Dr. Carl Cone presented a memorial resolution on the death of Dr. A. D. Kirwan with the request that it be incorporated in the minutes of this meeting and that copies be sent to Mrs. Kirwan and to their sons, A. D. Kirwan, Jr., and William E. Kirwan, II. Following the reading of the resolution the Senators and visitors stood for a moment of silence in memory and respect for Dr. Kirwan and in acceptance of the resolution.

Albert Dennis Kirwan

Albert Dennis Kirwan, Professor of History, spent his distinguished career in furthering education in Kentucky where he lived all of his life. He was born in Louisville on December 22, 1904. He attended the Louisville schools and the University of Kentucky where he received his bachelor's degree in 1926. For the next decade he taught and coached football in Louisville Manual and Male high schools. During that time he earned the bachelor of law degree in the Jefferson School of Law. He returned in 1938 to the University of Kentucky where for six years he was head football coach. With a master's degree in history from the University of Louisville, he entered the Graduate School of Duke University which in 1947 conferred upon him the doctor of philosophy degree. Dr. Kirwan returned again to the University of Kentucky as Associate Professor of History and Dean of Men. In 1955 he resigned as Dean of Students to teach full time in history. By 1960 when the University called him again to serve in an administrative position, three books and several articles had established him as a leading authority in the history of the South and the American Middle period. Dr. Kirwan served as Dean of the Graduate School between 1960-1966, a time of spectacular growth whether measured by enrollment, financial support, or numbers and improved quality of graduate programs. Yet his own scholarly research continued. His biography of John J. Crittenden won the Hallam Prize, the Sydnor prize of the Southern Historical Association, and recognition from the Civil War Book Club and the History Book Club. When he returned full time to the History Department in 1966 he looked forward eagerly to teaching and writing. But the University would need him once more. During 1968-1969 he served in the difficult role of acting president at a time when academic life generally was filled with uncertainties, was confronted with demands for change, and when the University of Kentucky in particular had to defend itself (successfully) in the notorious Main Chance case. The importance to the University of the steady presence of Ab Kirwan and his wonderful wife Betty at Maxwell Place during that year cannot be overvalued. The Board of Trustees, with the undoubted approval of the University community and the people of Kentucky, recognized that service by conferring full presidential status upon him as the seventh president of the University.

When he resumed his professorship of History in 1969 Dr. Kirwan expected to enjoy six uninterrupted years of teaching and scholarship before retirement. He specifically requested the opportunity to teach freshmen. He resumed work on a biography of Henry Clay. The semester's leave of absence to which he was entitled as Distinguished Professor of the College of Arts and Sciences, 1967-68, was still owing to him, and he planned to take it during the spring semester, 1972, to work on the Clay biography.

He was thus looking ahead to new achievements when he died suddenly on November 30, 1971. If he had not paused to look backwards over his illustrious career, we may mention some of the honors accorded to him during the career just sketched. He was an outstanding athlete in football and track. Best known in the 1930's as a successful high school football coach in Louisville, he valued just as highly his work as a teacher of history. His football teams at the University of Kentucky compiled a very creditable record, especially considering the level of support given football at that time. As a scholar he was author of two well-received books, joint author of another, editor of three books, and a contributor to two others. Among many academic assignments he was chairman of the University of Kentucky Press Committee, chairman for six years of the Rules Infractions Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and in several ways was involved in the supervision and study of graduate education in the United States. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, and three historical associations. He was a Guggenheim Fellow and a Fulbright Lecturer at the University of Vienna. Within the University, he won an Alumni Research Award and an Alumni Teaching award. He was Hallam Professor of History, 1967-1969, and Distinguished Professor of Arts and Sciences, 1967-68. His name is listed in the Hall of Distinguished Alumni of the University of Kentucky.

These are matters of written record. In the record of our memories he was a strong, gentle, tolerant man. Love for people was the theme of his life. As a football coach, a classroom teacher, Dean of Students, Dean of the Graduate School, and President of the University, he enjoyed a unique variety of relationships with students; he knew students well, and he loved them. Each time he returned to full time teaching it was with the expectation of being free to give himself fully to students.

