They Have Earned Their "L" for Loyalty

The Loyalty Fund chairman has set $10,000 as the goal for the drive this year, but unless more enthusiasm is shown in the immediate future, we will fall far short of the goal.

It will not take a tremendous effort on the part of any individual if each one of us assumes a small part of the responsibility for the success of the drive. Neither will it take large amounts of money from each individual alumnus—all we are asking is that everyone participates—to the extent that thousands of alumni may feel a personal sense of accomplishment when the goal has been reached.

The Loyalty Fund drive for 1948-49 MUST go over the top if we are to continue the alumni scholarship established last year. Let's not fail our Alma Mater now!

A. B. Chandler, '24, to Speak at Alumni Banquet

Reunions for 15 Classes Planned

A. B. Chandler, LL.B., '24, Commissioner of Baseball and former U. S. Senator and Governor of Kentucky, will be the speaker at the annual banquet of the Alumni Association to be held Thursday evening, June 2, at 6:30 p. m., in the Bluegrass Room of the Student Union.

The speech by Commissioner Chandler will highlight a day of activities for the 15 classes which are scheduled for reunions this June, and for the large group of 50-year or better graduates who have been invited back to their Alma Mater to receive Golden Jubilee certificates during the commencement exercises.

Classes scheduled for regular reunions this June are: 1890, '91; 1907, '08, '09 and '10; 1926, '27, '28 and '29; and 1945, '46 and '47. In addition special reunions are being held for the classes of 1899 and 1924, which are celebrating their fiftieth and twenty-fifth reunions, respectively.

Commencement week at the University will open with baccalaureate services on Sunday afternoon, May 29, and conclude with the 82nd annual commencement exercises, Friday night, June 3. Thursday, June 2, will be alumni day, and will feature special class luncheons at noon; the alumni tea to be given by President and Mrs. Donovan at 4:00 that afternoon in the gardens of Maxwell Place; and the annual banquet that evening, followed by the annual meeting of the Alumni Association, at which the new officers will be announced.

Class cards will be placed on the tables at the banquet for reunion classes, and again on Friday at the commencement luncheon, which is scheduled for noon in the Bluegrass Room.

Commencement is set for Friday, June 3, at 7:30 p. m., on Stoll field, and it will be during this program that the Golden Jubilee certificates will be presented. None will be given in absentia, so all fifty-year or better graduates are urged to return for the commencement festivities in June.

Class banners are being made for reunion classes to carry in the commencement procession, and it is urged that all alumni who attend the commencement exercises participate in the academic procession, whether or not they are members of reunion classes.

If you are planning to come back, please notify the Alumni office in time for us to make your dinner and luncheon reservations for you, and if you are interested in your class holding a special luncheon meeting on Thursday, or on the Wednesday preceding, please notify your class secretary at once. Letters have been sent out from the office to all members of reunion classes whose correct addresses are on file.

Bryant Speaks To Detroit Alumni

Is March Club Guest

Head Football Coach Paul Bryant was the guest speaker at the March 11 meeting of the Detroit Alumni Club of the University of Kentucky, held at Huyler's in the Fisher Bldg.

Kentucky's head man discussed the Wildcat football team for 1949, what the prospects are and what the alumni can do in assisting the coaching staff. A large group was on hand to welcome the grid mentor, including C. A. (Tim) Temerario, head line coach of the Detroit Lions, who was a special guest of the Detroit Club for the occasion.

A social gathering at 6:30 preceded the dinner at 7:00 p. m. In addition to the speech by Coach Bryant and a brief business meeting, door prizes were distributed to members and guests.

REVENIR!

We've gathered a French bouquet of Forget-Me-Nots and Rosemary to send to you this bright May morning. A small bouquet of memories, designed to make the sap rise in your veins and to remind you that the first week-end in June is set aside for your enjoyment on the campus of your Alma Mater.

For June 2 and 3 are reunion days at the University of Kentucky; days dedicated to the renewal of old friendships, the strengthening of old ties, the revival of old memories.

Many special events, designed to please you and to make your visit happy, have been planned by the Alumni Association for Reunion Week. They are outlined in detail in other columns of the ALUMNUS, but our purpose here is to rouse in you the nostalgia for old scenes, old friends, which brooks no refusal; a feeling of longing which will drive you back, with relentless urge, to your Alma Mater in June.

Don't postpone the happy hours. Next year, or the next, may be too late. Other days, other times may raise new barriers which will prevent your return. Now is the appointed time to keep your rendezvous with youth!

THE COVER

When the season ended for the fabulous Kentucky Wildcats in March, Coach Rupp announced that the five uniforms, pictured with their wearers on the cover, would never be reissued. These jerseys will be placed in a trophy case in the new Memorial Coliseum, for future generations to see—and admire. The numerals, and the men who have made them famous are: top row, left to right: No. 26, Kenny Rollins; No. 12, Ralph Beard; center, No. 15, Alex Groza; bottom row, usual order, No. 27, Wallace Jones; No. 23, Cliff Barker.

Photos and layout by Mack Hughes and Ben Williams.

Adele Garrard Denham, '46, of Nicholasville, received the degree Master of Fine Arts from the State University of Iowa Feb. 5. Subject for her thesis was: "Adam Newman Had No Mammy" and other stories.

These men and women completed their undergraduate work in the Nineties and before, and in honor of them the University of Kentucky Alumni Association honors them and the institution it represents.

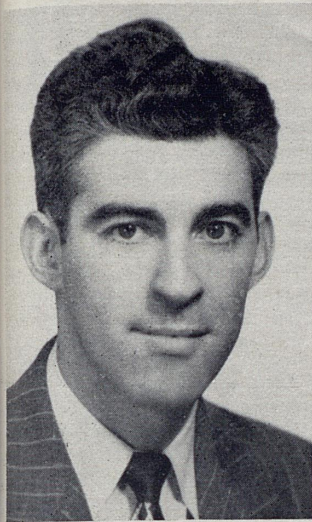

Initiating the plan this year, the Alumni Association has asked President H. L. Donovan to present Golden Jubilee certificates to these graduates of another era, and the presentation will be made from the commencement platform on the night of June 3.

No certificates will be presented in absentia, as the Association feels that the presence of these men and women at commencement would lend added dignity and distinction to an already impressive ceremony.

