."

Men wore classic tuxedos or suits, while women were adorned in everything from elegant full-length satin and lace gowns, stunning velvet tea-length dresses, silver- and gold-sequined dresses and short body-hugging leather bubble dresses.

Although there was a diverse crowd sporting a variety of styles, shapes and sizes, the atmosphere of the event was unified by good times, good music and being part of a new tradition.

"It is not greek or independent," said Carrie Tipton, one of the coordinators of the dance. "It is exactly what we wanted. We've got about every type . . . no single group is dominating the crowd. The theme is unity and it's really exceeded our expectations."

"I think it is a great idea to bring the community together in lots of different ways and not just sporting events," said Jackie Betts, a teacher at Berea College and wife of Raymond Betts, UK English professor. "It is something a little bit out of the ordinary. We all need those things."

"It brings us all together; there is no tradition at this campus," said Timothy Conlin, a telecommunications alumni. "It is good someone is trying to get one started."

Mark Rumsfeld (Bruce Dern), Ray Peterson (Tom Hanks) and Art Weingartner (Rick Ducommun) share a neighborly anecdote in the newly released film, "The 'Burbs."

'The 'Burbs' sadly unoriginal

By TIM FOGLE
Staff Critic

"The 'Burbs" is pointless. Predictable after about 10 minutes, it offers nothing more than a few tired clichés about the suburbs and mundane day-to-day living. It just doesn't pay off.

Tom Hanks looks tired and bored. Carrie Fisher is virtually an unneeded expense, as she does nothing that any other no-name actress could have done.

Rick Ducommun plays, and is, a fat, obnoxious buffoon. And Bruce Dern just looks stupid. "The 'Burbs" showed me nothing.

The plot concerns the "stay-at-home" vacation of one Ray Peterson (Hanks).

Rather than taking a trip, Peterson decides to lounge around, watch TV and drink some beers. But his next-door neighbors, the Klopek family, won't let him relax.

is away on a trip, they break into the place to look for their friend Walter (Gale Gordon), who has mysteriously disappeared.

After an incredibly long and jokeless search, it seems the Klopekies are pretty much what everyone thought they were, including the trapped filmmaker, who has paid good money to see this trash.

Good things are hard to find in "The 'Burbs."

Brother Theodore of "Late Night With David Letterman" fame gives a good but too short performance as the grouchy Uncle Rubeen Klopek. He manages to inject a few foul-natured barbs into a movie that is filled with too many stale jokes about dogs that poop on other people's lawns, paper boys with bad aim, scantily clad female neighbors and beer-swilling teen-agers.

"The 'Burbs," rated PG, is now playing at North Park and South Park cinemas.

Benefit for alternative art gallery tonight

By VICKI GRITTON
Contributing Writer

Plug in your lava lamps and bring out your love beads. It's Super '60s Hippie Night tonight at the Wrocklage. The cost is a $2 donation to help the Urban Artists group with their opening of an alternative art gallery.

"We encourage people to dress up for less of a donation," said Casey Carrigan, vice president of Urban Artists.

The evening holds a variety of festivities, which will begin at about 9 p.m. Scheduled to play are the musical groups 7 Zark 7, Groovy Kool, Serious George, and Gordon Brown. Along with those bands, a nameless group of four friends, John Baird, Brian Billberry, Gerald Distant and Greg Weaver, who all play for Alice, will be displaying their "American creative music."

Baird, drum player for the band, said the group is just "...to let people see a little something different."

The bands were selected or volunteered because of their original neo-'60s style of music.

WHEN, WHERE AND HOW MUCH

The Urban Artists group will be holding a benefit concert at 9 tonight at the Wrocklage. Performing will be Serious George, 7 Zark 7, Groovy Kool, and Gordon Brown. There also will be poetry readings and art showings. A $2 donation is requested.

In addition to the bands, the kaleidoscopic evening will have poetry readings and dramatic interpretations by David and Donna Thordale, and Casey Carrigan.

Various works of art from local artists such as WRFL DJ Mike Lynch, Al Creech and Rhonda Greer will be on display.

"A friend of ours with a shaved head will volunteer himself for a head painting by one of the artists," Carrigan said.

The purpose of an alternative gallery is "to give Lexington exposure to slightly provocative art," said Cynthia Rhyon, membership coordinator of Urban Artists.

She said that members of the gallery can be completely active in working there and showing their art, just show their work, or simply support the gallery and keep it from disappearing.

