Keep Kentucky On The Airwaves

Station WHAS of Louisville is preparing its football schedule for 1939 under a new policy.

Naturally, we at the University want WHAS to carry all of the Kentucky football games next year.

Although an announcement of this new policy was made in a recent "In the Control Room" column.

The advantages a university enjoys every time its football games are broadcast is a matter of record.

Still Not Enough; Take Your Test Today

Thirteen hundred is a large number and an encouraging number of students to take Wassermann tests voluntarily during the first two weeks of a campaign.

Back Again, As Bad As Ever

As much as we dislike mentioning it, that old bug-a-boo is back.

Keeping off the grass shouldn't be a strenuous matter. In fact, after glancing at the slogans handed in last year, one would think that it was the simplest of procedures.

students, when "collared" by a Building and Grounds official, apologized profusely for walking on the grass and added that they hadn't been thinking.

If more individuals do not start thinking, the campus will turn into a no-man's-land of barbed wire entanglements.

For gosh sakes, students, keep off the grass!

Behind The Eckdahl

By ANDREW C. ECKDAHL

A rather nice looking boy strolled into the Union grill and looked around. His nonchalant gaze fell on four beautiful girls seated at a corner table.

Our boy friend, being a gentleman and having already noticed empty coca-cola glasses on the table, decided it would be safe to ask the girls to order something when he ordered a coke.

Due to the fact that our boy friend had only thirty-three cents, he ordered a glass of water and lighted another cigarette.

Girl number one drank her coke and arose as if to go thereby causing girl number two to rush with her sandwich hand coke so that she could accompany girl number one to the library to meet Bob.

Girl number three choked her limeade when she saw her boy friend enter and rushed over to greet him just as he was preparing to join another girl at the fountain.

The remaining girl was saved by the ten minute bell because she had a class in McVey Hall and "I must rush to see Mary about a quiz we are having in psychology tomorrow."

Our boy friend rose, lighted another cigarette, looked at his three cents, glanced at the fleeing figure of the last of the four girls, then slowly strolled out of the Union grill.

We always did like to write headlines. Even in the old days when we worked on The Winchester Sun we liked to write headlines.

But the editor says that a humor columnist is not supposed to write headlines; a humor columnist is supposed to write humor columns. We suggest our writing headlines to the copydesk and they sneer, "Why don't you forget about writing headlines and try writing a funny column for a change?"

We like to write headlines, and we jolly well intend to write headlines, editor or no editor, copydesk or no copydesk.

EDITOR SNEERS AT AMBITIONS OF COLUMNISTS

That headline should be set in 24 pt. Century all caps, although we are sure you don't know what 24 pt. Century all caps is.

Comes freshman handman Joe Friedman with word that some chap in an English class said that "some girls are brainless perfect; others, perfectly brainless."

Accommodations Department

The following have asked to be mentioned in this column:

1. Dot Stagg, 2. Cullum Haggard, 3. Ray Lathren.

Our friend Butch writes from Vanderbilt university as follows: "Beauty may be its own excuse for being but it is about its only excuse."

Gorny Joke Department

A chap went to a dance. After he had been there about thirty minutes he went to the ticket window and wanted his money refunded.

CAMPUSCENE

By JOHN ED PEARCE

AFTER a long period of doubt, it has been decided that law students are human. They are, in fact, almost like other collegians.

For a long time there has been question about this department. Everyone sees them huddled around the law building.

They talk runs more to study than to eat. They do not date. They do not drink. They do not smoke.

Who's Who-ey

Concerning a howling clock: "It's not so much the ticks I mind as it is the ticks"—John Baine Breckinridge, III.

There is a deadline for contributions to this column. If anyone wants anything stuck in Who-ey, it must be delivered by 1 o'clock Wednesday and by 3 o'clock Sunday in order to get in the following issue of the Kernel.

Here is some stuff condensed from an Independent column and this is the gist of what goes on.

Josephine Petry hogging the phone in Post Hall from one end of a meal to the next.

George Herman Kendall begs to have his name linked with that of Velma Swaine who seems to be something, and who has different ideas (Marvin Rubin) on the subject.

Alene De Ment, personality gal, is seldom seen with less than three escorts unless it is favorite yep, Bud Cole, who keeps the telephone buzzing and the girls in the hall burning.