The KENTUCKY ALUMNUS congratulates the graduates of fifty years or better, expresses to them the deep gratitude of the Alumni Association for their never-failing support, and hopes that, through this tangible evidence of appreciation, these men and women will know that their devotion to Alma Mater is a legend which will be forever preserved by succeeding generations.

Looking Backward Fifty Years

LOOKING BACKWARD
W. T. Wellman, former University student, now chief architect for the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

LOOKING FORWARD
W. T. Wellman as a Kentucky State College cadet, 1897.

On January 2, 1899, a "scared little farmer boy" from Daviess county enrolled in the Kentucky State College on a county scholarship. Looking back, fifty years later, from his distinguished position as general architect for the Union Pacific Railroad Company, William T. Wellman, the little farmer boy, reminisces.

"I was the most scared farmer boy that ever came to Lexington," writes Mr. Wellman. "It was like stepping out of a tobacco patch into a glamorous city. I did not recover from this embarrassment for some time which accounts for low grades in some of my classes. Although I was the proud possessor of a county scholarship, I found that my previous training had been sadly neglected, partly due to incompetent teachers in the rural districts at that time.

"At the time I entered the University, my parents were struggling to pay for a half section of land at Masonville, Daviess county, by selling tobacco at $3.50 per 100 pounds and corn and wheat at 30 cents per bushel. The task of sending me to college seemed impossible, and with declining prices in 1900 I was compelled to give up my studies and I went to work with the Henry Voght Machine Company, at Louisville. I remained there for two years and in 1902, since I had decided to become an architect, I entered the University of Illinois, architecture not being taught at Kentucky at that time.

"My first instructor at KSC was our beloved Colonel Graham, later dean of engineering. I shall always remember his painstaking efforts to teach me the art of good drafting. . . . I have always regretted very much that the University of Kentucky did not teach architecture in those early days so that I may have continued my studies and graduated."

Mr. Wellman is a licensed architect in the states of Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. He has designed buildings in New York, Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Portland, Seattle, and Sun Valley. He is listed in the National Encyclopedia of American Biography, Volume F, 1942 edition, the selection being made because of his work as architect at Sun Valley, Idaho, and has just been notified of his listing in the 1949 edition of "Who's Who In Railroadng."

He plans to come back to the campus for class reunions this June.

Harry Louis Kirkpatrick, of Hopkinsville, mining engineering student at the University, was presented a gold watch last February in recognition of his high scholastic achievements.

The Old Timers' Club, an organization of coal mining executives and mining equipment manufacturers, made the award at an Engineering College convocation.

"Kirk" is the nephew of R. L. Kirkpatrick of Russellville, former University student, and a cousin of John A. Whitaker, 2nd district congressman and loyal alumnus.

Cornerstone Laid for U. K.'s "Memorial Coliseum"

The University of Kentucky has reached maturity but it can not continue to grow and progress unless the commonwealth's economic opportunities are developed further, Gov. Earle C. Clements declared February 22 at a UK Founders Day convocation.

"The University is in business, the business of being an instrumentality of the state. We regard the University of Kentucky as a great reservoir upon whose resources we may continue to draw for the state's progress," Gov. Clements told a capacity Memorial-hall audience.

Cornerstone-laying services for UK's new field house, now being erected, followed the convocation.

Dr. Herman L. Donovan, president of the University, announced at these services that he plans to ask the Board of Trustees to consider the name "Memorial Coliseum" for the multi-million dollar project in honor of Kentucky's 9,445 men and women who died in World War II.

In his address, the governor stressed the close-knit ties between public progress and public education and emphasized that future advancement depends on continued growth and prosperity.

He traced briefly the 84-year development of the institution and credited much of its success to the foresight of its founders and a succession of capable administrators.

"I would like history to record that under the administration of President Donovan, the University of Kentucky reached maturity," Gov. Clements asserted.

However, the school's task is greater than ever, he warned, and education must be the means of conserving the state's human resources. One of its chief objectives must be the establishment of diversified employment for the youth of Kentucky to keep them from migrating to Eastern and Northern industrial centers.

With this challenge in mind the state has called in experts in many fields to study the possibilities of Kentucky's natural resources. Experiments and research are being pushed in coal, oil, business, engineering and numerous other fields seeking not only to uncover new wealth but also to find new uses for that on hand, he stated.

"The challenge goes beyond our generation. It reaches the generation now approaching maturity, the generation that is now in the classrooms at the University . . . That generation is challenged to discover, to explore. I hope that new generations of Kentuckians will not be content to expend its genius in the mills or factories of some state other than Kentucky," Gov. Clements averred.

Following the convocation, the state's chief executive joined Dr. Donovan and former Gov. Keen Johnson in the cornerstone-laying services on Euclid avenue.

Speaking in a drizzling rain, Dr. Donovan revealed his proposed name for the structure:

"It is a worthy memorial to the 9,445 Kentuckians who sacrificed their lives for their country in World War II. In this building, when it is completed, will be inscribed the name of each of them. This memorial is evidence that a grateful state has not forgotten, and as a tribute to those honored dead, I shall recommend to the Board of Trustees at its next meeting that this building be officially named the Memorial Coliseum, and that it be dedicated to their memory."

Other special Founders' Day features included classroom lectures on University history and traditions, and a transcribed radio broadcast, featuring talks by President Donovan, Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, University vice president, and Miss Margie McLaughlin, '03, beloved alumna and journalism professor, which was sent to 23 Kentucky stations.

Nancy D. Lewis, '32, Dean at Pembroke

Miss Nancy Duke Lewis, a native of Lexington, Ky., and a former staff member of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, has been named acting dean of Pembroke College for the academic year, 1949-50.

Miss Lewis, who has been dean of students at Pembroke since 1947, will replace Dean Margaret S. Morriss, while the latter is on leave of absence for the year.

A mathematics graduate of the University of Kentucky with both B.A. and M.A. degrees (1932 and 1933 respectively) Miss Lewis is responsible for organizing the present system of counseling at Pembroke, a method particularly beneficial to freshmen in choosing their courses and ironing out difficulties of an academic nature. Miss Lewis came to Pembroke first in 1943 as social director and soon was promoted to assistant dean. She is the first to have held the position of dean of students at the college, where she is also a member of the mathematics department faculty. She is also this year's president of the Rhode Island branch of the American Association of University Women.