A gallery that specializes in alternative art does not exist for the general public in Lexington. If one opens, it will be a place where local artists can share their work with the community, supporters say.

"It will also be an alternative space for performances and a place for people to get together," Baird said.

"All we basically want to open is a non-juried gallery with a loose art format," Carrigan said.

With tonight's fund-raising event, the Urban Artists group hopes to raise enough money to open their gallery as soon as they can locate a place in the downtown area.

"The evening should be generally pretty fun and chaotic," Carrigan said.

'Bill and Ted's' pathetic adventure in time

By ADAM GOLDBERG
Staff Critic

"Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," starring Keam Reeves and Alex Winter opened Friday. You know the one I'm talking about — two surfer dudes lost in time? The one with George Carlin of "Seven Words You Can't Say on Television" fame.

Although Carlin has been involved in very funny undertakings in the past, this is not one of them. Carlin is on the screen for a total of only 15 minutes.

The rest of the time it's up to two unknown actors to play Sean Penn's "Fast Times" character. They don't do it too well, although one of them looks a little like Penn. But you have to give the film some credit. There are some funny scenes.

The story goes something like this: These two barbed-out surfers who don't know how to play the guitar, form a two-person, guitar-only band. The band will someday form the basis for a "higher" civilization.

But not if they get split up — which is going to happen unless they both get an A-plus on a history presentation.

Enter Carlin — he's an emissary from the future, with a time-traveling phone booth. He gives the surfer dudes the phone booth and sends them traipsing through time to learn about history. They end up bringing Napoleon, Socrates, Joan of Arc, Billy the Kidd, Abraham Lincoln and others back to 1988. A silly situation at best, but it had some humor to it.

When they get Lincoln, they are transported into a closet in the oval office. They knock on the door and yell "cearly gram!" Ha ha.

Sigmund Freud, Billy the Kidd and Socrates try to pick up chicks at the mall. Someone calls Freud a pervert. Ha ha.

Joan of Arc takes off her armor and leads a group of mall aerobicists. Ha ha.

Well, you get the picture. It's silly, rambling, juvenile.

I wouldn't go see it again, but if you're in a really silly mood, you just might consider it.

"Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," rated PG, is currently playing at Crossroads and North Park cinemas.

Excelsior formal a quality evening for UK students

We've been taught by our parents or by folklore that quality does not mean quantity.

But the turnout at Friday's campus formal is a strong argument to the contrary.

More than 500 people put on their best duds for Excelsior, the campus formal sponsored by the UK Student Government Association and a host of other student organizations, and from all accounts had a splendid time.

To be sure, there were some reservations on our part about the cost of the dance, but those must be allayed because the response to the dance has been so overwhelmingly positive.

Held in the Hyatt Regency's Heritage Hall, Excelsior was a classy affair from the onset. From the smooth sounds of the Monarchs to the formal wear, Excelsior proved that it has arrived, and with it, UK has an important event to add to its social calendar.

Perhaps the most gratifying aspect of the evening was the diversity of the audience. As many faculty and alumni were in attendance as students. Any time those groups can get together to celebrate, we have reason to be pleased.

In addition, we must commend SGA President James Rose for fulfilling one of his top campaign promises to the student body during his election last spring.

Rose told students that he would bring a campuswide formal to UK this school year, and he delivered something that is rare in most SGA presidential candidates.

This year's candidates for the student government executive branch should take a page from Rose's book, in at least this instance, and make promises they fully intend on delivering.

Congratulations to SGA and the other organizations that worked so diligently in putting together and promoting Excelsior.

It looks like a new tradition has been born.

Wise up

Wilkinson has not earned an honorary degree from UK

Finally, someone in higher education has publicly taken a stand against Gov. Wallace Wilkinson.

On Tuesday it was reported that for only the second time in more than 50 years, UK will not recommend a governor for an honorary degree within the first two years of his or her term.

UK officials acknowledged that Wilkinson will not receive an honorary degree from UK at the May graduation ceremonies, but they were quick to point out that the governor still could receive an honorary degree before his four-year term ends in December 1991.

The reasons the University Faculty Senate decided not to give Wilkinson an honorary degree can be traced directly to the way the governor behaved toward higher education during his first term in office.

When the governor submitted his executive budget in January 1988, he allowed only for a 0.5 percent increase in funding for higher education for the first year of the biennium and a mere 5 percent raise the subsequent year.

Although the budget passed by the General Assembly was a bit more generous to higher education, it still had many UK faculty looking elsewhere for employment — preferably at a place where higher education is considered somewhat important by its state leaders.

