Soviet warrant officer captured in Angola

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — South African troops attacking black nationalist guerrillas in Angola last week killed and captured Soviet military officers, Defense Minister Magnus Malan said yesterday.

"There can be no doubt that the terrorist organization, SWAPO (South-West African Peoples Organization), is controlled by and given ideological and material support by the Soviet Union," Malan said.

A Soviet warrant officer was captured, he said in a statement issued here and carried by the news agency SABA. A spokesman at defense headquarters in the capital of Pretoria would not say where the prisoner was being held, and there was no word on the number of Soviets captured or killed.

SWAPO's black nationalists have for 15 years been fighting a low-level bush war from bases in Angola and elsewhere in an attempt to end South Africa's control over mineral-rich South-West Africa.

The Pretoria government insists the SWAPO guerrillas were the sole objects of its four-pronged raid on southern Angola last week. Angola says South Africa means to turn southern Angola over to UNITA, an Angolan group opposed to the Marxist Luanda government.

South Africa said yesterday it still had soldiers in Angola, their withdrawal hampered by land mines on roads out of the country, according to SABA, the South African Press Association.

In an Angolan radio interview monitored in Johannesburg on yesterday Angolan Defense Minister Pedro Maria Pedale confirmed that Soviet-built SAM missiles were deployed in Angola before the South African attack.

The United States on Monday vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning the South African raid. The United States said it rejected the action because the Cuban and Soviet presences in Angola were not included in the criticism.

The estimated 20,000 Cuban troops in Angola have been a major source of concern to the West since they arrived in 1975 to help the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) defeat rival groups in a civil war and establish a Marxist government. There have been no reports of contact between the South Africans and Cubans.

Malan said that besides the most recent skirmishes "providing indisputable evidence of the Russian involvement, an enormous amount of Russian propaganda material was found in SWAPO headquarters, clearly indicating the Russian aspirations with southern Africa."

"Earlier, it was generally believed and acclaimed that Soviet Russia was only indirectly involved, but now the opposite has been proved, namely the direct involvement of military personnel on the lower levels of terrorist movements. This is a new tendency that gives rise to questions," he said.

The South African defense force said it knocked out radar and anti-aircraft installations in the raid, and killed at least 400 Angolan soldiers and SWAPO guerrillas. Military officials denied Angolan claims that 45,000 South African troops were involved in a full-scale invasion. Informed sources, who declined to be identified, said 4,000 soldiers was a closer estimate.

But the defense force last Friday said 27 Soviet advisers — 20 men and seven women — had fled a house in Xangongo, 60 miles north of the border, two hours before the South African raid.

Coach Brown

Governor John Y. named UK head coach emeritus

FRANKFORT (AP) — A legislative committee has named a "Lifetime Head Football Coach Emeritus" for the University of Kentucky "to alleviate permanently the irksome problem of executive meddling in the internal affairs of the UK football program."

The tongue-in-cheek resolution was adopted yesterday by the interim State Government Committee in the wake of Gov. John Y. Brown's highly publicized verbal skirmish with UK football Coach Fran Curci.

The resolution, proposed by state Rep. Jim Bruce, D-Hopkinsville, proclaims the person in control of UK football needs "vast experience in organized athletics, the executive branch of government and the intricacies of coaching football."

And, "none is qualified so eminently in each of these regards as is the incumbent governor of this Commonwealth."

As Lifetime Head Football Coach Emeritus, Brown was granted the authority to "paddle, spank or otherwise punish corporally any recalcitrant player, president or pundit of the press showing any sort of disrespect whatsoever."

He also was awarded the privilege of leading the UK marching band during half-time ceremonies and receiving a standing invitation from the producers of "NFL Today" on CBS-TV to appear and promote his football policies. Brown's wife, Phyllis George Brown, appears regularly on the program.

The committee adopted the resolution by voice vote over the cries of Rep. Mary Ann Tobin for a roll call. Rep. Tobin, D-Irvington, cast the lone dissenting vote.

Social Security payments denied for thousands of students by bill

By BARBARA SALLEE
Reporter

Students who received Social Security payments because of a deceased, retired or disabled parent may be without money as a result of President Reagan's budget cuts.

As of January 1981, 772,351 students were receiving benefits, nationwide. Approximately 61 percent were survivors and the rest were children of disabled-worker (20 percent) and retired-worker families (19 percent).

Benefits for students who are attending a post-secondary school, such as college or vocational school, will not be paid to children who turned 18 in August, 1981 or later. For children who are 18 before August, 1981, post-secondary student benefits will be phased out by reducing the benefit amount payable in September 1981 by 25 percent, 50 percent by September 1982, and 75 percent by September 1983.

However, there are alternate government programs available to some of the students affected by the elimination or reduction of student benefits, principally the Guaranteed Student Loans and Pell Grants (formally the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant).

But in cases where household income exceeds the eligibility cutoff — proposed to be $25,000 in both programs — individuals will have no recourse to these alternate programs. Nevertheless, there are some campus-based assistance programs and private scholarship grants available to eligible students.

Paul Borders, operations supervisor at the district office of Social Security, said the benefits students received in the past were proportional to the amount their families receive. The families usually receive one-and-one-half times the primary interest amount (the money taken out of the paycheck for Social Security) that would have been allotted to the primary earner when he or she retired at 65. The children receive one-fourth of the PIA.

In the past, if the parent died, the child received three-fourths of the PIA. If there was more than one child, the money was divided among the children. However, under the new proposal, no money would be given to the child if he or she are in a post-secondary institution.

Before the student benefit cuts, a student would usually lose the Social Security benefits when he or she was married. In some special circumstances, the recipient was able to keep the benefits if he or she married another Social Security recipient.

There are no exceptions to the student benefits that have been or will be cut, but if there are questions pertaining to what Social Security benefits are available, call the Lexington Social Security office at 259-3411.

Effective August, 1984 no benefits will be paid to students.

The cuts in student benefits are expected to save the government $35 million in fiscal year 1981, according to the text of the congressional bill which enacted the cuts. By fiscal year 1985, it is expected that $2.1 billion will be saved, and by fiscal year 1987 the government estimates it will save $7 billion.

These estimates do not include the administrative costs associated with the changes, but they do consider offsetting costs in other federal student assistance.

Scholarships are there for the asking

By JOHN LITTLE
Senior Staff Writer

It hurts when financial aid checks bite the dust, but it hurts even worse when there is money available out there that students don't know about.

Nell Westbrook, coordinator of scholarships and grants, said there are still a number of scholarships which have not been applied for, mainly because people do not know about them. Here is a list of those scholarships still available:

Westbrook said she has trouble each year giving out the William and Elizabeth Rogers Hamilton Memorial scholarships. It will go to a senior or a graduate student from Metcalf County. She said it will be given away in small pieces with no more than $450 a year going to one student. However, there are still many of these scholarships available.

There is a scholarship of $500 available to a student from Jefferson County who is the child of a UK alumna.

A female from Laurel County may be eligible for a scholarship of up to $1,000 Westbrook said, however, the student "must show quite a bit of need."

Westbrook said there is also a scholarship for women from Hubbardsville (in Henderson County).

She said the amount of the scholarship varies according to the financial need of the student, but it can be as much as $700 a year.

Waiting list for University housing down to 87; mostly freshman

By CINDY DECKER
Staff Writer

Almost 90 students are still on the waiting list to obtain University housing, according to Jean Lindley, director of housing.

Only 13 men — all freshmen — are on the waiting list, compared to 47 female freshmen and 27 upperclass women. These students are probably residents of Lexington or surrounding communities, or are staying with local friends, Lindley said.

About 5,000 freshman and upperclass students live in University housing. Only full-time students are eligible to reside in the residence halls and apartments.

The percentage of students on the waiting list who will receive University housing this semester "totally depends on the number of students who withdraw from the University," Lindley said.

12 to 15 percent of a given freshman class will not return to college the second semester, said Keller Dunn, associate dean for residence and planning in the registrar's office. "They get homesick," Dunn said. "The place is too big, they don't have friends, they can't make the social adjustment, so they go home."

This list is only for the fall semester. However, students may have their names added to the spring semester list by request. Preference on waiting lists is given to those who turn in their applications earliest.

Campus parking system unsafe, chaotic for student commuters

Any commuting student who has missed a class looking for a parking space on the streets close to campus knows the futility of bucking the UK parking system.

But anybody who has walked all the way from the stadium "K" lot to Central Campus at 7:30 a.m. knows how bad it really is.

The whole thing is one big mess. In order to park anywhere within walking distance, you have to try to purchase a "C" sticker, and that's only if you're a junior or senior and you have hours on end to stand around waiting in line to get one, a rare situation in the early days of the semester when add-drop and fee payment are first priority.

And besides, with this year's reshuffling of parking space, the "C" lots aren't really that close to the classroom buildings anymore.

Of course, you can always solve the problem by living within walking distance of campus, but in order to do that, you must pay exorbitant rents for substandard housing, which defeats the whole purpose of commuting—to save money. As an alternative, you can try waking before dawn and finding a space on Limestone Street, Clifton Circle or Columbia Avenue, but that's really more hassle than it's worth.

And it's not just a matter of inconvenience and headaches. There's a safety factor involved in the parking situation, too. Students who have night classes or must stay late at the University for other reasons are conscious of the fact that walking back to their cars after dark is a big risk.

Although assaults on the UK campus may not seem like everyday events, personnel at the Rape Crisis Center will tell you that indeed they are, for both male and female students—the incidents just don't get reported. And robbery is not unknown, either.

Unfortunately, as much as we're sure the administration and the Board of Trustees would like to effectively address the problem at hand, the budget crunch wrought upon the University by Gov. John Y. Brown ties their hands. This makes it unlikely that parking structure No. 3, originally planned for construction in the early part of this decade, will be built in time to do any good.

In fact, with the prospect of falling enrollment on the horizon, the parking structure, when it's eventually finished, may turn out to be just as big a boondoggle as the Student Center addition.

Which, summed up, is an another object lesson in what happens when the governor plays radical reformer. Brown may think he's solving problems by reducing the University's budget, supposedly forcing the administration into a forced and healthy austerity, but he's actually aggravating already bad situations and creating a few new ones, too.

SA needs planned lobbying, programming efforts; should develop employment for students on campus

Dear Britt:

griffin

Well, it's been a few months since Sturgeon cleaned out my desk and left you nothing but empty cans and bottles, so to speak, and it's about time you get down to serious work.