A Phi Beta Kappa member, she belongs to the National Association

Recipients of the award will be selected, Dean Terrell said, through the regular competitive examinations given those who apply for scholarships in highway engineering. As with the Highway Department scholarships, students receiving the Dawson award will alternate between periods of study at the University and practical work in the field. In this case, the student will work with the Dawson Bridge Company.

Red Cross Honors Dr. W. A. Duncan, '97

The Logan county (Ky.) chapter of the American Red Cross has recognized Dr. William A. Duncan, '97, of Russellville, for his unique contribution as a volunteer worker by electing him an honorary director of the chapter.

During the war years and those following, Dr. Duncan, retired Army lieutenant colonel and Russellville physician and surgeon, has devoted much of his time to knitting sweaters for the service men and for veterans in hospitals.

Interrupted often by critical illness and periods of hospitalization, Dr. Duncan worked so tirelessly that he has completed 250 sweaters, a large number of them having been made for the local chapter. During vacation and convalescence in Washington, D. C., and in Florida, other chapters have benefitted by his efforts.

During the war period, when surgical dressings were vital, Dr. Duncan also gave many hours of constructive work in preparing and assembling materials in the work rooms and in the making of dressings. Besides these more important contributions he has given invaluable assistance in the campaigns to raise funds for the local and national work.

Dr. Duncan's three children, William A., Jr., George and Mary are all graduates of the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Joseph Roemer, '14, formerly of Bowling Green, Ky., Dean of Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., left Peabody Dec. 1 to enter upon a two-year term as director of teacher training in the American Zone of Occupied Germany.

He went to Peabody upon his graduation from the University of Kentucky, first as a graduate student, then as principal of the Demonstration School. In 1915 he became head of the Department of Education, Sam Houston State Teachers College, Huntsville, Texas. He was granted the first Ph.D. degree from Peabody in 1919. He returned to Peabody in June, 1931, and has been there ever since.

Stahr, Jr., dean of the University of Kentucky College of Law, by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce and its national magazine, Future. Selection of Dean Stahr for this award was announced Jan. 16 by the magazine's editor, Raymond E. Roberts.

A native of Hickman, Ky., Dean Stahr was graduated from the University in 1936 with what was described as the "finest and best record in UK's history." He then studied law as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University in England where he received three degrees: Bachelor of Arts in Jurisprudence (1938), Bachelor of Civil Law (1939), and Master of Arts (1943).

U. K. Graduate Now at Work on Swiss Paper

A recent University of Kentucky journalism graduate is finding that the life of an American newspaperman is highly interesting but full of complications.

He is Crawford Ferguson who was graduated from UK last August and who is now associate managing editor of the Swiss Reporter, an English language weekly in Geneva, Switzerland. In a recent letter to Dr. Niel Plummer, head of the University journalism department, Ferguson relates the tribulations of publishing a newspaper in a foreign land.

A big headache was provided by the Swiss government, he writes, when it granted permission to publish the paper but refused to allow its sale. That difficulty was hardly straightened out when the travel editor, an Austrian DP, was declared persona non grata and for a time was in danger of being forced out of the country.

The translator, Ferguson explains, is the most vital member of the staff because many of the paper's correspondents in other cities are unable to write in English. In addition to his other duties, the former UK student is attempting to teach his European reporters some of the principles of news writing, American style.

Swiss libel laws apparently were not meant to be enforced, he reports. "Though Swiss papers can accuse a man of murder and get away with it," he writes, "we adhere to American ethical standards."

Swiss printers, too, are slow and know little about American type faces, and the conservative businessmen are not easily convinced of the power of advertising.

The task of publishing the Swiss Reporter requires a great deal of versatility on the part of its staff members. Ferguson covers the American and British consular offices in Geneva, and at various times has served as copy reader, make-up editor, proofreader, advertising solicitor and sports editor.

Ferguson was graduated from the University last August "with distinction" and with departmental honors.

The Day the Fayette County Court House Burned

I spent four years at Kentucky State College, now University of Kentucky, graduating in the summer of 1899 with degree of Bachelor of Civil Engineering.

An incident that stands out most clearly in my mind occurred one day while the engineering class was at field practice in triangulation. We had established a base line on the campus out in front of the old "Main Building" and were checking the accuracy of one of the city limit marker stones on Limestone street in front of the campus. The City of Lexington was then laid out in a circle of one mile radius, the center being the spire of the Fayette County Court House. In our triangulations survey it was necessary to take sights, with an engineer's transit instrument, on the spire of the Court House.

On May 14, 1897, while we were so engaged, we observed smoke issuing from the windows in the Court House dome. It was soon apparent, as could be plainly seen through the instrument, that the Court House was on fire. We dropped everything and ran to the fire. It was a terrific fire and the building was completely gutted. In the rotunda under the dome was the famous white marble statue "Woman Triumphant" executed by Hart. The falling dome crushed and destroyed it beyond repair.

After the fire cooled down a little there was a scramble for souvenirs, small pieces of the statue. Many were recovered, but one small piece was never turned in.

"Fabulous Five" Complete Greatest Season

'Cats Cop N.C.A.A. Crown in Repeater

by Ken Kuhn
Sports Publicity Director

Winner . . . and still world's champions!

Adopting the lingo of the boxing world, that phrase might well sum up the extraordinary season recorded in sports annals by the fabulous University of Kentucky Wildcat basketball team of 1948-49.

Hundreds of thousands of fans across the nation will long remember the greatest cage aggregation ever assembled under the colors of an American college or university in the modern history of the Naismith sport. A veteran Lexington sportswriter, summing up the drawing power and accomplishments of the "forty-niners," declared "They'll still be talking about this team when they're old enough to have long, white beards."

And why not? By way of earning their rights to the highest laurels passed out in the basketball world, the Wildcats ended a triumphant season with a thrilling repeat victory in the top national tournament of the year—the NCAA—and copped more individual honors than ever were heaped on one group of cage stars before.

Adding to the greatness of their accomplishments, the Rupp Raiders were marked men—both individually and as a team—throughout the season and the target for inspired, upset-minded squads determined to raise their own rating by fine showings against the defending NCAA and Olympic champions.