There is some concern among high-ranking UK administrators that the decision to snub Wilkinson might cause a "cooling in relations" between Wilkinson and UK President David Roselle.

On Feb. 10, when Toyota Manufacturing U.S.A. Inc. gave $1 million to UK's library system, Roselle and Wilkinson did lunch at Maxwell Place where they reportedly discussed higher education and its needs.

By not giving Wilkinson an honorary degree he has in no way earned, UK administrators fear that the governor might forget about listening to higher education's concerns altogether during the next two years of his administration.

But is it really worth pandering to the man and begging him for something that education should not have?

If the only condition for Wilkinson to be nice to higher education is to tell him what a great guy he is and bestow gifts upon him, then higher education would do well to ignore him.

What this state needs is a change in attitude toward higher education by its state leaders, and attitude adjustments do not come about from giving gifts to governors and lawmakers.

Since he moved into the governor's mansion with his "laser beam from Liberty," Wilkinson has held a good deal of contempt toward higher education and told its leaders to "stop crying."

Wilkinson attended UK for awhile, but dropped out to make his fortune in the used textbook business. Whenever he gets the chance, Wilkinson reminds us how he was successful without a college education, never mind the fact that he did it 25 years ago when the state's and the nation's economy was much different.

If Wilkinson is truly concerned about improving the state of education in Kentucky, then he should demonstrate a more mature attitude and show a willingness to compromise.

At ribbon-cutting ceremonies for new businesses, Wilkinson has said that Kentucky wants to be the perfect climate for businesses to locate.

In order to do so, it must improve its educational system.

Kentucky's elementary and high schools continue to lag behind the rest of the nation — especially in the rural areas where the counties and cities are too poor to pay for education and an insane law won't allow them to raise local property taxes.

Higher education also is in dire need of increased funding, and the only way additional revenue can be raised for education is through higher taxes, and that would be committing an economic mortal sin, according to Wilkinson.

Businesses are driven out by higher taxes, he preaches, and new ones would be discouraged from locating in the Bluegrass state.

It is time that Wilkinson drop his economic doublepeak talk perfected by A.B. "Happy" Chandler and realize that it is no longer 1955.

Businesses have lost lawmakers that they do not mind paying higher taxes, provided that the schools and the quality of life the community are improved with the extra revenue.

So until Wilkinson takes some courses in basic economics and marketing and learns that quality education is inextricably linked to economic growth, he does not deserve an honorary degree from a trade school, much less an institution of higher learning.

Besides, as UK trustee Walter "Dee" Huddleston said, it makes more sense to compliment a governor at the end of his term, rather than in the middle of it.

If Wilkinson should change his attitude and become a little more kinder and gentler toward education, then he should be rewarded by UK when he leaves office.

Any move to give Wilkinson an honorary degree now for a job very poorly done would be tantamount to allowing the Soviet Union host a conference on human rights or Iran sponsor a forum on religious tolerance.

Kernel Checklist

A weekly public service of the Viewpoint Page to help keep its readers abreast of the hot items in the universe.

➤ Satanic Leader. Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Reported to be losing his political and religious grip on Iran, the Ayatollah ordered last week that Salman Rushdie, author of Satanic Verses, be killed for blaspheming the religion of Islam. While it is disturbing that someone would be a target for expressing their opinion, the issue is an interesting clash between religion and the freedom of expression.

➤ Failing Grade. Gov. Wallace Wilkinson. The University will depart from a long-held silly tradition, and not give Gov. Wilkinson an honorary degree this May during the graduation ceremonies. Although some are concerned the decision might cause Wilkinson to turn his back on higher education permanently, the move is one of the few acts of political courage displayed against the governor.

➤ A Gala Event. Excelsior. Not even the organizers of "Excelsior" expected more than 500 people to turn out Friday night for the University's first campuswide formal. A dance may not be the best way to unite a campus, but in the years to come, hopefully a campuswide formal will be as much a part of University life as Add-drop. Job well done.

➤ And The Floodgates Opened. The Flood of '89. Mother nature made up for last summer by opening the flood gates last week and drenching most of Kentucky. Several towns were under water and thousands of people had to abandon their homes. Early estimates put the damage in the tens of millions of dollars. In one of the hardest-hit places, Boston, Ky., an arc was reported to float by filled with all types of animals.