Though he did not seek out the administrative positions which took him away from the classroom, in each of these positions he saw opportunities of serving the University and the students. That was why he enjoyed every responsibility the University placed upon him. His love for people was limitless; it was this great love that made his life so useful and so happy and enriched the lives of all of us.

Mr. Scott Wendelsdorf presented the following motion to amend the University Senate Rules; page 41, Section III: 2. Requirements for Graduation --

"To be eligible for any degree, a student must have completed the requirements as approved by the University Senate, except that curriculum substitutions may be made by the college affected if not inconsistent with these Rules. Curriculum requirements must include, in addition to specified credits, a specified grade point average which shall in no case be less than 2.0. . . .

"The General Studies Component in every baccalaureate degree program shall consist of not more than five (5) areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas:

- (1) Mathematics-Philosophy
- (2) Physical Sciences
- (3) Biological Sciences
- (4) Foreign Languages
- (5) Humanities: Literature, Art and Music
- (6) History
- (7) Social Sciences
- (8) Behavioral Sciences"

Dr. Stanford Smith seconded the motion.

Following an explanation of the reasons for the proposed amendment, Mr. Wendelsdorf yielded the floor to Dr. Staley Adams, Secretary of the Senate Council. On behalf of the Senate Council, Dr. Adams presented the following friendly amendment to Mr. Wendelsdorf's proposed amendment. This proposed amendment to the amendment had been handed to the Senators as they entered the meeting:

"The General Studies Component in every baccalaureate degree program shall consist of not more than five (5) - (the exact number to be determined by each college) areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas:

- (1) Mathematics - Philosophy
- (2) Physical Sciences
- (3) Biological Sciences
- (4) Foreign Languages
- (5) Humanities: Literature, Art and Music
- (6) History
- (7) Social Sciences
- (8) Behavioral Sciences

"The Rules shall be waived only to the extent that they are inconsistent with certification or accreditation requirements."

Dr. Adams stated that it should be noted that this proposal from the Senate Council encompasses both the proposed change by the forwarding group and adds two important amendments, that of the college determining the exact number to five, and also the waiver, whenever required, for certification and accreditation requirements; that there are both colleges and departments that have certain requirements which would not fit this rule.

The motion was seconded.

Following discussion in which Senators pointed out that there are problems of required courses for majors, Dr. Stanford Smith requested a division of the question and that the Senate vote on the amendment in two sections: (1) on the question of whether the student has a choice and (2) on the question of the number of areas. He stated that he had sought the judgment of the Parliamentarian who had ruled that this request was not debatable, not amendable and did not require the prior decision of the Chairman.

This request of Dr. Smith's was seconded.

A Senator raised a point of order that the only thing being discussed was the amendment to the amendment and not the original amendment. The Chairman ruled that the original amendment was being discussed since the initial proposer, Mr. Wendelsdorf, had accepted the amendment as presented by Dr. Adams; thus, the only amendment then on the floor and under discussion was Dr. Adam's proposed amendment which Dr. Smith had requested be divided into two sections to be voted on separately.

Following extensive discussions both for and against the question of student choice, Dr. William Plucknett offered the following substitute motion to the amendment:

that the status quo on General Studies requirements be maintained for the spring semester, 1972; that each undergraduate college awarding the baccalaureate degree reevaluate its general studies requirements and forward its recommendations to the Senate Council by February 1, 1972 with copies to the Undergraduate Council, the Academic Council for the Medical Center, as appropriate, to be placed on the agenda of the University Senate for its regular March meeting.

The Chairman ruled this motion out of order; that the motion on the floor was that of student choice. The Parliamentarian supported the ruling by the Chairman.

The debate then returned to the action on the floor, that of student choice of areas of study.

After further discussion, Dr. Raymond Smith moved the previous question. This was a cloture motion and required a two-thirds vote. The Senate voted 88 to 30 to close discussion on the matter of student choice.

On question of what the Senate was being asked to vote on the Chairman stated that the question on the floor to be voted on was the following section of the amendment presented by Dr. Adams, namely:

" . . . areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas: . . ."

Following further discussion call was made for a roll call vote on this part of the amendment. By a roll call vote of 68 for, 45 against, with 16 abstentions, the Senate voted to approve that portion of the amendment which had been presented by Dr. Adams and which it had been discussing, namely,

" . . . areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas: . . ."