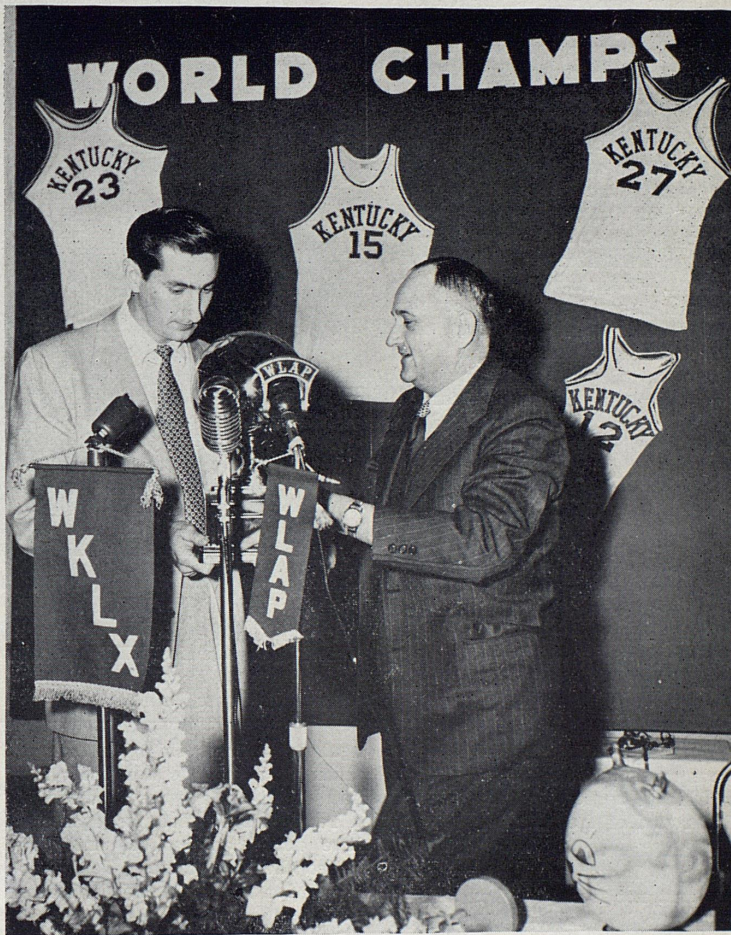

Bouncing back from their only regular-season upset at the hands of the St. Louis Billikens in the jinxed Sugar Bowl classic at year's end and an "off night" disaster levied on them by an inspired Loyola of Chicago team in the first round of the National Invitation tourney, the classy Bluegrass cagers earned the choicest superlatives of national sports writers as they thawed out the "deep freeze" tactics of an old nemesis—Oklahoma A. & M.—in the finals of the NCAA tourney at Seattle, Wash., and won their second straight national title.

Led by a scoring madman in the person of Capt. Alex Groza and supported by the stalwarts Cliff Barker and Wah Wah Jones, the 'Cats crushed the Aggies' famed defense to win going away by the score of 46-36. Big Al completely out-classed the Cowpokes' Bob Harris, rated as "the best defensive center in America," to pour in 25 points and frustrate his opponent so that the

Groza Named "Most Valuable"

"Big Al" Groza's own teammates, for the second consecutive year, designated him the most valuable member of the squad and thereby won for him the Jerome Lederer trophy presented annually by the Lexington businessman to the outstanding senior athlete, as selected by team members. The Presentation was made by Coach Rupp at the Alumni Association's annual banquet, honoring the team. On the day of the banquet, April 4, Groza was notified by the Helms Foundation that he had been chosen the 1948-49 player for the Helms Hall of Fame, and that the Kentucky team had been designated the official No. 1 team of the nation for the year.

Fabulous Five

Aggies were without his services as the result of personal fouls after four minutes had elapsed in the second half. For his outstanding play, Groza was awarded a unanimous selection as "Player of the Tournament," the second consecutive year he had earned the "most valuable" title.

The only regret uppermost in the minds of the champions as they jubilantly celebrated their victory was that they lost their only opportunity to become immortal in the sports world by completing a grand slam sweep of both national tournaments.

One of the greatest collegiate combinations of all time, the Wildcat stars were honored by promoters of both the major post-season basketball classics—the National Invitation and NCAA tournaments—with invitations to participate. Extension of the coveted invitations marked the first time that a collegiate quintet had been chosen to play in both the rival tournaments in the same year. It was a challenge that recognized the superiority and greatness of Kentucky's basketeers and the Ruppmen were anxious to live up to the confidence placed in them.

Possibly the tension and excitement was too much even for the travel-weary, Olympics-veteran Bluegrass cagers for the outcome of their initial game of the two-tournament trial was disheartening. The "Man o' War" team, overwhelmingly an odds-on favorite to accomplish what no other quintet had ever been asked to try, lost a close contest to an inspired Loyola of Chicago aggregation 56-67 in the first round of the NIT.

Again the cry arose, "What happened?" It was not criticism. . . . At least not from the thousands of fans who had followed Kentucky's cage destinies during the season. They had no grounds to criticize, for only a two-point margin (a 40-42 upset at the hands of St. Louis) stood between the 'Cats and a perfect season; the team had been on top in national ratings during the entire season; they had traveled throughout the south, midwest and east defending their multiple crown (SEC, NCAA, and Olympic Games)

The Long and the Short of It!

When Kentucky played Bradley in Owensboro, one of the most enthusiastic rooters for Kentucky was Stan Burlew of that city, former University student whose wife (Lillian Berry Clark, of Lexington) also attended UK.

Here he is, greeting "Big Al" at the Country Club reception following the game.

against the best collegiate competition that could be mustered; they had ended the regular season with a record of 29 victories against a lone defeat and subsequently annexed the Southeastern Conference crown for the sixth straight season.

The answer, in the minds of most experts, was that Kentucky was virtually invincible when "hot," but on an "off night" against an inspired and better-than-average club anything might happen—and all too frequently does.

Downhearted but undaunted, Coach Rupp gathered his men off the sidewalks of New York and made a strategic withdrawal back to the Bluegrass for rest and strategy planning before renewing the assault on national honors.

Returning one week later refreshed and with a slightly revamped lineup, the Wildcats showed flashes of their real form as they walloped a very good Villanova team 85-72 in the first round of the NCAA Eastern Division tourney at Madison Square Garden. The victory was impressive, New York sports writers admitted, but the real test would be against Big Ten Champion Illinois.

Going to work with almost fanatical zest to regain lost laurels and to humiliate the class of the "Holy Land," the old left-handed

Jim Line and towering Al Groza led a devastating attack that left the fighting Illini helpless on the ropes—a thoroughly defeated and stunned aggregation. The final score of 76-47 did not begin to indicate the sharpness with which the Wildcats dug their claws into the Big Ten champs, as Oklahoma A. & M. was to find out in Seattle a few days later.