Not that things haven't gone well this far. But they're just warming up, and before you know it we'll be looking for and taking every cheap shot we can.

So, before the mud starts flying, let me go on record as supporting the following priorities for SA this year.

1. Register every student and every faculty and staff member to vote. It is time to take every step necessary to put in the hands of every eligible person a voter registration form and to provide a free, accessible method to guarantee it is delivered to the courthouse.

University and government officials may resist, but it is inexcusable that we should complain about the performance of politicians when we refuse to vote.

Politicians are more receptive to lobbying efforts when there is something to be offered in return for their support.

2. Represent students' economic interests in public proceedings. Last year's intervention in the GTE rate-of-return hearing was more than symbolic.

3. Create student-run, non-profit operations in every major category to students. Berea College is a great small school, and the student industries there are well known. A hotel, a restaurant, crafts, building trades and every area of campus employment are staffed by students. They are even constructing a new multi-story building on campus.

But let a student enter the hallowed campus employment office in the Serch campus employment office in the Serch Building, where most University jobs are filled, and he or she is directed back to the Patterson Office Tower.

The revenues of the University can fulfill two functions not now served: support a larger population of students and provide an economic base for hands-on student experience.

Students should not be denied access to any job opening in the University, and students in the College of Business & Economics, with proper supervision, could operate a bank or credit union, complete with every type of full service banking, including electronic banking.

Student money could be recycled throughout the University community, providing needed credit and low-cost banking services. And the student operators would graduate with the experience necessary to land the best available jobs.

The University Bookstore, barber shop and many local businesses could be well run, at competitive prices, by students, and the quality would be improved. This approach has been very successful at many other schools.

4. Support a diversity of viewpoints and for the University community.

This goal has two concerns. First, efforts to schedule lectures and media programming for students should continue at their present level. George McGovern is a good start, and other viewpoints are essential.

Second, avenues of communication must be made more accessible to students and faculty members.

"Publish or Perish" is an academic axiom, and scholarly journals, the University of Kentucky Press and all small publications need support to help Kentuckians publish, not perish.

In addition, UK's radio and television facilities pale in comparison with those of benchmark institutions and, in some cases, other state universities. The cable FM-stereo radio station offered by Telecab is a good place to start, especially with cable wiring for dorm rooms scheduled. Present facilities, like WBKY radio, need to be monitored to ensure students are receiving maximum use of the resources available.

5. Serve as an academic consumer advocate in University offices. Faculty compensation, class loads and size and teacher quality are vital issues to students, as are class offerings, school accreditations, academic standards and high quality library services.

A guide to courses published concurrently with the class schedules would be helpful. It could detail, for each course section: books required and cost, grading and work requirements, attendance policy, previous class' grade distribution, a quality evaluation of previous classes and random comments from students. This would have the added benefit of reducing add-drop paperwork and students entering classes late.

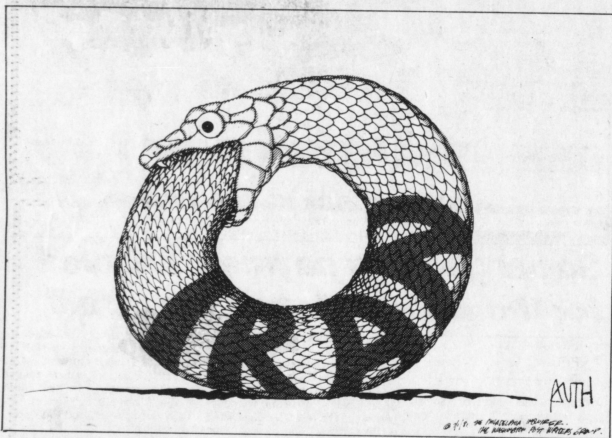

6. Take every appropriate measure to ensure that Kentucky stays on top of Tennessee. Of course, Kentucky, geographically, will always be on top of Tennessee. But our Wildcats must never again lose to Don Devoe's big orange. It repulses, demeans and disgraces the student body, and distracts students from their academic pursuits.

Well, that about does it, Britt 'o' buddy. And, oh—one last reminder: let your critics have their say, measure every word you use, account for every dollar and remember, you can be replaced.

Very truly yours,
 Griffin

As diversion from medical school studies, columnist writes about interesting people

Since at least one-quarter of you probably never read this newspaper before last week, this is an introduction to me and this column.

First, me:
 — My name is Richard McDonald. I am a 24-year-old, black native of Lexington.

— I am a second-year student in the College of Medicine. I attended UK as an undergraduate, majoring in journalism.

— I have been employed, variously, as a hamburger cook; a busboy; a dishwasher; a reporter, copy editor and managing editor for this newspaper; a reporter for The Lexington Leader; and a reporter and copy editor for the Lexington Herald.

— I am, among other things, a church organist (although the type of Christianity I try to practice bears little resemblance to the religion preached by most fundamentalists).

— I'm an only child.
 — I like anchovies. In fact, I like all foods except brussel sprouts.

— I am a liberal democrat.
 — I know the proper uses of "that" and "which." (Take my word for it—it's a disappearing skill.)

— I have been told by some that I like to complain.

— I like scotch and dislike beer.

mcdonald

— I'm a diehard fan of the New York Mets and I detest the Cincinnati Reds.

— The worst year of my life was 1980, when my mother died, my dog died, I was kidnapped and robbed, my apartment was burgled and Ronald Reagan was elected president.

Now, the column. It's unfortunate that this page is called "Persuasion," because I like to think of myself as a reporter rather than a rhetorician. Instead of climbing on a soapbox in this space every other Wednesday, I'll usually try to tell you a story. It will be a story about some person, place or thing that helps make this university, this city and this state the unique places they are.

Among the subjects of this column last year: a male prostitute became a family man, a bag lady who died alone, a little square hamburger with holes, a basketball player who discovered the price of stardom and a university president who is a member of a segregated country club. I'll bring you the same kind of story this year. Some will be serious, some will be funny, some will be sad. One may even be about you.

If you like what you read here, write and tell me about it. If you don't like it, write me about that. I want to know your likes, your dislikes, your praise, your criticisms, your tips and your ideas.

Send your letters to:

I write this column because it is fun to do. Venturing out into the world every 14 days or so to find someone new—or to find something new about an old friend—and pulling together whatever I've managed to scrape from him or her into a coherent, interesting piece is a pleasure you've probably can't understand unless you've done it. It provides me with a stimulus that isn't present in the classroom world of polymorphonucleocytes, pharmacokinetics and Gram-positive microorganisms.

Ultimately, though, the success of this column will be determined by you. If I don't make whatever appears fortnightly in this space enjoyable and occasionally thought-provoking, I will have failed in my job. For that reason, I want to hear from you.

State

FRANKFORT — Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. has given the go-ahead for a campaign for the succession amendment to the state constitution, with the extent of the campaign to depend on the extent of the opposition.

The amendment, supported by Brown in the 1980 Kentucky General Assembly, would remove the constitution's one-term limit for governor and other elected state officials and give them the option of running for a second four-year term.

"We want to be prepared to do the things we feel that are necessary for the passage of the amendment," said Larry Townsend, a close Brown associate, in a telephone interview Monday.

Options range from what Townsend termed "a quiet campaign," based on the use of direct mail and telephone banks, to paid television spots and "Ask John Y. Why?" TV programs such as Brown used in his 1979 gubernatorial campaign.

Townsend would not say in what other ways the governor would be involved in the campaign. However, he did say the amount of money needed to finance the campaign will range from $25,000 to $250,000. He admitted the range is wide, but he said the exact amount depends on actions the opposition takes.

While he declined to say who would be solicited for funds, Brown said in a recent television appearance that corporations might be asked to contribute, which is legal in an issue-related referendum.

Although the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce has come out against the amendment, no organized campaign has been launched against the amendment.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iran's interior minister, Ayatollah Mohammad Reza Mahdavi Kani, was named interim prime minister today to replace the assassinated Mohammad Javad Bahonar, the official Pars news agency reported.

It said the speaker of parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, announced the designation of Kani at the end of an open session of the legislative body, and that a vote on the nomination would take place shortly.

Bahonar was assassinated with President Mohammad Ali Rajai in a bombing Sunday. They were buried Monday and within hours two more religious-political leaders were reported slain. Kani, 50, was jailed several times and banished during the rule of the late shah.

Later that day Hojatoleslam Ali Khamenei, the fiery creator of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution, was elected secretary-general of the Islamic Republican Party by a party congress, a senior aide reported by telephone to The Associated Press in Beirut.

The aide, who requested anonymity, said the government will now arrange the third presidential election since the monarchy was overthrown in 1979 to replace Rajai.

WARSAW, Poland — Communist authorities are losing "social acceptance," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said in an interview published on yesterday — the 42nd anniversary of Germany's invasion into Poland.

The independent labor federation leader's remarks came on the eve of separate talks by Communist Party leaders and Solidarity unionists to discuss burning issues still dividing the two sides.

Meanwhile, Solidarity printers in Rzeszow in southeast Poland called a strike for this morning because of a dispute with the plant's director.

"Things have now reached a stage when the authorities are losing social acceptance and support," Walesa said, according to the Polish state news agency PAP. "This situation forces us to take upon ourselves responsibility for the fate of the nation."

Solidarity had threatened to strike radio and television if its demands were not met.

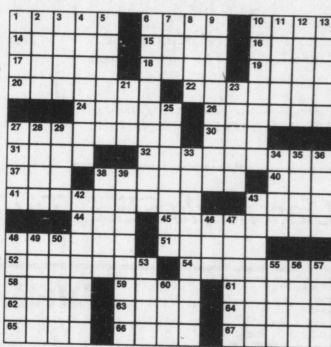

Government negotiators Monday asked Solidarity to lift its strike threat in return for more time for television coverage of the union's congress.

Columnist picks Alabama, Georgia to dominate SEC race

There's a name for all the winners in the world I want a name when I lose They call Alabama the Crimson Tide So call me Deacon Blues —Steely Dan, "Deacon Blues"

Somebody must have known that Paul Bryant would be a legend, a hero, a winner so consistent and powerful they'd nickname him "Bear."

The Alabama coach looks like he's been chiseled out of stone for the ages by an angry sculptor: the square jaw, the jagged brow, the abrupt, checked, "Houndstooth" hat. His visage, his relentless winning, his record—all of them are about as approachable as a rock.