The Chairman then opened the floor for discussion on the second part of the amendment, that of the question of the number of areas, which reads as follows:

"The General Studies Component in every baccalaureate degree program shall consist of not more than five (5) - (the exact number to be determined by each college). . ."

Following more discussion Professor Rea presented an amendment to strike the words "not more than" and all of the material in parentheses which follows those words. It would then read as follows:

"The General Studies Component in every baccalaureate degree program shall consist of five (5) areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas: . . ."

Further discussion ensued after which Mr. Wendelsdorf moved that the Senate vote on closing debate on the question of number of areas. The Senate approved the motion on cloture.

The Senate then approved Professor Rea's amendment to strike the words "not more than" and all of the material in parentheses which follows those words. As approved it now reads:

"The General Studies Component in every baccalaureate degree program shall consist of five (5) areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas: . . ."

Up to this point, the University Senate had voted to change the University Senate Rules as follows:

"The General Studies Component in every baccalaureate degree program shall consist of five (5) areas of study chosen by the student from the following eight (8) areas:

- (1) Mathematics-Philosophy
- (2) Physical Sciences
- (3) Biological Sciences
- (4) Foreign Languages
- (5) Humanities: Literature, Art and Music
- (6) History
- (7) Social Sciences
- (8) Behavioral Sciences

Dr. Rea raised the question of implementation date for the approved change.

At this point a point of order was raised that the Senate had not voted on the amendment as amended. The Parliamentarian stated that the Senate had already voted on it. A Senator responded that they should have had a choice of also being permitted to cast a vote "for at least five", a motion which Dr. Stanford Smith had proposed earlier in the meeting and, as a result of discussion which followed, had, with the consent of the seconder, withdrawn from the floor. During the confusion that this generated the Chairman asked for a vote on the amendment as amended and the Senate approved it.

Dr. Ockerman spoke to the question of implementation date and stated that we are past the deadline in all academic areas for inclusion in the next issue of the General Catalog and if it is expected that this would be included in the next issue, it would delay its issuance into the late summer of 1972; that the deadline for inclusion in the Class Schedule for Fall, 1972 is approximately March 1, 1972. He also pointed out that all but about 1500 students had already registered for the 1972 spring semester; that in order to give academic areas time to review and determine what their requirements are going to be he did not see how it could possibly be implemented before the 1972 Fall Semester.

Motion was made and seconded to adjourn. Motion was then made and seconded for a roll call vote. The motion for a roll call vote was disapproved.

Motion was made for a quorum call. It was determined that a quorum was present.

The Chairman then ruled that the motion to adjourn be voted on. The Senate approved that motion.

Adjournment occurred at 5:30 p.m.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Members, University Senate

FROM: Scott Wendelsdorf, Senator

SUBJECT: Clarification of Agenda Item for Senate Meeting, December 13, 1971
Proposing Change in the Senate Rules Regarding the General Studies
Component

It has become apparent that several Senators have misinterpreted the proposed amendment to change the General Studies Component. After re-examining the motion, I tend to agree that some ambiguity is present.

Corrective amendments will be offered from the floor, but I would like to explain briefly the intent behind the motion.

Presently, every baccalaureate degree program must include a General Studies Component consisting of at least 5 of 8 areas of study, (1) Mathematics-Philosophy, (2) Physical Sciences, (3) Biological Sciences, (4) Foreign Languages, (5) Humanities: Literature, Art and Music, (6) History, (7) Social Sciences, (8) Behavioral Sciences. Each college now decides both how many of the 8 areas a student must take and which areas he or she must take e.g. the Arts and Sciences language requirement. Under the amendment this will be changed. Under this proposal, two things will happen: (1) each college will be able to require no more than 5 of the 8 areas of study for graduation; (2) most importantly, the student, not the college, will choose which areas she or he will take to satisfy the requirement. In short, while the present rule allows the college to determine both how many and which of the 8 areas of study a student must take, the amendment will allow the college to choose only the number of areas required (but not more than 5) and the student will determine which areas. A student may take a greater number of areas than required by the college but not less. Colleges determine number of areas. Students determine which areas.