Almost overlooked in the rash of post-season tournament play was the Kentucky repeat victory in another tourney—the Southeastern Conference classic at Louisville which preceded the national tests. Defending a record of 59 consecutive victories against league competition and five straight SEC titles, together with the national invitations which depended upon victory in the conference play, the Kentuckians were in no mood to trifle as they breezed through all opposition in waltz time. Swept aside were Florida 73-36, Auburn 70-39, Tennessee 83-44, and Tulane 68-52.

The champs were so heavily favored in the event that one Southern sports editor quipped the suggestion prior to the opening of the SEC title race that Kentucky should be awarded the crown summarily and the remaining teams in the league compete for second place honors. Understandably, no such action was taken, for all rival coaches realized the prestige to be gained from playing the number one team in the nation. SEC officialdom also took heart in the knowledge that Kentucky's cage dynasty might well come to an end after the loss this year of outstanding stars Alex Groza, Wah Wah Jones, Ralph Beard and Cliff Barker.

At the same time, strangely enough, there was the underlying feeling of pride among the conference coaches, players and officials at the heights to which the Wildcats had risen in the space of four years and the honors attained by the stars. Many felt honored to compete against Groza, Beard and Jones—three-time All-Americans—and Barker, the most under-rated player ever to perform on a championship club. Most of the other players on Kentucky's team also would be All-Americans on lesser teams.

During the current year, the Associated Press named Groza and Beard to the first team of an All-American squad selected by editors and sports writers around the nation and cited Jones high on the second team. Barker gained honorable mention. United Press named Beard, Groza and Jones on the first team of its honor selections. Numerous other magazines and polls recognized the fabulous four. Sport magazine chose Groza as the "Player of the Year" for 1948, Chicago sports writers named him the most outstanding performer to appear in Chicago Stadium, and he was selected as the "Player of the Tournament" at the Seattle finals of the NCAA. Everybody's All-American Ralph Beard succeeded in making Collier's honor team, while teammate Groza was mysteriously omitted from a six-man squad that included four centers.

Playing behind such highly-publicized stars as Groza, Beard and Jones, it was hard for old reliable Cliff Barker to gain the recognition he deserved. The experts obviously could not understand how there could be four stars on one team, let alone three. But loyal fans will surely remember the contributions he made and, when the All-American roll is called "up yonder," Barker is sure to be included.

Owensboro Greets Ky. Wildcats

When Kentucky played Bradley Tech in basketball the early part of February, the teams met in the new Sports Center in Owensboro, Ky., and were the first college teams to play in the fine arena.

Following the game, in true Kentucky style, a reception was held for the teams and followers at the Owensboro Country Club. Seen above, are some of the visitors and hosts.

UK Retires Five Numbers At Alumni Cage Banquet

By Babe Kimbrough, '29
Sports Editor, The Herald

Never again will Kentucky basketball fans see the numbers 23, 15, 27, 12 or 26 on the jerseys of Wildcat players.

These numbers—worn by Cliff Barker, Alex Groza, Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones, Ralph Beard and Kenny Rollins as they won fame and glory and three national championships on the cage court—were retired April 4.

Discontinuance of the use of the numbers was announced by Coach Adolph Rupp as approximately 600 fans paid tribute to the championship UK basketball team at a banquet sponsored by the University's Alumni Association in the Student Union.

The jerseys of these five great players will be placed under glass in the new Memorial field house which is now under construction, Coach Rupp said.

The four seniors, Jones, Beard, Groza and Barker, completed their collegiate competition by defeating the Oklahoma Aggies for the NCAA championship in Seattle, while Rollins was graduated last year. All five were members of the victorious United States Olympic squad last summer.

This was only one of the highlights of a well-highlighted program as the record crowd turned out to pay tribute to the great Wildcat team and bring to a close a day-long celebration which had included a parade and exercises on the University campus.

Declaring this had been a great year because he had had a great team, Coach Rupp said: "Although we have these four great seniors, I like to think of the team as seven men because we couldn't have won without Dale Barnstable, Jim Line and Walter Hirsch."

Then he announced that he had recommended to the Athletic Board that only seven letters be awarded to players—the smallest number given at Kentucky in recent years.

Coach Rupp also set at rest rumors that he might enter the field of professional basketball, rumors which have been prevalent for the past two years. However, he felt some doubt as to just how much longer he might stay in the coaching profession.

"I sometimes wonder if I want to go on and build another team like this," he declared. "I have thought that I might like to quit in June, too."

Then he added: "I am not going into professional basketball. I have made my reputation here and I will accept no other coaching assignments."

For the second year in succession Alex Groza, Kentucky's three-times All-American center, was named by his teammates as the most valuable player and was awarded the Jerome Lederer Trophy, presented annually by Lederer, a Lexington businessman and ardent Wildcat supporter.

Prior to Coach Rupp's talk, Dr. H. L. Donovan, University president, lauded the Wildcats as the greatest basketball team in history and described Rupp as the greatest coach of the century.

"They are known throughout the nation and have brought more publicity to the University, to Lexington and to Kentucky than any other organization," he said.

Only other speaker on the program was John Bullock of Cincinnati, president of the Alumni Association, who paid tribute to the team and awarded citations on behalf of the group to sportscasters and sportswriters who have publicized the Kentucky cage team this past season.

Athletic Director Bernie Shively presided, awarded letters to the four seniors, Barnstable, Line, Hirsch, and Manager Humzey Yessin and presented gifts to the seniors on behalf of the Alumni Association. Other members of the squad were recognized.

Prior to the round of speeches, a program of songs was presented by Roselyn Marquis and Bill Pickett of Radio Station WHAS, and Kenny Rollins, with Bob James as pianist, Phil Sutterfield, sportscaster for the station, served as master of ceremonies.

The banquet, one of the most lavish and most successful ever staged at the University, was arranged by Miss Helen King, executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

Wildcat appreciation day opened early the morning of the banquet, and a huge parade, sponsored by the Lexington Chamber of Commerce and city officials, ended on the University campus where a platform had been erected for the program.

President H. L. Donovan was the first speaker introduced by Chamber of Commerce President Bert Oram, and he was followed by Mayor Tom Mooney and William Greathouse, chairman of Wildcat Appreciation Day for the Commerce group.