If Bryant keeps winning as he has (and should), he will be the all-time winningest college football coach, surpassing "Pop" Warner and Amos Alonzo Stagg. With his ninth win this season, Bryant will have won 315 games, one more than Stagg and two more than Warner. And, as usual, "Bama should win at least nine games this year."

kaiser

In fact, everything in the Southeastern Conference should be normal this season. They'll still call Alabama the Crimson Tide. And (somebody must have known all along), The Big Blue will be fighting it out with Vanderbilt at the other end of the conference race. The names just aren't there yet for the Cats. Or Vandy.

But here's how the conference may look at the close of the season:

1. Alabama
Bryant starts his hundredth season looking for his thousandth win. Or something like that.

The names are there, with three potential All-Americans — Thomas Boyd, Jim Bob Harris, and Tommy Wilcox — on defense, and All-SEC shoe-in Bob Cayave on the offensive line. As often as not, "Bama wins even without big names on the roster. This year, then, should belong to Alabama (as usual). But, as Harris says, "We're careful to approach them one at a time."

2. Georgia
The name they've got for Georgia is Herschel "Bo" Walker. Last season, after leading his Bulldogs to the national championship, Walker received more Heisman Trophy votes than any freshman before him. Calling him a runner just doesn't do justice. Calling him a phenomenon is too pretentious for a country boy. For now, calling him Herschel will do — the name's a winner by itself.

Bulldog quarterback Buck Belue also returns with his favorite target, Lindsay Scott. But too many names are lost from last year's squad and not enough returning to expect a repeat of last season's 12-0 record. Besides, it's harder the second time, and their schedule is too easy to condition the Dogs for bowl play.

3. Louisiana State
Ramsay Darder cried after LSU lost to Alabama last year. Darder is a tackle at LSU. He and quarterback Alan Risher are the names that will lead the Bengals to a third-place finish, despite a grueling schedule which includes the opener against Alabama and game two against Notre Dame. But the Tigers will win one of those games to give them the confidence to edge Florida out of third place.

4. Florida
The Gators were 8-4 and champions of the Tangerine Bowl last season, even though Coach Charlie Pell said his team was rebuilding. He has repeated those sentiments again this year. The offense is effective if not potent with sophomore Wayne Peace at quarterback. The secondary has improved, but a tough SEC road schedule will keep Florida behind LSU.

5. Mississippi State
The Bulldogs will finish fifth and flashy, yet inconsistent. The bright spot is quarterback John Bond, who led his team to a win over Alabama last year while just a freshman.

6. Mississippi
The Rebels will ride in sixth on quarterback John Fourcade's arm. Ole Miss plays only two games in Oxford this season, against Georgia and Vandy.

7. Tennessee
The Vols are facing a tough non-conference as well as SEC schedule this season, taking on Georgia and Alabama on the road and also Southern Cal in Los Angeles. Two breaks in the middle of the schedule will give the Vols time to rest and lick their wounds but they could still possibly fall to Auburn and/or Kentucky if either is having a good day.

QB Rick Buehner:

Where did all the glory go for the high school All-American

By MARTY MCGEE
Sports Writer

First story in a three-part series.

The All-American boy. There was one in everyone's high school class. You know, he was the star of the football team or the class president. The guy that made straight "As" and was loved by the teachers and admired by the girls. He was known to virtually everyone connected with the school, from the principal to the janitors. He was loved by many, resented by an envious few, respected by all. You knew him well, the All-American boy.

There was an All-American boy in my high school class. But this fellow was simply too great to be called an ordinary "All-American." He was Rick Buehner.

Louisville St. Xavier, Class of '77, Rick Buehner was quarterback of the football team. He earned a 3.7 grade point average in his four years. The teachers looked upon him as a model student — he never caused any trouble and always did what was asked of him.

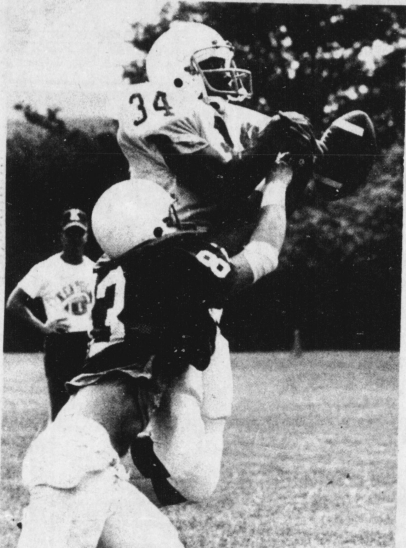

He had the good looks of Robert

Redford and the physique of Bruce Jenner. Short, blond hair, and a rough but handsome visage. Tall and slender body, thickly muscled, perfectly proportioned and conditioned. A body that drew longing gazes from the girls and sales pitches from coaches of all the school's teams.

Of course, he was known to everyone. Yes, loved by many, resented by few, respected by all. Rick Buehner, All-American boy. We knew him well.

He had all of the "All-American" qualities, that's for sure, but his most exceptional talent was the one that made him famous. Buehner was an

8. Auburn
The arrival of a new coach, Pat Dye from Wyoming, will play a big part in Auburn's success or failure this year. But they sound as if they are ready to tackle something big.

Guard Keith Uecker said, "Auburn people are ready for something to happen. They are tired of playing second fiddle to Alabama." Okay Keith, we'll see.

9. Kentucky
See today's football supplement for the Cat's season outlook.

10. Vanderbilt
The song remains the same for Vandy — last place in the SEC. The Commodore's great hope, All-America candidate Ken Hammond, an offensive guard, has injured his ankle and will have to sit out a least a couple of games.

Reds lose

CINCINNATI (AP) — Warren Cromartie singled home the winning run in Montreal's three-run seventh inning to lead the Expos to a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds last night.

Joe Price, 4-1, who pitched one-third of an inning and gave up the two unearned runs in the seventh, was the loser.

The Expos scored once in the third and Cincinnati made it 2-1 in bottom of the fourth.

The Reds' final run came in the sixth when Griffey tripled.

The Beer Ball.
New! from Hudepohl.

Good times are easy with a Hudepohl Beer Ball.

Get some friends together, add a Hudepohl Beer Ball and watch the good times roll! The Hudepohl Beer Ball is great for picnics, camping, bowling, softball, golf outings, campus parties, boating and by the pool. No matter where you use the Hudepohl Beer Ball, always keep it cold.

The Hudepohl Beer Ball is convenient.

Just ice it down and go! The Beer Ball's filled with refreshing Hudepohl draft beer: five-and-one-sixth gallons or fifty-five 12-oz. servings. It's translucent, so you always know how much beer is inside. And it's packed in a light, easy-to-carry box with handles. Best of all, with the Hudepohl Beer Ball, you make only one trip to buy beer. No deposits. No returns. No messy clean ups.

athlete. And boy, was he some athlete. Sports always came easy to Buehner. He excelled at everything he tried — baseball, basketball, football, track. But because of the long seasons and overlapping schedules, he was forced to choose one sport by his junior year. He chose football.

During his high school playing career, St. Xavier won 31 games in a row, a Kentucky high school record that still stands. He ran the Veer offense to perfection, using his blazing speed and quick mind to tear through opposing defenses. He was known mostly for his running ability, but he could pass if called on to do so. The honors that he earned as a high school quarterback are nothing short of spectacular. He was named second team All-State quarterback in his junior year. In his senior year, he was first team All-State.

Also in his senior year, he was Parade Magazine All-America, Adidas All-America, and Catholic High School All-America.

Perhaps his most prestigious award came last year when the Courier-Journal named him "Kentucky High School Athlete of the Decade" for the 1970s. Other high school stars who were considered for the title included Darrell Griffith, Sonny Collins, and Jeff Lamp, among others.

"Rick's career as a high school quarterback was unparalleled in the history of the state," says Jim Campbell, UK tight end, who played against Buehner during his own brilliant career at Trinity High. "He was probably the best to ever come out of Kentucky."

Mike Stewart, who has been coaching football since 1963, was Buehner's head coach in his senior year.

"He's the greatest athlete I've ever been associated with — bar none," says Stewart. "Not only that, but he's one of the finest human beings I've ever known, and I mean that sincerely."

His talent drew raves not only from fans, writers, coaches and opponents, but the attention of literally hundreds of college recruiters.

He was sought after by USC, Ohio State, Michigan, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas, Hawaii, Notre Dame, and Kentucky, among others. Why, if Tom Landry and the Dallas Cowboys had called, it would have come as no big surprise. Buehner was going to be there in a few years anyway. It was only a matter of time.

He quickly narrowed his choices down to two — Kentucky and Notre Dame. Whatever he chose, it didn't matter, for it was widely assumed that he would be a big smash wherever he went.

He eventually chose Notre Dame. Home of Knute Rockne and the Golden Dome, Paul Hornung and "Win One for the Gipper." Nowhere is football more revered than at Notre Dame. It was a fitting place for the star to make his name known all across the country.

Tomorrow: On to Notre Dame.

Sports Trivia

Q. When was the last time Vanderbilt won an SEC football game?

A. It's been a long time. In the final game of the 1975 season, Vandy defeated Tennessee 17-14 since then, the Commodores have lost 30 consecutive games in 1976.

Stray Cats

Off-campus students find a place to stop and pause

By SARA SHEETS Reporter

Off-campus 'cats' now have their own scratching post here at the University.

These 'cats' aren't real felines, however. They are actually called Stray Cats - Students That Reside Away Yet Care About Their School - an organization for full or part-time students who live off campus and cannot take advantage of the social life of residence halls.

The group is having a get-acquainted pizza party for interested students from 3:30 to 5:00 this afternoon at the Student Center Grill. Free pizza will be provided, a live band will play and gift certificates, including a dinner for two at the Glass Gardens Restaurant in the Hyatt Regency and two dinners at Long John Silver's, will be given away.

Sharon Childs, advisor for Stray Cats, said 200 people attended the pizza party last year. However, only 15 to 20 people attended the organization's meetings. "This year we hope to have as many people as the grill will hold," she said.

The organization aims to provide off-campus students with activities and information pertinent to their own needs and to inform them of on-campus events.

"We want to be a place where if off-campus students want to find out about something they can come ask," said the group's president, Mark Cole, a computer science sophomore. "Groups tend to put information in students' mailboxes about activities," Cole added. "And there's no way to do that with off-campus students."

Stray Cats tries to initiate and promote communication among members as well as to develop interaction between them and resident students.