It seems that there is a pigskin snorter who likes the sweetness of Anita Dodge and also her vivacious roommate, Kay Ray.

Notle Foster loves the footballers but denies rumors of only one, Dave Zoeller.

Favorite rendezvous for sophisticates: Barbara Hansen, and Harvey Leech, is the Tavern where they can be seen.

Retraction

Last week there ran in this strip a squib quoting Dr. Sherwood on the physiology department. This squib, says Dr. Sherwood was erroneous, bluntly, and generally untrue.

In addition to this, Didi Castle and Glenda Burton were acclaimed chief attendants to the Queen.

The whole election, of course, was a riot. The students threw themselves wholeheartedly into the campaign, clearly showing the character of the average student.

Hi Yo Silverman, away.

Student Union Organization Explained

(Ed. note: This is the first of a series of articles written in answer to questions on the possibilities and uses of the Union building.)

A major question asked by students is centered around dances at the building. First, the Union sponsors "campus hops" on dates that the Ballroom is idle.

In order for an organization to sponsor a dance in the building, it first must present the date for the Union for approval by the University Social Committee.

Organization sponsored dances may be either invitation or subscription. The Union management sets merely as an aid and negotiator for the organization.

The Union operates for and by the students and for their convenience in every respect. The director, his assistant, and members of the Union committee are available for suggestions concerning any phase of its operation and answer as far as possible any questions.

seen almost any afternoon gazing moonily about. Andrew "Womaniac" Eckdahl has been seen walking arm-in-arm with Louise Nibbit of Galsgrind and Phil Beta Kappa.

Garth House and Harry Jack Ray were viewing for the attention of Mary Pampum, who has been seen almost any afternoon gazing moonily about.

Here is another piece of paper addressed to Campuscene or Who's Who-ey or the waste basket.

Kelly, the night watchman, walked into Durn's the other day and the young man said "Hello, Kelly."

The Disney collection being shown in the Music room of the SUB is worth a step aside to see. The least expensive of the celluloid dramas is five dollars and we only noticed one of those.

After we announce that Bruce Sullivan spent a quiet evening at home Sunday night with his brother B. B. Sullivan, Jr., we shall have said our last words except one.

Filled Auditorium Hears Kaskas Open UK Vesper Concert Series

Metro Soprano's Selections Received With Much Enthusiasm

By DON IRVINE

Singing to a packed auditorium at Memorial Hall, blonde, slender, Anna Kaskas, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera association, opened the University's vesper concert series Sunday.

The golden smoothness of her voice and the diversity of her selections were received with enthusiasm by an audience whose antipathy must have made it a difficult performance for the artist.

Displaying a personal pose which made her instantly likable, Miss Kaskas at the same time proved herself to be a good contralto. The resonant richness of her lower range more than compensated for a lack of perfection in liquid octave.

"O du fatale," by Giuseppe Verdi, offered the best moments of the concert. In it, Miss Kaskas plumbed the depths of her voice on the low measure, all the while retaining a brilliant handness of tone.

Miss Kaskas was accompanied at the piano by Howard Kubak. His rendition of Chopin's rubric "Polonaise in A-flat" gave him opportunity for dynamic runs and chordwork, for expert mastery of intricate fingering.

Miss Kaskas' audience, while earnestly generous with its applause, was also a trifle rude. The artist's first songs were counterpointed by the shuffling feet of late comers, while some backstage grins experimentally with the footlights. Her listeners likewise had the complete lack of grace to applaud the janitor when he came onstage to lift the piano-top for Mr. Kubak's solos.

The program was as follows:

Polonaise (Mr. Kubak) - Chopin

Calling 'Em Wild

By JOE CREASON

IN THE PAST WEEK since the announcement was made that the University of Tennessee had once again been awarded the Southeastern Conference's annual basketball tournament, stories of why Kentucky was not selected as the tourney site have been as common as scratches at a flea circus.

The purpose of this column is to, in some way, clean the air of these rumors by relating the true story behind the selection of Tennessee to again host the eliminations. The greatest error heard to date is a misunderstanding of how the site for the affair is selected. The Conference athletic program is handled by various committees, all acting under the central executive committee. At the conclusion of each tournament the committee in charge files a list of expenditures and profits with the recommendation that next year's tourney be held at the site of their selection. The duty of the executive committee is to make the selections. This is done in their December meeting.