Charles Kenney, ardent Wildcat supporter and University alumnus, presented to Coach Rupp, in the name of the Chamber of Commerce, a certificate of appreciation, and Coach Rupp then introduced the team.

Four representatives of the public and parochial schools of Lexington and Fayette county then presented to Capt. Alex Groza a miniature of the life-size photographic mural which will be hung in the new memorial coliseum, commemorating this great team. The mural will be paid for from a "penny fund" contributed by the school children.

Captain Groza then presented the mural to Athletic Director B. A. Shively, to be hung in the new field house.

Final feature of the program was the presentation of gifts to the coaches and squad in the name of the citizens of Lexington. The presentation was made by Louis Ades, Lexington businessman and enthusiastic team supporter.

Marguerite McLaughlin, '03, professor of journalism and former alumni secretary, was chairman of the program committee.

THE KENTUCKY ALUMNUS

'Cats End Season with Twenty-five Wins, One Loss

By KEN KUHN,
Sports Publicity Director

There was but one thought uppermost in the minds of Kentucky's fabulous basketeers as they rang down the final curtain on the 1948-49 season in a blaze of glory that had vocabularly-exhausted sportswriters and radio announcers searching for new superlatives with which to describe their performance. That thought was revenge of their 40-42 defeat by St. Louis in the Sugar Bowl.

Surprisingly enough, the Wildcats' thoughts were not exactly harking back over the fantastic, 65-foot long shot eased through the hoop in the final 12 seconds of the season-closing Vanderbilt game by amazing, "Ol' Reliable" Cliff Barker—a shot which set a new distance record in Alumni Gym and may have been the longest ever completed in the South.

Strangely, the "Fabulous Five" probably weren't thinking of the wonderful co-operation Capt. Alex Groza got in his successful assault on the Southeastern Conference individual season scoring record—the big pivotman climaxed a record-breaking season by dunking in 23 points to bring his season total to 508 and surpass the previous mark of 504 held by Country Graham of Mississippi since 1938.

Another postscript thought which undoubtedly never occurred to the Kentuckians that memorable night of February 26, 1949, was the lamentable fact that "Big Al" has yet to be recognized on the all-Conference honor team—despite a record that includes two successive years as an all-American selection, nomination as the most outstanding player in last year's NCAA tournament and selection as "player of the year" by SPORT magazine.

It is a good wager that the 'Cats also were not concerning themselves greatly over the possibilities of becoming the first team in the history of the Naismith sport to execute a "grand slam" of both major post-season national tournaments.

(Kentucky, overwhelmingly ranked at season's end as the number one team in the nation by the Associated Press national poll and far ahead of second-place Oklahoma A. & M. and third-place St. Louis U., on March 1 made basketball history by its unprecedented action of accepting invitations to appear in both the National Invitation and NCAA tournaments.)

There were a great many other highlights and record-breaking situations, developed by the miracle boys from the Bluegrass during the course of one of the most successful seasons in the history of collegiate competition. Not the least of these was the selection of the Wildcats' colorful mentor, Baron Adolph Rupp, as coach of the Eastern team in the annual All-Star Game in New York April 2 and subsequent invitation of Kentucky's four seniors as the first members to be named to the honor aggregation.

But the thought sure to have been uppermost in the reminiscences of Rupp's Raiders at the end of the regular season play was one with a revenge theme—revenge against the Billikens of St. Louis University, the only one of 18 teams met in 26 games to manage an upset of the high-riding Wildcats.

The St. Louis U. blemish on an otherwise perfect record surely was the main concern of the determined 12 basketeers who trotted off the floor of Alumni Gym to the thunderous ovation of an all-student audience. The lone defeat, a two-point deficit inflicted during an unusual "off" night at the Sugar Bowl tournament in New Orleans in mid-season, seemed the most important

Ky. Will Have Another "27" Some Day!

Wallace Clayton "Wah Wah" Jones, Jr., at five months, is getting ready for the happy day when he can don "No. 27" and play forward for Kentucky. The handsome youngster, son of the inimitable "Wah" and Edna Ball Jones, '47, was born Sept. 23, 1948. His famous Daddy will hang up number 27 this spring, and it won't be taken down again—unless young Wallace says so!

'Cats End Season

thing in the world—even though the Billikens were unable to maintain the stride they hit and lost three ball games before the end of the season and despite the fact that St. Louis lost ground in the national rating reports to onrushing Kentucky each week following the Sugar Bowl catastrophe.

It was the thought of the chance for a revenge meeting with the Billikens that motivated to great extent the 'Cats decision to take in both national tournaments. The natural box office attraction of a Kentucky-St. Louis rematch was bound to meet with favor of one of the post-season extravaganza promoters and the Kentuckians were determined to avoid a repetition of the St. Louis "walkout" of last season. (After winning the NIT, the Missouri wonder boys declined to participate in the Olympic Trials and chance a meeting with NCAA champion Kentucky.)

There were no real arguments at season end as to the relative merits of the 1948-49 edition of the Kentucky champions versus the world-beating squad of last year, but the 25-1 record achieved this year in the face of the tremendous pressure incident to the defense of three basketball crowns—the SEC, NCAA and Olympic Trials—caused many to speculate.

The only major collegiate team ranked in the first 10 in both team offense and team defense, the Wildcats ended the regular season with a game scoring average of 67.8 against 42.2 points for all-opponents. Kentucky's field goal completion average for 26 games stood at a neat 32.2 per cent as compared with opponents' 23.6 per cent.

Towering center Alex Groza, who twice broke the SEC individual scoring record for a single game, ended the season as the team's high scorer with 508 points and a phenomenal shooting average of 39.7 per cent. Rapid Ralph Beard hit the hoops for 300 points and second honors while Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones, playing in only 24 of the 26 games, collected 249 points for third place. Placing fourth was Cliff Barker with 185 and in fifth position was Dale Barnstable with 181. The sixth man on the squad and one of the squad's most valuable substitutes was Walt Hirsch who made 118 points playing relief roles in all 26 games. The ol' left-hander, Jim Line, hit the hoops for 111 points and other players collected totals as follows: Roger Day, 39; Johnny Stough, 31; Garland Townes, 24; Al Bruno, 12; and Robert Henne, 5.