The group has already become active in student life by sponsoring a Fun Run, a Surviving Off-Campus workshop, and distributing a newsletter to update non-resident students on issues relevant to them.

Planned activities for this semester include participation in intramural sports and use of boat seating at sporting events.

Cole said approximately 140 new members are on the mailing list for this semester. Stray Cats is growing and encourages more off-campus students to join in the fun. Interested students can call Cole at 298-3088 or the group's adviser, Sharon Childs at 258-2751.

The next scheduled meeting for Stray Cats will be at 3:30, 214 Student Center, Sept. 10.

Marriage adds to student challenge

By BETH BUSHONG
Reporter

Adjusting to the University is difficult enough, but compounding the problems students generally face, marriage increases the challenges of college survival.

Among the problems married students face are finding housing and reconciling their roles as spouses and students.

The on-campus housing situation for married students has improved in the past 10 years as additional housing units have been developed, increasing on-campus living space for enrolled married students.

"The number of married couples enrolling and applying for housing hasn't changed noticeably in the last few years, so housing for the married student is easier to get than for the single undergraduate," said Jean Lindley, director of housing and development.

The housing office revamped three of the 25 units in the Greg Page Apartments to accommodate married couples with one or more children. Before those units were available, only 18 two-bedroom units were provided, and Lindley said that constituted a shortage.

Lindley said all married units are occupied, and although there is a waiting list, it is not as long as that for single undergraduate housing.

Perhaps the most distressing part of being a married student is not in finding housing, but rather, trying to plan a work-study schedule to allow time to spend with a spouse.

Newlyweds Tim and Cathy Lear have found that by organizing their time, they can get the most out of each other and their classes, which helps keep their relationship going at crucial times.

Gale Turner, an engineering junior, said, "spend time with your spouse, but don't crowd them when they are trying to study. Instead encourage them so it will be easier when they are doing late night studying they really don't want to do anyway."

"Everyone knows how hard it is at times to concentrate on a class," Turner said. "Therefore, if you create the incentive for them, they will respect you when they have nights of nerve-racking cramming."

Ernie and Beth Hilleneger are old pros at being married and going to school. Having been married for five and one-half years, the couple said they believe they have some good advice for the newlyweds ready to begin a long and difficult road.

The Hillenegers said they believe it is important for spouses to get used to each others' habits and learn to accept them. Instead of trying to change one another, said the Hillenegers, spouses should help each other and never be too busy to do so.

The couple also stressed the importance of keeping the lines of communication open at all times.

One married student, who preferred not to be identified, recommended counseling for couples who are having trouble harmonizing married and student life.

"When I had problems adjusting to all the changes you go through when you are married your first year, I found the counseling program here was excellent for my relationship," he said.

Another student, who also preferred anonymity, had additional advice for coping with problems. "I pray a lot. I know that sounds corny to some, but it gives me the strength to go back in and keep fighting for that perfect marriage."

UK Football PREVIEW '81

Cats crippled before season

By MIKE KENNY

For the third consecutive year the University of Kentucky football team will be young and inexperienced. Graduation, dismissals, departures, academic ineligibility and injuries are responsible for a dismal outlook in 1981.

Add these problems to the attempt by Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown to replace Wildcat coach Fran Curci in the off-season, and the forecast calls for a blistering heat wave to hit Lexington in early September and remain throughout the autumn months.

A copyright story in the July issue of The Cats Pause revealed that Brown was attempting to replace Curci with George Allen, former coach of the Los Angeles Rams and the Washington Redskins.

Allen, however, bowed out of the controversy after UK President Otis Singletary said the decision was not Brown's to make, and that such an action would have to be initiated by the proper UK bodies.

Curci refused to comment on the Brown controversy in a telephone interview prior to fall workouts. He would only say he had not discussed the matter with his players.

The players have always been the main concern for Curci. He has stood by them in times that perhaps no one else would. Therefore, it should be no surprise that the Wildcat coach begins an appraisal of this year's squad on a complimentary note.

"I think we'll be a better football team than we were in 1980," said Curci. "We'll have better personnel, but I don't know if that means we'll have more wins or not."

See related story on page 6

Last year's Wildcat squad finished with a 3-8 record. Key players from that team, who exhausted their eligibility, are All-Southeastern Conference center Ken Roark, defensive tackle Tim Gooch, linebacker Chuck Smith, running back Randy Brooks and safety Chris Jacobs.

Five players from the 1980 squad expected to contribute a great deal in the upcoming season were dismissed for disciplinary reasons.

lineman Mickey Cochran transferred to Cameron University in Oklahoma as the result of what was called a "food fight" at the training table before spring practice.

Meanwhile, halfback Charlie Jackson was let go following his arrest for discharging a firearm in the city, and offensive guard Bob Fogle was dismissed after being arrested and charged with assault. Ben Ansley, a substitute linebacker, implicated in the Fogle incident, was also asked to leave.

Leaving the Wildcat squad by choice was defensive end Jeff Dennis, who returned to his home in Cincinnati, to concentrate on studies and music. Dennis earned letters his freshman and sophomore years.

Rick Buehner, a transfer from Notre Dame, will not be with the squad for the season opener against North Texas State. Buehner was a high school All-American quarterback at Louisville St. Xavier, but his college career has been marred by injuries. Offensive tackle Richard Adams also will not return.

Injuries have also hurt Kentucky's ranks.

Linebacker Scott Schroeder suffered a knee injury and may miss the first two games of the season. Todd Shadowen, a tight end, was hurt when he fell from a ladder before summer workouts. Defensive end Steve Willis suffered injuries as well.

Finally, the knee injury that running back Chris Jones suffered during the Indiana game a year ago is giving him problems.

"I don't think Chris will be able to play," said Curci.

Still, the backfield is where the UK coach said, "We'll be the strongest, as far as numbers go."

Shawn Donigan, who underwent a shoulder operation in the summer of 1980, is one player Curci mentioned at running back. Other ball carriers destined to play are Richard Abraham, Rodney Francis, Henry Parks, Lawrence "Choo Choo" Lee, and Tom Venable. Randy Jenkins and Terry Henry will be the quarterbacks.

The offensive interior line returns lettermen Robert Cobb, Gerald Smyth, and Steve Williams. Kevin Kearns has been

Coaches evaluate players

By MIKE KENNY

Charlie Baily, assistant head coach. Also in charge of linebackers:

"In the linebacker situation right now we're very, very thin. We're going to have to count on some freshmen. We make may a few personnel changes with the varsity to add a little depth at the position. Right now things are sort of shaky.

"I really think the guys that we do have will work hard and compete. That's the most important thing, going out there and lining up and competing and giving it every thing every down."

George Catavolos, defensive back coach:

"We're very fortunate to have seven defensive backs who have started last year. We will be competitive at the corner position, with Venus Meaux, Tom Petty and Kerry Baird fighting out for the starting position. We also have some fair backups in Benjie Johnson and Craig Hamilton. We have a freshman in here from Michigan by the name of Carmichael Caldwell who has shown some promise, and as he learns the system he might get some playing time.

"At the safety positions we do have Greg Long and Andy Molls, who I think will be as good as there is in the Southeastern Conference. Their backups are hurt as far as experience goes, but they are very fine athletes in Ty Richmond and Gordon Jackson. Also we do have another backup in 'Buzz' (David) Meers, and another freshman out of Louisville who was a high school All-American, by the name of Paul Calhoun, who has shown a lot of promise and I look in the future toward working with him. I feel he'll put a lot of pressure on the upper classmen."

Mike Cassity, the secondary and the kicking game:

"We're looking forward to the season, and hopefully the secondary will have depth and be a little more experienced. Our kicking game is something that we're going to work on every practice, and hopefully that'll pay off in the end also.

"In the kicking game we're talking about people who will be head hunters, go down on kickoffs, cover the balls. As far as our punt returners, it's hard to say right now who we are going to be using, but we're going to have to have a little help from our freshmen. Hopefully we'll find that during two-a-day practices."

Dan Coughlin, defensive line coach:

"In our defensive line we're starting out with Jeff Smith at left defensive tackle, Effley Brooks at the nose guard, and Keith Martin at the right tackle. Jeff and Keith are both Kentucky kids and Effley Brooks is from Columbus, Ohio.

"Right now we are very, very questionable as to who is going to backup. It may be some freshmen and it may be some held-over kids that were here in the spring. After the first line it's just mumbo-jumbo. We don't really know who is going to be our second and thirds.

"We're pleased with our first line because they went into spring practice with a great attitude. They hustled and we think that they learned a lot in the spring. It's a young group and we're just going to have to go back in the fall drills, working on fundamentals and trying to get everything organized and knitted together by the North Texas State game.

"We don't know who will back up, but John McVeigh has looked very good working out in shorts (beginning freshman practice in gym shorts the first three days) and so has Richard Jordan and Tom Richey. Those are the three kids who looked good as far as in shorts. But that's so hard to tell, because it's a different ballgame going from shorts to pads."

Coach Perry Moss, offensive coordinator:

"We're doing fine offensively. I think we've got a chance if we develop properly to where we can have a decent offensive football team. But we've got some work ahead of us. We'll be running a normal formation. It won't be unlike what you see North Texas State or Alabama or anybody else using.

"We've looked at these players, we've had them in the spring and so we've got a pretty good idea now of what we've got. Most of them have come back in good shape, and we'll start with the players that had the positions in the spring. It's their job as long as they keep it and of course there'll be some surprises. Some players will fall off and other players will come on.

Bill Glaser, defensive end coach:

"As far as the defensive ends go, we have a little more experience this year than we've had in the past two years. The only concern we have right now is that as a group they don't seem to be in the best shape in the world. We hoped that they would have come back in a lot better shape. You know, they should lift weights in the summer and come back with the same strength they had last year and they should come back in good running shape. They don't appear to be that way now. But by the time we open up against North Texas State we'll get that straightened out. That won't be a major problem.

"There are some question marks as far as injuries. Donnie Roe hurt his knee this summer running at home and we don't know how his knee is going to react, and Steve Willis hurt his knee the last part of spring football. So they are the big question marks as to how we're going to hold up. If they hold up physically, then the group can be solid. If they don't hold up physically then we're going to be very, very thin and we're going to lose a lot of experience, because those two guys did a lot of playing last year.