➤ Justice For All. Brad Shipman. Former UK student Brad Shipman was denied shock probation last week by Fayette County Circuit Judge James E. Keller. Although it is sad to see a 20-year-old college student full of promise sent to prison, the Shipman case should demonstrate that no matter what someone's race, age or socio-economic standing is, drunken driving penalties apply to all people.

Opinion was misinformed

I am writing in response to the guest opinion of Peter Gohar in the Jan. 31 Kernel in which he criticized the American Civil Liberties Union ("ACLU chooses to tell its own history"). I will not attempt to address every inaccuracy and inconsistency in the opinion, but I will correct some of the less obvious errors.

Contrary to Mr. Gohar's opinion, "In God We Trust" was introduced on U.S. money in 1866, 77 years after the Bill of Rights was written, and 90 years after our nation's birth. The people whom Mr. Gohar alleges put the motto on the money were dead at that time.

Also, contrary to Mr. Gohar's opinion, religious tolerance is fundamental to secular humanism, and is found in the Humanistic Manifesto (section 7, lines 5-6).

Mr. Gohar also wrongly described the ACLU policy. The ACLU is not trying to dictate any philosophy to religious institutions. The sole purpose of the ACLU is to defend the U.S. Constitution.

The First Amendment to that constitution says, "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

This is violated if the government uses tax money to support a school which promotes religion. If churches would stop begging for taxpayers' money to support their private schools and would stop trying to use public schools and other government institutions to promote religion, they would have no conflict with the ACLU.

Mr. Gohar also was mistaken in saying that the ACLU advocates the removal of religious history from textbooks. . . . The general consensus of ACLU members is that it is a national tragedy that school boards and publishers neglect coverage of the important impact of religion on history.

By correcting some of Mr. Gohar's errors, I in no way mean to impugn his character. I don't think he is dishonest, just misinformed. I expect that with a better grip on the facts, he would at least agree with the ACLU's goal of protecting the fundamental values embodied in the U.S. Constitution.

Death penalty justified

Raghuram Ekambaran had a point in the "Letters to the Editor" on Jan. 30 when he stated that a mad person will not think twice about the death penalty when committing murder.

Ted Bundy was not mad. He knew what he was doing. No mad person could have acted as his own legal counsel. He was articulate, suave and for years led the American legal system down the primrose path. Even Melvin Belli could not have done better. The death penalty was justified and overdue.

Mr. Ekambaran is right in saying the death penalty does not deter crime. But it does save money. The cost of locking up a convicted mass-murderer for life could run into the millions.

This might sound gruesome to some, but give it a thought when you fill out your 1040. In these days of fiscal restraint, why not use this money to rehabilitate lesser criminals?

Columnist should wake up

C.A. Duane Bonifer, in his Feb. 13 column ("The AIDS Myth: Never mind the headlines, humanity is not going to end") indicated that he does not feel AIDS has yet become "something truly to be concerned with." Yet he quotes a statistic of 84,985 diagnoses of AIDS in the United States alone since the discovery of the disease. The number of cases doubled in 1988.

Bonifer goes on to say, however, that only about 2 percent of AIDS cases have been attributed to heterosexual transmission in native-born Americans. Are we to assume that since the white, American, heterosexual population has so far gone mostly unscathed by AIDS that we ought to relegate the commitment to the category, he calls the "mythical AIDS crisis" Bonifer simplistically cites "moral decadence" and "carelessness as the causes of sexual transmission of AIDS. What is more morally decadent or irresponsible than to cast off as unimportant the thousands of people worldwide who should be victimized by AIDS?"

How can anyone degrade in this way the lives, the contributions, the futures of these men and women, and the thousands more who have not yet been diagnosed? Who and how many must die before a "war on AIDS" becomes validated for Bonifer?

At this point in our knowledge of the disease it is fair to agree with Bonifer that "AIDS is not going to wipe out the human population by 2000."

It is far too early to assume that a wider population will not be affected in the future, and it is too late to say that nothing is really wrong.

Cushenberry fires in career-high game

By BRIAN JENT

CUSHENBERRY

Lady Kat guard Kristi Cushenberry had been in a shooting slump until Saturday night. In a game against the University of Florida on Feb. 11, she only scored seven points. But Saturday night, things sized as the 5-9 freshman connected on five of five three pointers to lead UK past the University of Alabama 89-85.

With the win, UK is now 12-13 on the season and 3-4 in the Southeastern Conference.

"I have had a couple of bad games, so I practiced shooting in practice," the Tennessee native said. "I thought I was due for a good ball game and was looking for a good ball game."