There are several strong reasons why Kentucky could have received the nomination had it been asked for the net show: (1) All over the Conference Kentucky is recognized as the basketball hot-bed of the South. This interest is a direct contribution of Coach Adolph Rupp since his coming here in 1931. (2) Every basketball venture ever here has been a financial success. Last year's state high school tourney cleared $5,000 after paying the expenses of 16 teams for the duration of the competition. (3) The original purpose of the tourney was to promote interest in the sport. For that reason it does not seem fair to allow one school to dominate the show. Kentucky has never held the eliminations and Tennessee has been so honored in three of the past four years. (4) Had Kentucky asked for the tourney, all the coaches would have received the idea with open arms; that's how high we rate.

Questions and Answers

Why, then, you wonder, didn't we ask for the tourney? There are but two reasons: (1) The expense such a venture would necessitate, and (2) the duties as host to 12 visiting teams.

True, each team is responsible for their own expenses to, from, and during the tourney. These expenses are later paid out of the profit, should there be any, the remainder going into the Conference sinking fund. Last year LSU, sporting a new gym and $100,000 worth of equipment, was the first to ask for the tourney. Later crowds of 10,000 returned and two factors, LSU, the home team, and Kentucky, the favorite, lost in first round ties, combined to produce the league's greatest financial fiasco.

When expense money doling time rolled around not enough was given each team to pay for their postage stamps. That trip cost Kentucky approximately $300. The total cost of holding a tournament, now that the loop is 12 teams instead of the former top 8 are eligible to compete, according to Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, executive secretary, would border on $10,000.

Varsity Team

The third quarter found both teams sparring for breaks, two runs and a punt being the program. During this quarter the Tigers were able to annex but one first down to Kentucky's three. In yardage Kentucky added 63 yards while the Tigers were rushing the leather but 18 yards. With two minutes left in the quarter the Cats roused themselves and the fans after taking the ball on their own 38 yard line. An end sweep by Zoeller gained 6 yards and after Carmel hit around end for 8 yards, Zoeller then faked back and shot a 9 yard pass to McCubbin down to the Clemson 18 yard line. Combs stepped around end for 12 yards down to the 6. Here the visiting line rose and resisted four attempts and Kentucky was finished.

Clemson's concluding marker came with 3 minutes to play. McPadden passing to Gots in the end zone and Pearson again kicking the extra point.

This marked the final home game of the Cats for the season and the final appearance of five squad members on St. Louis. The graduating seniors are Captain Hinkley, Randall Phillips, Dameron, Davis, Harry Brown, and Harold Black. All were in the starting lineup except Black who is out for the season with a twisted knee.

Annual Ag Fair

Displays of meats, crops, soils, horticulture, poultry, marketing, home economics, agriculture, economics, entomology, and dairying were included in the agriculture and home economics exhibits.

The grand champion turkey of the Turkey Show was on display at the fair. Departmental exhibits and animal displays for the show were prepared by students in agriculture classes.

Prof. L. H. Horlicher, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, faculty advisor of Block and Bridle, was advisor for the festival. Ray Brownfield was general manager of the fair.

James Quisenberry, Winchester, president of Block and Bridle, announced the following pledges to the organization: James Blue, Waverly; Benjamin Butler, Frank E. Clark, Frankfort; Glen Clay, Myers; John Clore, Prospect; Robert Davis, Paris; James K. Lewis, Louisville; Olyve Rainey, Ault; Woodrow Hughes, Trammell; James H. Thacker, Waverly; J. J. Stokes, Jr., Lexington; William Judge, Moorefield; James McConaha, Lexington; John McConaha, Palmouth; Estil Noffsinger, Graham; Terrell Noffsinger, Greenville; Robert Davis, Paris; James K. Ramsey, Madisonville; Oscar Corbin, Nebo; Elmon Salver, Hazard; Bourke Mearns, Backwater; Julian Pierce, Stamping Ground; Kearney Campbell, Taylorville; and Frank Rogers, Mt. Sterling.

Clemson-UK

(Continued From Page One) to 336 the minutes he has played in Kentucky's last six games. Although far off their form at last week, the Cats had to play aggressive defensive ball to keep the hard running Clemson backs from having a field day.