"I feel that if Steve Willis's knee were 100 percent, then he would be a very exciting football player. He wouldn't be the same as (former UK All-American) Art Still in that he wouldn't rely on his imposing size, but he would be so quick, and he was so quick in the spring (before the injury), that he made a lot of things happen that usually wouldn't happen. Right now we don't know if he's going to have that kind of quickness and everything coming back."

Tom Turchetta, offensive line coach:

"I think the offensive line has an awful lot of potential. It's going to depend on their conditioning and how hard they push themselves during two-a-day practices. The key thing is to avoid the injuries that happened to them last year. If that all happens then I think we'll be a very good offensive line.

"We going to begin the season with the guys that ended the spring, Don Corbin at right tackle, Gerry Smith at left tackle, John Maddix at right guard, Dave Bond at left guard and Steve Hricenak at center. The other three guys who are going to be involved in our plans immediately will be Robert Cobb, Steve Williams, and Kevin Kearns.

"All the freshmen looked pretty physical. I'm going to have to reserve judgement on them until we get in pads. It's just a matter of adjustment, it takes time. The offensive line is a very difficult position to play, and what we put in with the freshmen in three days, we'll put in with the varsity in one practice. So it's going to take time for them to adjust and to pick things up and we hope that they can catch on as they go along.

"As for Doug Williams it's not a matter of development, it's a matter of how quickly he can adjust to the system, to playing against guys who are as big, as strong and as quick as he is. We'll let him be the indicator as to when he'll be able to play."

Larry Kirksey, receiver coach:

"All of the receivers are back from a year ago, except for Greg Wimberly and right now we're just missing that big-play man, which Greg Wimberly was a year ago. But Allan Watson is back, (Jim) Campbell is back, and Eddie Simmons is back on offense now from a year on defense. So as far as from the wide receivers' standpoint we're hoping that we can catch the ball as we did a year ago.

"One freshman we have is Joe 'Joker' Phillips. He's from Franklin-Simpson and he was a quarterback in high school. Right now we're playing him as a wide receiver, and he's done a few things pretty exceptional for a freshman coming in, and so we're expecting him to maybe come along a little later in the season for a little experience to help us out."

REPORTER: Coach, is the roster correct, did everybody show?

COACH CURCI: The one that's not on there is (defensive back Rick) Buehner. Buehner has elected to go ahead and graduate and work. He's going to work and go to school both. He's got a job. He's got a very good job lined up that worked out for him. And he was hurt and I think really he could have come back to school (on scholarship) if he wanted to. But then he can't work being on scholarship. Apparently it's a very good job and he'll go to school and get his MBA, which is what he wants.

REPORTER: You're early opener presents some problems with preparation.

COACH CURCI: It will be because we won't know much about North Texas State. They'll know most everything about us. When you've got a new coaching staff and a lot of players we don't know much about. (North Texas State coach) Bob Tyler has been in the SEC (Southeastern Conference). He should know more about us than we'll know about him. I like the way our schedule falls though. I think by us having to play early like this gives us a chance to get ready for just one team, which is North Texas State. Then we'll worry about Alabama the next week, because we'll have an extra week off. So our total concentration will be in getting ready for North Texas State only.

REPORTER: Will Kentucky fans see, is there any chance they'll see a more wide-open style of offense this year?

COACH CURCI: Well, that's why every seat here is sold out - to find out what we're going to do.

REPORTER: We're trying to find out early though.

COACH CURCI: I know you are, but I'm not giving any scouting reports today.

REPORTER: Fran, who do you have coming back at linebacker and on the defensive line?

COACH CURCI: We've changed some people around, so it hard to say really. But right now it's Schroeder and (Kevin) McClelland at the linebackers. We'll probably have a couple of freshmen in there that hopefully will make it a stronger position. And on the defensive line starting out, it'll change obviously between now and practice time, but I'd say we have Jeff Smith, Effley Brooks, and Keith Martin. That's probably the way it'll start out and then anything can happen from that point on.

REPORTER: Did (defensive end Don) Fielder come back.

COACH CURCI: Yes. And I think he's one of the keys to this thing working. He's big and strong, (former UK All-American) Art Still type. You know there aren't many Art Stills, but he's that type, big and strong.

REPORTER: How much is the loss of (defensive end Jeff) Dennis going to mean to your team?

COACH CURCI: Not much.

REPORTER: I read somewhere that you might have less contact drills this fall to avoid injuries. Is that the approach that you're going to take?

COACH CURCI: Where did you read that at?

REPORTER: I think it was in Fitz' (Lexington Herald sports columnist D.G. Fitzmaurice's) column.

COACH CURCI: Did you?

REPORTER: Is that true?

COACH CURCI: We'll worry about that at practice, that's our problem.

Scouting for recruits no mystery

"Our coaches go out and see games on Friday nights prior to home games, or they watch films, or we rely on friends in various areas that we really can trust to be accurate," said Leal. "And then we have other boys very, very early eliminate us, saying their other finer choices may be Notre Dame, Oklahoma, and Michigan."

Prospects are forgotten for other reasons as well.

"They might have had a bad senior year, they don't want to play, they see that football is not where they're going to make their living and they start getting serious about other things. There's a whole bunch of reasons."

And then there is the possibility that a Kentucky high school star might be lured away by the competition.

"Oh sure, I suppose that people will be around with a couple of names here, such as (lineman Keith) Bosley and (quarterback Mike) Whitaker," said Leal. "They don't leave them there in your own state and let them go untouched. They'll call various newspapers in different states; the Southern Cals, the Oklahomas will do things like that.

"They'll just say (to the newspaper reporters) 'Give me the best quarterback in your state, give me the best football lineman in your state, give me the best football linebacker in your state,' and they come up with the names. This is how they do it. It's not mysterious.

"Any newspaper reporter would be glad to say that Mike Whitaker appears to be the quarterback, or so and so is the lineman. It makes for newspaper stories with these people coming into town."

Leal surveys highschool prospects

Following are comments Leal made regarding Kentucky high school football prospects, after skimming over a list of what certain recruiting writers have said will be the top 50 prep players in the South for the coming year:

"Leonard Sullivan, of Shelby County, is obviously a fine, fine back. A small one, but a very good one — quick, hard-working. He's tough. He can run; he can tackle as a defensive back.

"Mike Whitaker, of course is the quarterback in the state of Kentucky this year it appears.

"I might mention that there are one or two others in the state. There's a boy named (Bill) Ransdall at E'town who's a pretty fine prospect. There's a kid named John Worth who may or may not play this year over at Davies County in Owensboro. He may specialize in basketball.

"Keith Bosley is a very fine prospect; a big agile boy from right down here in Richmond. He's something like 6-4 and 260 lbs. He's one heck of a fine basketball player, so without a doubt that makes him a football prospect due to the agility and so forth.

"Preston Gray is an excellent running back - wide receiver combination out of Louisville. He's a good name.

"Joe Prince, from Mayfield, was the center on the team that surprised everybody in the Kentucky High School Basketball Championships last year when they went to the semifinals. He was a cog there, one of the reasons they were there. And Joe's about 6-5 and 235 or something along those lines. He's an outstanding prospect, a very, very good football player from a very outstanding football program at Mayfield; which year after year is what you're looking for as far as the way they develop their players, and condition them, and prepare them for the major college opportunities.

"Tom Wilkins, from Russellville, is a lineman who is a very good football player. Russellville surprised everybody in the Kentucky High School Football Championships last year. Everybody was wondering who Russellville was. If you look closely, he was one of the reasons they were there.

"(Kermit) Sykes, here at Bryan Station, is an option-type quarterback and a fine, fine boy. A real speedster. He runs track and is a top player."

Alabama, Notre Dame, and Florida - three teams receiving quite a bit of attention in pre-season football publications.

The Tigers return eight starters on offense and seven on defense. The only questionable sector in the spring was the defensive line, but Stovall found the answer when a junior college transfer and a defector from Arizona State came to the front of the pack. PREDICTION: LSU by 17.

Kentucky visits defending national champion Georgia Oct. 24. The Bulldogs will not have the bite they had last season, because 20 players picked up diplomas following the Sugar Bowl win over Notre Dame.

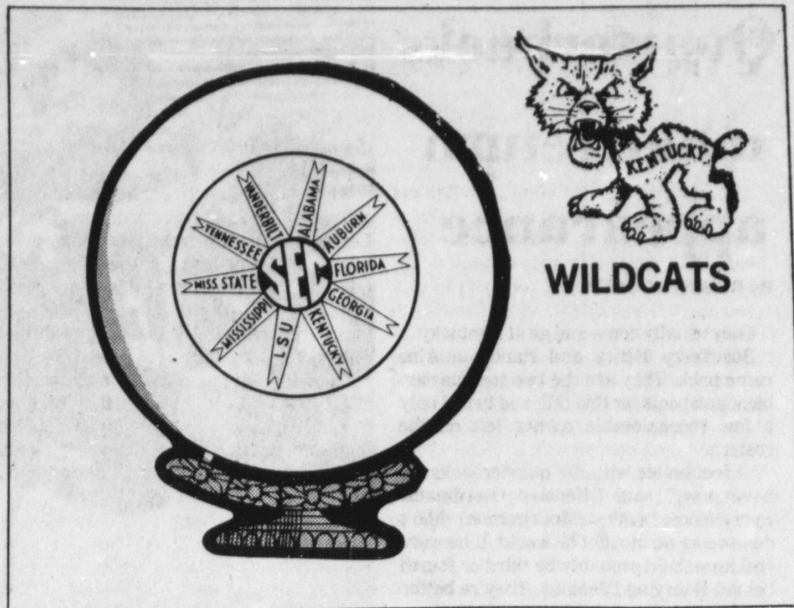

The most noticeable void caused by graduation is on defense, especially in the secondary where only one starter returns. Gone from the defensive backfield are All-American Scott Woerner, who doubled as the nation's leading punt returner, and All-Southeastern Conference Jeff Hipp. Also missing are both defensive ends and linebacker Frank Ros, who captained last year's edition of the Junkyard Dogs.

The offense is another story altogether. All-everything halfback Herschel Walker returns for another shot at the Heisman Trophy, after finishing third in the balloting last year. Quarterback Buck Belue returns for his final season and will be tossing the ball again to his favorite receivers, Lindsay Scott and Norris Brown. The Bulldog offensive line may be young, but it has potential. PREDICTION: Georgia by 10.

Kentucky will celebrate Halloween night with a homecoming game against Virginia Tech. The Gobblers posted an 8-4 record in 1980, with most of the wins against the likes of East Tennessee State, William & Mary, James Madison, Rhode Island . . . get the picture?