In retrospect the highlights of the season after the Sugar Bowl debacle included the unannounced but obvious refusal of the Phillips Oilers to meet the Wildcats in an exhibition or regular game, the 'Cats too-close call (63-51) at the hands of an inspired Bowling Green team in Cleveland, a rout of Tennessee at Knoxville (65-51) and successful sojourn in humid Atlanta where Georgia Tech was knocked off 56-45 despite efforts of Big Jim Nolan and company. There was also the coincidence of a duplicate score a few days later as Rupp's Raiders tripped upset-minded DePaul in the Chicago Stadium 56-45. Then came the long-awaited clash with the Irish of Notre Dame and nearly 8,000 avid fans who jammed every corner of the Armory got extreme satisfaction as U. K. polished off their arch-rivals from South Bend to the tune of 62-38 to regain much of the prestige lost in the St. Louis upset.

From Louisville, the 'Cats began a week-long southern invasion that saw them meet and conquer four primed opponents—Vanderbilt in Nashville Monday night 72-50, Alabama at Tuscaloosa on Wednesday night 56-40, Mississippi in Memphis Auditorium 75-45 before the largest crowd ever turned out (thanks to Promoter-Kentucky Friend Early Maxwell), and Bradley in the new Owensboro recreation center Saturday night 62-52 (one of the toughest and closest games on the schedule).

After the Southern invasion, Kentucky came home to more familiar surroundings to finish out their successful season. Victories over visiting fives from Tennessee (71-56), Xavier (96-50), Alabama (74-32), Mississippi (85-31), Georgia Tech (78-32), and Georgia (95-40) preceded the final road trip—a date to initiate big-time basketball in the new Cincinnati Garden against Xavier. Followed by loyal fans in great numbers, the Wildcats almost succumbed on one of their worst "off nights" of the season to desper-

The blue and white of the University of Kentucky are known to sports fans everywhere. Officially the colors are Yale blue and white, but in the beginning, when the Lexington institution was still known as the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky, the colors were "Stoll blue" and white. One day back in the 1890's, a group of Kentucky football stalwarts met to choose their school colors. Someone suggested blue and white—"blue like Dick Stoll's necktie"—and those colors were immediately adopted. "Dick" Stoll was to become Judge Richard C. Stoll, distinguished public servant and for more than fifty years a member of the U. K. board of trustees, on which he still serves. It's pretty well known that Stoll Field was named in honor of Judge Stoll, but few persons, we suspect, ever heard that his blue necktie was the inspiration for half of the old school colors.

Dixie Jean Wilcoxon, of Lexington, former University student, has been employed as the Fayette County Patrol's file and record clerk.

ate Xavier before winning by a 11-point margin (51-40).

The final contest of the season with steadily improving Vanderbilt—feared rightly as potentially able to mar the record of 58 straight victories over SEC competition—proved merely the occasion for the four fabulous seniors on the great Kentucky team to make the hoops sing their swan song. Completely in control of the situation all the way, the Olympic veterans hung up a 70-37 victory to push their record to 59 consecutive wins in the conference, 74 straight victories on the home floor, fourth unbeaten season in the SEC, 17th straight win since the loss to St. Louis and the 37th Wildcat victory against 71 losses for Rupp-coached teams over 19 years at Kentucky.

Whatever the outcome of tournament play four games to win the SEC crown for the sixth straight time, three games to win the National Invitation and three more to successfully defend the NCAA title—the 1948-49 Kentucky Wildcats and their followers have reason to be proud.

Adolph Rupp Wins Optimists' 'Outstanding Citizen' Award

U.K. Basketball Baron
Is Like Alexander:
No Worlds To Take

Adolph F. Rupp—"Mr. Basketball"—has added another honor to his long list of achievements during his reign as coach of the University of Kentucky basketball squad, currently national collegiate and Olympic champions.

He received on Feb. 25 the 1948 Optimist Club award for being the community's outstanding citizen.

Presentation of the award, a sterling silver pitcher, was made by Dr. A. D. Kirwan, University dean of men and club vice president.

"Like Alexander the Great, Rupp can weep because he, too, has no worlds to conquer—he's conquered them all in the basketball world—Southeastern, National Collegiate, and Olympics," Dean Kirwan said.

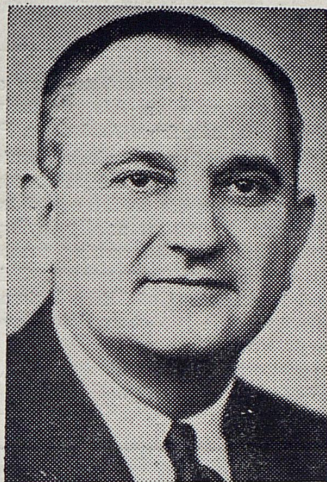

Kirwan enumerated not only Rupp's achievements in building up Kentucky basketball teams over the past 19 seasons but also his activities in other fields—farming, writing (he's author of a book, "Championship Basketball"), and Shrine activities.

Just for the record, Kirwan said, Rupp, also known as "The Baron," "The Man in the Brown Suit," and "Ol' Rupp and Ready," is a native of Kansas and played college basketball under tutelage of Dr. Forrest (Phog) Allen.

Kirwan described Rupp as "a master advertising man, selling Lexington and the University of Kentucky all over the sports world—a messenger of friendship and ambassador of good will."

Coach Rupp, in accepting the award, expressed gratification not only to the club and community, but to his boys, the players, "who have taken us a long way," in the sport which attracts more players and more spectators than any other.

"I think a man who loves his work lives a good life, and I love basketball," he said, adding a man didn't have to be crazy to coach basketball, but it helps.

COACH ADOLPH RUPP
Kentucky

He disclaimed the fame of Alexander the Great, but said there was a period in the Kentucky-Xavier game that he felt like weeping, and he trusted that next year's Optimist award would go "to the guy who figured how to get a team from going flat."

In humorous vein, Coach Rupp said that while he was abroad last summer passing out keys to Lexington "Tom (Mayor Mooney) was back home trying to annex me." He concluded by expressing the hope that next year and in the years hence he might still merit the honor bestowed him.

No Longer The Forgotten Man

While the University of Kentucky Wildcats were piling record on record, individual as well as team, Cliff Barker did his job so smoothly that he rarely attracted as much attention as his high-scoring teammates.

True, when the going was tough—as it was against Xavier last Thursday—and his colleagues' batting eyes weren't as sharp as usual, Cliff often came through with field goals as well as remarkable ball-handling to save the Wildcats' hides.