Two Drives Register

Two of Clemson's three completed passes posted both of the South-ers six pointers. Using sheer power, speed with deep side spinners and reverses, the Tigers drove 42 yards to score their first marker on a 29 yard pass. McPadden to Gots, and moving 51 yards to the final marker, a 10 yard heave featuring the same combination.

Before the game had aged three minutes, Clemson had knocked at the Cats' touch-down portal. Taking the ball on their own 43 after Shepherd had punted off the field, McPadden, Bryant and Willis, cooperated to drive to Kentucky's 11 yard line before Bill McCubbin covered Bryant's fumble. Dave Zoeller found the way barred around right end after Dameron Davis had picked up 5 yards at tackle. Shepherd, kicking directly into a strong wind, hit McCubbin on the end, punted to Bryant on Clemson's 44, who returned to Kentucky's 42 before Hinkley and Brown dragged him down.

After Willis added a yard through guard, Bryant snaked over tackle

Physiology Majors Meet At Union Grill In Luncheon Talks

Majors in Physiology have organized a luncheon series which meets every Thursday at noon in a private room at the Student Union Grill.

The purpose of the group is solely to further the cultural and social interests of the participants. At each luncheon the meal is followed by a speaker chosen from the group, who speaks on any topic of interest to himself. Most of the speakers so far have talked about the various phases of their hobbies or other outside interests.

Some of the speakers to date have been: Emmanuel Curry, on "The Renaissance and Its Effect on Early Medicine"; Jack Mohney, on "Mendel and His Early Work"; William Shepherd, on "Audition and Bird Life"; William G. H. on "History of Early American Surgery."

Next Thursday, Sutton Long will talk about some phase of fishing, his hobby, and as in all previous luncheons a group discussion will follow the scheduled speech.

FOURTEEN SEEK BOXING BERTHS

Coach Mosely Has Scheduled Tough Opponents For Varsity Team

A squad of fourteen men answered Coach Mosely's initial call for varsity boxing team aspirants yesterday afternoon. Upon installation of a new permanent boxing ring, punching and hitting bags in the basement of Alumni Gymnasium Wednesday, serious training will begin and daily workouts will be staged until the first match, scheduled tentatively before the Christmas holidays.

Durbin, Gragg, Chambers, and Moore, last year's letter-winners were present at the opening meeting and are expected to compete in their respective weights again this season. The rest of the squad is comprised of intramural competitors of last year and several new comers. Carl Edwards, Murphy Combs, Sam Paul, Wart, Baker, Frink, Whitcomb, Steedly, Frenza, Gough and French.

Coach Mosely's unfinished schedule finds the Wildcat ring aggregation against West Virginia, victors of the Wildcat leather slingers; a home and home meet with Xavier of Cincinnati, and a double encounter with the University of Tennessee ring men.

When the local boxers make their bows before the Kentucky fans they will be attired in newly-purchased boxing accoutrements which the Athletic Department has appropriated for the squad.

F. D. R. Third Term

ure of the farm program to maintain prices, and the failure of spending to absorb more of the unemployed had their effects and caused much reaction.

In reference to the foreign policy established under the President, Dr. Carter declared there would be no change resulting from the shift in political opinion.

"It is very doubtful that foreign policy will be altered, and if it is, it certainly won't be changed much. The New Deal stands for higher prices domestically; this necessitates a tariff. Secretary Hull's trade treaties seem to have popular approval.

"There were so many issues involved in the elections that it seems difficult to separate them. However, the vote shows the country is pacifistic, and this will have its effect on the government. That a reaction toward revolutionary tactics in this country and a definite expression of sentiment for non-interference and meddling in foreign affairs not vitally affecting this country certainly was evident quite generally in the recent elections."

Questioned on the future of the labor movement in the United States in light of last Tuesday's returns which turned against C. I. O. supported candidates in the states of Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio, Dr. Carter expressed the opinion that labor's future was not markedly handicapped.

"The defeat of labor in these states does not mean that unionism in a democracy must be evolutionary instead of revolutionary. There are hopeful signs for unionism in this country which will later be on a cooperative basis. The President's committee to study unionism in England reported that cooperation was the main item. Employers must cooperate and generally are becoming more distrustful of a good esprit-de-corps through peaceful negotiation.

With improved conditions, Dr. Carter said, the factors that caused a shift in opinion should level out and much reaction will subside.