With a light schedule and eight offensive starters back, Tech could score often enough to bring a 7-0 record to this game. Defense could be a problem, however, especially in the secondary where graduation claimed four lettermen. PREDICTION: UK by 14.

The Wildcats will make it two in a row with a win over Vanderbilt Nov. 7 in Nashville. The Commodores will be improved this year with a two-platoon quarterback system and a fine stable of freshmen running backs.

Defensively, the secondary should be much improved, since last year's trio of freshmen starters have a year's worth of experience. Still Vandy has quite a way to go before being considered as a favorite in a Southeastern Conference match. PREDICTION: UK by 17.

Kentucky takes its final road trip to Gainesville for a Nov. 14 battle with Florida.

The Gators are a legitimate contender for the conference crown, with eight offensive and seven defensive starters returning. A youthful team in 1980, Florida finished with an 8-4 record. The Gators lost to national champion Georgia in the final minute of play, when a defensive back slipped and fell, allowing his man to run 92 yards for the winning score after catching the ball.

The main area of concern on the Florida team was the offensive line. But anticipating this, the finest group of freshmen linemen recruited in the SEC have arrived on the Gator campus for the upcoming season.

The strong point on offense will be at quarterback, where two proven athletes will battle for first-team honors. On defense the front wall will be hard to penetrate, but the secondary could be suspect. PREDICTION: Florida by 14.

The annual war with Tennessee that brings the season to a close will take place Nov. 21 at Commonwealth Stadium.

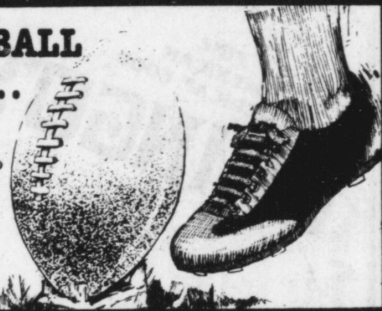

The dreaded Volunteers return seven starters from an offense that was respectable against the likes of Georgia and Southern Cal, yet unimpressive in games with Virginia and Ole Miss.

The Big Orange will arrive in Lexington with a bowl bid on the line. The strong point of the Vol offense is that it will be capable of striking by land or air. The strength of the defense will be the front wall. PREDICTION: Tennessee by 3.

Curci's comments: guarded

Recorded and Transcribed By MIKE KENNY

Following are excerpts from Coach Fran Curci's meeting with reporters during University of Kentucky Football Press Day at Commonwealth Stadium.

REPORTER: You want to put this off-the-field stuff behind you I'm sure, but some of us aren't going to let you. What about the (Governor John Y.) Brown business? Are you trying to take the offensive, or are you just trying to get rid of it completely, just push it out?

COACH CURCI: Silence.

REPORTER: You're not going to talk, is that correct?

COACH CURCI: Silence.

REPORTER: You're not going to talk. Okay, what kind of football season do you expect?

COACH CURCI: Well, we're starting tomorrow. That's what we're here for is to start practice and to get ready to play. I just like the way the players reported today. I thought they reported in pretty good shape. They looked good. We'll have a couple of guys overweight, but for the most part they looked pretty good. And then from here on out it's just hard work.

REPORTER: You said during the spring that teaching them how to win again was important. Do you pick back up on that now?

COACH CURCI: Absolutely. I think winning is what we're out here for. I think the attitude of coming back and being prepared to win is important, and so that's what we'll work on.

REPORTER: Coach, you've said that this is the sixth toughest schedule in the country. How do you feel it rates as far as UK schedules since you've been here?

COACH CURCI: Obviously you know they're based on what everybody did last year. And I think people like Clemson should be really a solid team. They have 18 people back from their starters last year. And Florida is supposed to be greatly improved. So all the way across the board I think that it is a most difficult schedule. But that's been that way since we've been here, so that's really nothing new. The most difficult schedule was, well, I guess last year was pretty tough. I don't know, they are all tough. Whatever's there you've got to line up and play them.

REPORTER: What's your quarterbacking situation going to look like at this point, and who are you looking for to start the first game?

COACH CURCI: I have no idea who will start the first game. We're going to go with (Randy) Jenkins and Terry Henry. And from that point on we'll just have to see how it goes.

REPORTER: Do you have a timetable on pickout one of them to start?

COACH CURCI: No, no timetable.

REPORTER: While it's a plus to have two experienced quarterbacks, is it also tough to get a set offense when they have two different styles?

COACH CURCI: Right now I think it's difficult, yes.

REPORTER: How do you try to work around that?

COACH CURCI: Well, I don't know. We'll just have to wait and see how it turns out.

REPORTER: Coach, what's Chris Jones' status?

COACH CURCI: I think Chris Jones is not going to play this year. He will stay on the 95 (scholarship limit) list. In other words if we put him on injured reserve, what they call medical scholarship, then he can never play again. So we're not going to put him on medical scholarship, just in case somehow a miracle happens and he could play someday, because once you put him on it he can never play again. So we'll go ahead and sacrifice one of our 95. I think we owe him at least that much, to at least give him the opportunity to play again someday, hopefully. I don't think it will happen, but hopefully it will.

REPORTER: Can you tell us one area that is a particular strength and one that is of particular concern?

COACH CURCI: That's kind of hard because we'll have to interject a lot of freshmen into our group, so there's no way of telling where our strengths and weaknesses are until we play.

REPORTER: Are there any particular freshmen that have stood out the first three days?

COACH CURCI: Well, there's a lot of them, you know they're trying so hard at this point. And a couple of them hyperventilated they tried so hard. They had to take a couple of days off. But for the most part, really we're going to hopefully have to fill in about eight people. I don't know who they'll be at this point.

REPORTER: How do you feel about your running back situation for the fall?

COACH CURCI: The running back situation could be good if Donigan comes through, and obviously we lost Jones. This morning when running (Richard)

Abraham herniated something, he had to ask the trainer. I don't know what it is. Out of shape is what it really is, but he has the technical terms for it. So I don't know what his status is. But I think we'll be alright. I think you'll see some freshmen backs in there this year.

REPORTER: What's the status of (linebacker Scott) Schroeder and (defensive end Steve) Willis?

COACH CURCI: Schroeder and Willis, they've got bad knees both of them. And they're very important. They can go right now, but I'm worried about the first game.

REPORTER: You've mentioned freshmen a couple of times. Will there be more dependence on freshmen this year than in the past few years?

COACH CURCI: Well, two years ago when we suspended those players (the eight team members cleared by a grand jury on charges of rape in 1979) we used a considerable amount of freshmen early and I thought that was probably one of our best coaching jobs. We started off with freshmen and played the whole year with them and we almost went to a bowl game with just a bunch of young kids. So, we've done it before and we'll do it again if we have to. And it looks like we're going to have to, so we'll just do it and not look back.

REPORTER: What about (tight end) Todd Shadowen, can you tell us his status right now?

COACH CURCI: Todd Shadowen has got his jaw wired and will be out six to eight weeks. The problem with something like that is that he'll probably lose about 30 pounds, so I would say that Todd Shadowen is out for the year. That's just my guess, unless somehow or another he can maintain his weight. See he could run and do everything to stay in shape and be ready to play, but I don't know how he's going to be able to keep his weight on. They just tell me from other people that when you break your jaw and they wire it that you can't get the food in you. And if you can't get the food in you, the solid food, you'll just lose weight. They tell me he'll lose about 30 pounds and if that happens then there's no way he could put it back on in time to play.

REPORTER: What kind of season are you expecting this year? I'm sure you want to go 11-6, but realistically, what kind of record are you shooting for?

COACH CURCI: I have no comment on that.

Recruiting Blue(s)

By MIKE KENNY

In the past, college football coaches have considered player motivation the key to winning. It must have worked. Why else would everyone remember Notre Dame's legendary coach Knute Rockne's "Win one for the Gipper" speech?

But times have changed.

Football is no longer as much a game of motivation as it is a game of preparation. And there is no better way for a coach to be prepared than through successful recruiting. Even the most inspiring coach cannot be a consistent winner if he fails to recruit the finest talent available.

University of Kentucky Chief Recruiter Dan Leal discussed Wildcat football recruiting during a recent interview in his office at Commonwealth Stadium.

"Other than the great year of (Derrick) Ramsey, (Art) Still, (Jerry) Blanton, (Mike) Siganos, (Jim) Kovach, (Tom) Dornbrook, and some of those kinds of players, we look up and we've had no better than average to slightly below average recruiting years, which accounts for our record in eight years of 44-43-2."

Kentucky has often failed to persuade the best high school players in Dixie to head north for college.

"We don't recruit that much in the South anymore," said Leal. "We do a once-over lightly in a few states. We pop in and out of Miami, we pop in and out of Atlanta, and we pop in and out of certain parts of Tennessee. And that hasn't been all that successful for us either, as it hasn't been all that successful for Tennessee to come into Kentucky."

"Basically there's just great tradition throughout Southern states, and most of the states involved have two state schools as such."

Some examples are Georgia Tech and Georgia in the peach state, Auburn and Alabama in the heart of Dixie, and the Ole Miss-Mississippi State duo in the Cotton state.

"To think you're going to bring a boy, first of all into the North, which isn't all that fashionable to begin with due to weather and so forth, as well as for you to beat the two state schools, is an unrealistic approach to success."

"If we had to come away with recruiting more than 30 (players) a year, we would have to try harder in the South. In other words, we would have to get a number out of there to — let's say recruit 60 or 70 boys a year. Again, that's not it. It's a maximum of 30 boys a year, and we have just found that the less emphasis we have put in places south of here, other than Miami and a couple of favorite spots in Florida, we're just better off. We're better off staying north."

Leal said the coaching staff is pleased with the past two recruiting classes at Kentucky.

"We feel those are our best two classes back to back since we've been here, other than the great class that graduated in 1977. These two classes are a result of the emphasis we placed in the North and the lack of emphasis that we placed in the South."

Leal, who along with Coach Fran Curci is a native Pennsylvanian, said Wildcat coaches like to think there are a minimum of eight and a maximum of 15 prospects in the Bluegrass state.

"If you pull an average of 10 boys out of the state of Kentucky, five from Ohio, two or three from Pennsylvania, one in Detroit, one in Chicago, one in New Jersey, one in Wisconsin, one in Minnesota, one in the northwestern tip of Indiana or so and from there through southern Indiana, the first thing you know you'll have nearly 30."