His value to the team was fully appreciated by his coach, his colleagues and the Lexington fans, but not always by observers in other cities who had seen him perform only once or twice. Therefore, it was no great surprise when the Associated Press All-Southeastern—selected prematurely, The Herald believes, because the regular season hadn't even ended when the votes were cast—put Barker on the second team instead of the first, which rightfully included Groza, Beard and Jones but where both Barker and Barnstable also belonged.

Out-of-town sports writers who didn't support Barker for All-SEC should have seen the Wildcats' game against Vanderbilt Saturday night. It would have opened their eyes.

Throughout the tilt Barker had staged one of the most remarkable exhibitions of ball-handling ever seen on a basketball court. Then, with 12 seconds left to play, he climaxed his performance with one of the most amazing shots in the history of the game. From 65 feet away he arched the ball toward the hoop—and it swished through the net for the longest field goal in Lexington's history.

Seven minutes earlier Groza had set a new Southeastern Conference scoring record, and the four Wildcat seniors as well as Barnstable, the lone junior, were playing like men inspired in the last appearance in Alumni gym of the greatest Wildcat team of them all.

Time, heaven forbid, may dim somewhat the glory of the exploits of this great Wildcat team. But that dramatic shot by Barker which closed the careers of four of the Cat stars in Alumni gym will remain a vivid memory in the eyes of the fortunate fans who witnessed it, forever.

Harry Ulinski Named U. K. Grid Captain

Harry Ulinski, 200-pound center, was named captain of the University of Kentucky's 1949 football squad March 28.

The squad chose Dick Holway, 190-pound guard, as alternate captain.

Ulinski suffered a shoulder injury at the start of last season, but came back to help the Wildcats in their late season drive which was climaxed by a tie game with their foremost rival, the University of Tennessee.

Ulinski, who'll be a senior, stands six-feet-two and is being counted on Prof. Virgil D. Roberts, '05, of Somerset, Ky., instructor in physics at Berea College, will retire at the close of the present school term.

Professor Roberts also holds an advanced degree from the University of Kentucky, obtained in 1917. His son, J. T. Roberts, '38, is Supervisor of Ways at Danville, Ky.

by Coach Paul Bryant to play an important role in his defensive plans. He hails from Ambridge, Pa.

Holway, a five-foot-eleven senior guard, was one of the most consistent performers on the squad last year and figures materially in Bryant's plans for the coming season. He comes from Youngstown, Ohio, and is a brother of Eddie Holway, guard on the pro champion Cleveland Browns.

E. F. Hartford on Japanese Mission

Dr. Ellis F. Hartford, A.B. '20, M.A. '34, professor of education at the University of Kentucky, left Lexington in February following his appointment to an American Military Government education mission to Japan.

Dr. Hartford went to Washington, D. C., for a few days before flying to Japan.

Ray L. Trautman, '31, formerly of Newport, Ky., has been named to a full professorship in library science at Columbia University. Just prior to his appointment at Columbia he had been an executive with Omaha book.

Kentucky's All-Time "Greats" Play Last Home Game

Radio Man Named Aid to Senator

G. W. Kingsbury, '33
Withers' Assistant

Gilbert W. Kingsbury, '33, formerly of Covington, Ky., has been named administrative assistant to United States Senator Garrett L. Withers of Kentucky, at an announced salary of $10,300 a year.

A graduate of Covington High School and the University of Kentucky, "Gil" Kingsbury's voice is familiar to thousands of Kentuckians as he has been Washington correspondent for Cincinnati Radio Station WLW and for Station WINS, New York, since 1945.

Following his graduation from UK, where he was a member of the Kentucky Kernel staff, Kingsbury worked for the Kentucky Post and the Cincinnati Post. While there he was sports correspondent for the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mr. Kingsbury left the Cincinnati Post in 1939 to become an assistant professor at the University of Cincinnati. In 1941 he went to WLW as news editor in Cincinnati, remaining there until he was sent to Washington in 1945. He was named to his new post under the "assistant-senator" provision of the 1946 Congressional Reorganization Act.

His wife is the former Sylvia Phillips of Covington and they have one son, Bill, seven.

An interesting slant to alumni, on the announcement of the appointment, which appeared in the Feb. 2 issue of the Courier-Journal, is that the story, which carried the date line of the Courier Journal Washington Bureau, was written by John F. Day, '35, University graduate from Flemingsburg, who was a student in the department of journalism for two years while Gilbert Kingsbury was on the campus.

Senator Withers has three other former University students in his office which gives the new senator's office a University of Kentucky slant. They are: Irene Haynie, '46, who was formerly a member of the University staff and circulation

Alumna Featured In "Mademoiselle"

Mrs. Konrad Bekker, Washington, D. C., daughter of Dr. B. B. McInteer, 134 University avenue, was one of five women featured in the Jobs and Futures section of the March issue of Mademoiselle.

Mrs. Bekker, a 1944 graduate of the University of Kentucky, is with the Children's Bureau Clearinghouse for Research in Child Life. According to the article, she reviews dissertations of Ph.D. candidates and others who do work that may benefit children. She holds the M.A. degree from the University of Minnesota.

Her husband, Konrad Bekker, formerly an instructor in the UK College of Commerce, now holds a position with the State Department in Washington.

manager of the Kentucky Kernel; Eva Mauzy, Dixon, former student and Senator Withers' personal secretary; and Jessie Ball, former student from Nicholasville.

To make the inter-office communications system complete for former UK students, Elizabeth Hunt, M.A. '47, is a member of Vice President Alben W. Barkley's office staff.

UK Engineering Dean Is Honored

Dean D. V. Terrell, '10, of the University of Kentucky College of Engineering, was presented with a certificate of achievement for his contribution to the development of Kentucky's highway system, on March 4.

The certificate was awarded by the Kentucky Department of Highways and the Louisville and Blue Grass Automobile Clubs. A similar certificate was conferred on Mack Galbreath, senior Kentucky engineer for the Public Roads Administration.

The awards were presented at the Kentucky Highway Conference banquet held on the campus of the University of Kentucky.

Dean Terrell was instrumental in establishing the south's first road materials testing laboratory and is a director of the Highway Materials Research Laboratory on the UK campus. His state-wide survey in 1914 played an important part in the passage of the State Aid Road law in that year.

The highway department certificate praised him for his "untiring efforts as an educator . . . his cooperative zeal in promoting better highways and his steadfast loyalty to his native commonwealth."