"Good" was not the word to describe Cushenberry's career-high 29-point effort, which included a 10-of-14 performance from the field and a perfect of four-of-four from the line.

"I thought that (Kristi) had a great ball game," senior guard Jodie Whitaker said. "She is really a good shooter, and when she is on, she is on."

Cushenberry was not the only Kat who scored more than 20 points. Whitaker had 25 points, while making nine of 16 attempts from the field and six of seven from the charity stripe.

"I have had a couple of bad games, so I practiced shooting in practice. I thought that I was due for a good ball game and was looking for a good ball game."

Kristi Cushenberry, Lady Kat guard

UK coach Sharon Fanning also was pleased with Whitaker's and Cushenberry's showing, but she was most happy how her three-guard combination — Cushenberry, Whitaker and junior Malinka Salhi — worked together.

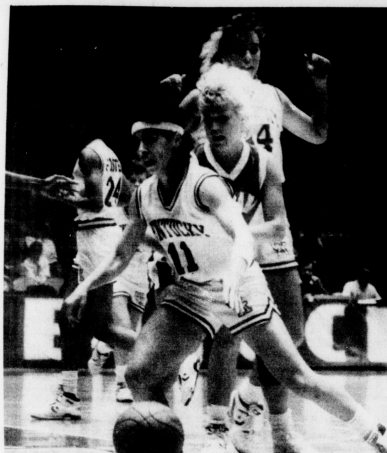

"Jodie, Kristi and Malinka played well together," Fanning said. "I felt that they screened well for each other. I felt that they played an unselfish game."

Salhi, who is known for her pressure defense and penetration, had all five of her points in the last 1:30 of the game, which helped to preserve the Kats' victory.

Besides the perimeter players, senior forward Pam Shrum chipped in 15 points, 11 of them coming in the first quarter.

"Early on, Pam was making the big buckets. . . I felt her positioning and her shot selection was good — other than a couple of shots — were good," Fanning said.

"To me, if we utilize the clock and take good shots, play good defense and rebound the basketball, then we got a chance to win any ball game," Fanning said.

Even though UK came away victorious, Fanning was concerned more about the team's lackadaisical style of play.

"The Kats, which never trailed in the contest after taking the lead at 7-4 early in the first half, held a nine-point lead at intermission.

Fanning watched the Crimson Tide whittle away the lead in the second half. In fact, midway through the second half, Alabama led the score at 54. But UK was able to rebuild the lead.

"We weren't hustling," Fanning said. "We weren't playing to win the ball game."

But the Kats did win, and every victory is important when you are struggling to reach the .500 mark.

"I'm happy that we won the ball game," Fanning said. "This is probably one of our biggest wins of the season. This gives us three wins in the conference when we didn't have any last year. We are progressing . . . (but) we still have a long way to go."

Coach positive despite record

have different philosophies of coping with the dark season.

UK guard Derrick Miller, who led the team in scoring Saturday with 18 points, tries to ignore it.

"I can't lie to you and say that I don't think about the losing streak," he said. "But I think I've handled it pretty well. I don't consider it a losing season until the season's over; not until the last game is over. I try not to think that way."

As was the case in many games this season, the win slipped away from UK, and Sutton was left pin-pointing specific instances where, if a shot would have fallen or a rebound had been grabbed, the outcome of the game might have been different.

Against the Tide, missed shots at crucial moments spelled defeat.

"The ball goes in the hole, you win, if it doesn't go in the hole you lose," Sutton said. "You go back and you keep playing that game with yourself. To think how many easy shots we missed. They were able to make theirs and we weren't able to make ours, and when you're talking about a four-point game it doesn't take too many of those."

No matter how close the margin of victory or the consideration of UK's woes this season, a win over UK is still sweet for any SEC team. And Miller has a theory that teams are gunning even harder for a win over Cats this year — while the hunting is a bit easier than in years past.

"These teams see that Kentucky is down, and that some of the other teams have beat us and they say, 'Well, we want to beat Kentucky too,'" Miller said. "So they'll try hard to beat us."

"Most of my guys have never been up here before," said Alabama coach Wimp Sanderson. "I know Kentucky is struggling but I don't think a lot of them realize what a win up here means."

As for Sutton, the meaning of a winning season is beginning to take on less importance. After Saturday's game, the coach alluded to the axiom that "winners" are not always determined by a record.

"You see, these guys are all winners," Sutton said. "I don't care if we have a losing record, this team that I'm coaching right now, they're all winners. They may have learned more than any Kentucky team — than any other in the history of Kentucky basketball."