When the selection process for the 30 recruits begins, a massive file is created to hold information on any high school players Kentucky might be interested in.

"Our files are full," said Leal. "There's no doubt we're dealing with over 1,500 names right now; people that we rate in the category at the moment that could play for Kentucky and help Kentucky win games.

"That needs to be refined a little bit. That's based on high school coaches' opinions of those boys, which gets a little subjective. But on the other hand it's their honest opinion."

The list is usually narrowed down quite a bit before the Christmas holidays.

"Of the 1,500, probably in 500 cases we'll see them play live or on films," said Leal, "because the other 1,000 somewhere along the line we'll eliminate them or they'll eliminate us prior to December."

Football forecast: hot, dry, dismal

By MIKE KENNY

Forecasting the 1981 Kentucky Wildcat football season is much like pitching dimes into glass objects at county fairs. Your heart tells you to toss your money at the big prize, but your head tells you to concentrate on the smaller ones more easily in reach.

Kentucky will take a small one in the opener (Sept. 5 at Commonwealth Stadium) against North Texas State.

Bob Tyler, Mississippi State coach from 1973-78, takes control of the Mean Green Texas squad this year.

With eight defensive starters returning, one would think the Mean Green would live up to its name. That will not be the case, however, because those same players gave up an average of 23 points per game last year, while playing such schools as New Mexico State, Texas-Arlington, and Southwest Louisiana.

The attack force must be rebuilt because half the team graduated last spring. Therefore, the quarterback and the offensive line have not been tested. PREDICTION: UK by 14.

After a win over hapless North Texas State, Kentucky will aim for the big one in the second game against an Alabama team it has failed to beat in 27 consecutive tries.

The Crimson Tide will roll into Commonwealth Stadium Sept. 19 with perhaps a more powerful offense than the one that drowned the Wildcats 45-0 last year. Alabama's 1981 wishbone will have more speed at the running back positions and more size in the line. If there is a question mark on offense it is at quarterback.

The Tide defense will once again be rugged, with the major strengths coming at linebacker and in the defensive backfield.

Kentucky may take an early lead, as it did the last time these two teams met at Commonwealth Stadium (14-0 in 1973), but the outcome of the game will also be the same with the Tide on top.

While a victory over Alabama could guarantee Coach Fran Curci would be in Lexington another year, it would be a monumental mistake for the Wildcats to build their season around this game. Such a mistake will occur, however, as Kentucky drops this one on its way to a 4-7 final record. PREDICTION: Alabama by 21.

The Cats will make their first road trip of the season Sept. 26 when they take on Kansas at Lawrence. The Jayhawks will be young, but dangerous. They also own a 2-0 record against Kentucky, dating back to the 1975 and 1976 seasons.

Kirwan Bell, named to last year's freshman All-American team, is the bread-and-butter man at Kansas. The 5-9, 185 lb. running back gained over 1,000 yards in his rookie campaign. The offensive line is being rebuilt, but this will not be a weak spot. A trio of outstanding Junior College transfers, as well as a former starter for Texas Christian University, will provide the power needed up front to move the ball.

Defensively, Kansas returns seven starters from a team that finished 4-5-2 last year, yet came within a field goal of beating perennial power Oklahoma. The lone Jayhawk weakness on defense will be in the secondary, where only one starter returns for action. PREDICTION: Kansas by 10.

The Cats will return home Oct. 3 for their fourth game, against Clemson. The Tigers of the Atlantic Coast Conference are by no means in a rebuilding year. Seventeen of 21 starters return - including every player on offense.

Granted, the offense only led Clemson to a 6-5 record last year, but one loss was 20-16 to eventual national champion Georgia, while another was by five points to an 11-1 North Carolina team.

The Tigers have a proven pass attack, but the offense seemed to have trouble picking up yardage on the ground a year ago. Coach Danny Ford worked on this last spring and said his team now is familiar with the entire offensive scheme.

Defensively Clemson will be strong up front, where five starters return. Running against the Tigers will not be easy. The secondary is sound with two starters and 10 lettermen returning. Kentucky has won 6 of the 7 games in its series with Clemson, but a victory here will not come easy. PREDICTION: Clemson by 14.

The Wildcats host South Carolina Oct. 10 under the lights at Commonwealth Stadium.

Carolina's top player, Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers, graduated. Also gone is a quarterback who started for three consecutive years, as well as the team's leading receiver. Last year's backup quarterback may also be out of commission, after undergoing surgery prior to spring practice.

Considering these losses and an ailing quarterback, the Wildcats may be licking their chops in anticipation of this game.

But while the Gamecock offense appears to be shaky at best, the defense boasts seven returning starters from a team that last year beat Michigan at Ann Arbor and held opponents to just over 100 yards rushing per game. PREDICTION: UK by 3.

The Cats then hit the road for a two-game swing through Louisiana and Georgia. The LSU game Oct. 17 in Baton Rouge will be the second of three night games on the Kentucky schedule, the final one against Virginia Tech.

The Bayou Bengals, under second-year head coach Jerry Stovall, will be much improved over last year, but their record may not show it. When the Wildcats arrive in town LSU will already have faced

Quarterbacks make return appearance

By ROBBIE KAISER

They usually come and go at Kentucky. But Terry Henry and Randy Jenkins came back. They are the two top quarterback prospects for this fall, and two of only a few recognizable names left on the roster.

"I feel better with the quarterbacks we have now," said Offensive Coordinator Perry Moss. "Larry (McCrimmon) didn't develop as we thought he would. If he were still here, he'd probably be third or fourth behind Henry and Jenkins. They're better players now than he was.

"I feel good about it (the upcoming season)," Moss said. "The talent's there, the experience is there. Neither (sophomore Jenkins or junior Henry) really has the edge right now, but they're both capable of winning in our conference, something we haven't had in a long time."

McCrimmon, the starting quarterback at the end of last season, was expelled from the team last winter (charge: throwing food in the cafeteria). Bob Fogle was expelled last spring (charge: assault). Charlie Jackson, a promising runner, was expelled this summer (charge: discharging a firearm in a public park). Receiver Greg Wimberly, perhaps the team's best athlete, was declared ineligible because of academic difficulty.

The Wildcats also came close to losing Henry and Jenkins last season. Henry (charge: too little offense), the season's first quarterback, was replaced by Jenkins (charge: erratic). Jenkins was replaced by McCrimmon, whom in turn was replaced by Jenkins and Henry.

Outside Shively Sports Center, where Henry and Jenkins practice in the afternoons, it's cool, but the heat will be on when the season opens.

"Yeah, I've been working out quite a bit over the summer," said Henry, UK's running quarterback, after an afternoon of throwing behind Shively. "I've been throwing every day, five days a week, for a month. A lot of guys stayed around to work out over the summer."

Jenkins, the passing quarterback, has been working too.

"I want to cut down on the interceptions," he said. "We all worked hard in the off-season. Everybody's faster and stronger now."

Everybody who made it back, that is.

Names seem to be meaningless in Shively all year round. Those arriving are strangers; those leaving are forgotten. So the two who came back change everything but their names and start all over.

"You never know what's going to happen," Moss said. "There's been steady improvement. They've (Henry and Jenkins) gained maturity and game experience, which they needed."

"You very seldom see a rookie do well at that position (quarterback). They need mileage, experience."

"Overall, there's a good attitude and they've conditioned themselves pretty well. On the negative side, these guys aren't used to winning. If we can get them used to winning, I'll feel good."

So will Henry.

"We've just mainly been watching films of our opponents," Henry said. "Three teams in the SEC (Southeastern Conference) are in the top 10. It's gonna be tough."

"They've picked us next-to-last in the conference. We're better than that, though. But you've gotta have luck."

Henry is not as quick to mention unbeaten seasons and Heisman trophies as he was last year. He's a year older, but he is still Terry Henry.

"It'll just be whomever gets the job done (at quarterback)," says Henry. "We (Jenkins and he) work a little harder because of our personal competition for the same job. We're friends, but, you know, on the field you can't be friends — you just have to worry about the plays."

"Unless an injury comes up, it's awkward to have two different quarterbacks at two different times," Henry said, resting in Shively, his practice finished.

"Everybody's eager to play - ready to prove we're not so bad. We want to feel what it's like to have a winning season and go to a bowl game. We want to earn the fans' respect again," Henry said.

Another losing season?

Two UK players reflect the disappointment of a loss following a 1980 game. Although the Wildcats will be relying on freshmen for the '81 season the team is expected to have a better win-loss record than last year.

UK player Gain chosen

Gain said it could be a long time before someone else from the Bluegrass selected.

"You won't see a lot of players, whether they be from Kentucky or any other university going into the collegiate Hall of Fame, because there's just a small number that they select every year. There are so many players to select from."

And it evidently does not hurt to have a few years under your belt.

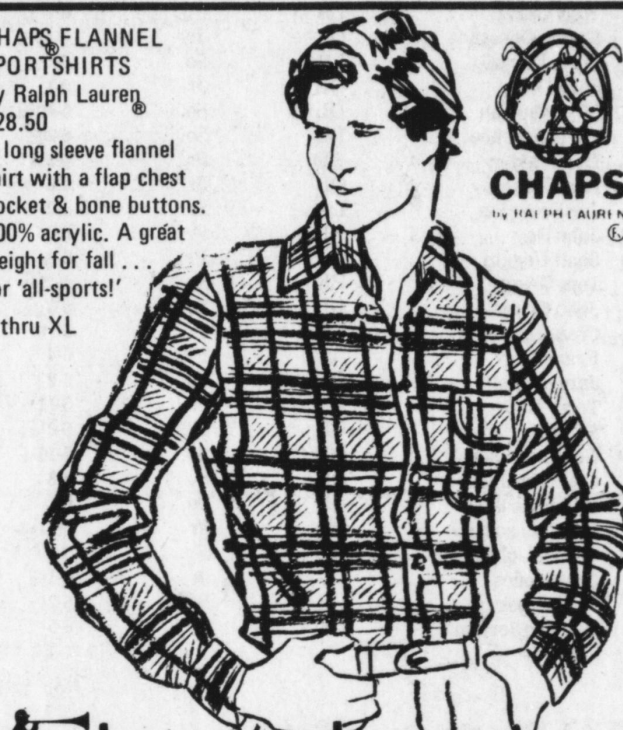

"They're trying to pick up a lot of the old-timers, so I don't think you'll see a player coming right out of college and going into Hall of Fame. He's going to have a few years to prove himself, showing what kind of citizen he is after he's finished school.

"They're basing their merits on what he's done for the community and what he has done for other youngsters. There's a lot of weight going with this, and not just being selected because he's a football player. I think that probably one of the highlights of the Hall of Fame is that they scrutinize who they select into the program."

"Our coaches go out and see games on Friday nights prior to home games, or they watch films, or we rely on friends in various areas that we really can trust to be accurate," said Leal. "And then we have other boys very, very early eliminate us, saying their other finer choices may be Notre Dame, Oklahoma, and Michigan."

Prospects are forgotten for other reasons as well.

"They might have had a bad senior year, they don't want to play, they see that football is not where they're going to make their living and they start getting serious about other things. There's a whole bunch of reasons."

And then there is the possibility that a Kentucky high school star might be lured away by the competition.

"Oh sure, I suppose that people will be around with a couple of names here, such as (lineman Keith) Bosley and (quarterback Mike) Whitaker," said Leal. "They don't leave them there in your own state and let them go untouched. They'll call various newspapers in different states; the Southern Cals, the Oklahomas will do things like that.

"They'll just say (to the newspaper reporters) 'Give me the best quarterback in your state, give me the best football lineman in your state, give me the best football linebacker in your state,' and they come up with the names. This is how they do it. It's not mysterious.

"Any newspaper reporter would be glad to say that Mike Whitaker appears to be the quarterback, or so and so is the lineman. It makes for newspaper stories with these people coming into town."

Leal surveys highschool prospects

Following are comments Leal made regarding Kentucky high school football prospects, after skimming over a list of what certain recruiting writers have said will be the top 50 prep players in the South for the coming year:

"Leonard Sullivan, of Shelby County, is obviously a fine, fine back. A small one, but a very good one — quick, hard-working. He's tough. He can run; he can tackle as a defensive back.

"Mike Whitaker, of course is the quarterback in the state of Kentucky this year it appears.

"I might mention that there are one or two others in the state. There's a boy named (Bill) Ransdall at E'town who's a pretty fine prospect. There's a kid named John Worth who may or may not play this year over at Davies County in Owensboro. He may specialize in basketball.

"Keith Bosley is a very fine prospect; a big agile boy from right down here in Richmond. He's something like 6-4 and 260 lbs. He's one heck of a fine basketball player, so without a doubt that makes him a football prospect due to the agility and so forth.

"Preston Gray is an excellent running back - wide receiver combination out of Louisville. He's a good name.

"Joe Prince, from Mayfield, was the center on the team that surprised everybody in the Kentucky High School Basketball Championships last year when they went to the semifinals. He was a cog there, one of the reasons they were there. And Joe's about 6-5 and 235 or something along those lines. He's an outstanding prospect, a very, very good football player from a very outstanding football program at Mayfield; which year after year is what you're looking for as far as the way they develop their players, and condition them, and prepare them for the major college opportunities.

"Tom Wilkins, from Russellville, is a lineman who is a very good football player. Russellville surprised everybody in the Kentucky High School Football Championships last year. Everybody was wondering who Russellville was. If you look closely, he was one of the reasons they were there.

"(Kermit) Sykes, here at Bryan Station, is an option-type quarterback and a fine, fine boy. A real speedster. He runs track and is a top player."

Kentucky visits defending national champion Georgia Oct. 24. The Bulldogs will not have the bite they had last season, because 20 players picked up diplomas following the Sugar Bowl win over Notre Dame.

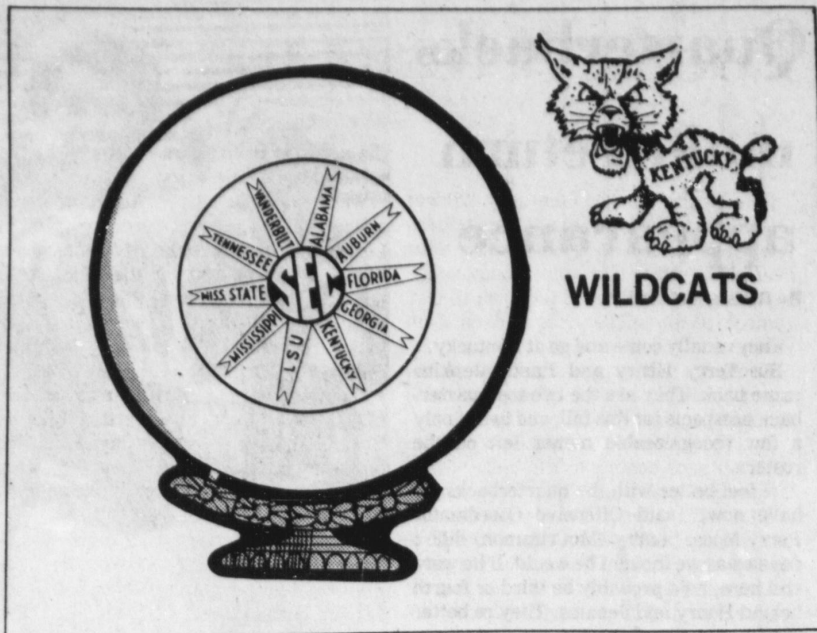

The most noticeable void caused by graduation is on defense, especially in the secondary where only one starter returns. Gone from the defensive backfield are All-American Scott Woerner, who doubled as the nation's leading punt returner, and All-Southeastern Conference Jeff Hipp. Also missing are both defensive ends and linebacker Frank Ros, who captained last year's edition of the Junkyard Dogs.

The offense is another story altogether. All-everything halfback Herschel Walker returns for another shot at the Heisman Trophy, after finishing third in the balloting last year. Quarterback Buck Belue returns for his final season and will be tossing the ball again to his favorite receivers, Lindsay Scott and Norris Brown. The Bulldog offensive line may be young, but it has potential. PREDICTION: Georgia by 10.

Kentucky will celebrate Halloween night with a homecoming game against Virginia Tech. The Gobblers posted an 8-4 record in 1980, with most of the wins against the likes of East Tennessee State, William & Mary, James Madison, Rhode Island . . . get the picture?

With a light schedule and eight offensive starters back, Tech could score often enough to bring a 7-0 record to this game. Defense could be a problem, however, especially in the secondary where graduation claimed four lettermen. PREDICTION: UK by 14.

The Wildcats will make it two in a row

with a win over Vanderbilt Nov. 7 in Nashville. The Commodores will be improved this year with a two-platoon quarterback system and a fine stable of freshmen running backs.

Defensively, the secondary should be much improved, since last year's trio of freshmen starters have a year's worth of experience. Still Vandy has quite a way to go before being considered as a favorite in a Southeastern Conference match. PREDICTION: UK by 17.

Kentucky takes its final road trip to Gainesville for a Nov. 14 battle with Florida.

The Gators are a legitimate contender for the conference crown, with eight offensive and seven defensive starters returning. A youthful team in 1980, Florida finished with an 8-4 record. The Gators lost to national champion Georgia in the final minute of play, when a defensive back slipped and fell, allowing his man to run 92 yards for the winning score after catching the ball.

The main area of concern on the Florida

team was the offensive line. But anticipating this, the finest group of freshmen linemen recruited in the SEC have arrived on the Gator campus for the upcoming season.

The strong point on offense will be at quarterback, where two proven athletes will battle for first-team honors. On defense the front wall will be hard to penetrate, but the secondary could be suspect. PREDICTION: Florida by 14.

The annual war with Tennessee that brings the season to a close will take place Nov. 21 at Commonwealth Stadium.

The dreaded Volunteers return seven starters from an offense that was respectable against the likes of Georgia and Southern Cal, yet unimpressive in games with Virginia and Ole Miss.

The Big Orange will arrive in Lexington with a bowl bid on the line. The strong point of the Vol offense is that it will be capable of striking by land or air. The strength of the defense will be the front wall. PREDICTION: Tennessee by 3.

Former Wildcat in Hall of Fame

By MIKE KENNY

Some 30 years have past since Bob Gain last wore a University of Kentucky football uniform. When he did put on the Blue and White, however, people noticed. Players assigned to block the two-time All-American tackle can vouch for that.

Earlier this month Gain received nationwide attention again, as he became the first Kentucky player enshrined in the College Football Hall of Fame at King's Island, Ohio. (George Blanda, a UK quarterback from 1945-49, has since been inducted and will be enshrined at a later date.)

"It's quite an honor to be selected into the collegiate hall of fame," said Gain during a recent telephone interview. "Especially when you think it goes back to 1865 when they first started college football in the United States. The vast number of colleges and universities put so many talented athletes out on the football field that it's quite an honor to be one of the select few."

Gain, a West Virginia native, decided in 1947 that Kentucky was the place to make his name known as a football player. The two-way tackle and place kicker found leadership at UK under a coach also busy making a name for himself.

Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant had guided his first Kentucky team to a 7-3 record the year before Gain arrived as a freshman. It had been 32 years since Wildcat fans had enjoyed that many wins in a single season.

"The biggest factor, when I went down to visit the campus and met "Bear" Bryant, was that I was wanted," said Gain. "I knew I could play ball there and I wouldn't have to sit on the bench for two or three years. I could play as soon as I arrived."

Gain did just that in the 1947 season opener against Ole Miss in Oxford. And that opener was the toughest game Gain said he played as a member of the Wildcat squad.

"It was 102 degrees in the shade. I was exhausted after the warmup. I couldn't believe I had to go back out and play. It was quite different than playing on the high school level."

More than likely it was different than playing even on the college level for some schools.

"I think that back then we probably worked as hard as anybody. We were trying to prove to the fans and to the people of the United States for that matter, that we were big time football at the University of Kentucky. We had to work extra hard to get up there."

His senior year Gain was a stellar performer in a game that brought Kentucky the national acclaim it had long awaited.

"One of the biggest thrills was being on the team in 1950 that beat top-ranked Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl. Of course back then if you beat the number one team it didn't make any difference in your standings once the season was over, unlike it does today. Once the season ended in late November or early December, that was the conclusion of it. They voted on who was number one and who finished in the top 10."

Members of the 1951 Sugar Bowl team, as well those who played on the seven other squads that Bryant coached while at Kentucky, hold a reunion in Louisville every three years, the most recent in June. There they discuss matters such as how far the seventh-ranked Wildcats might have advanced if the final polls had followed bowl games played on New Year's Day 1951.

Once discussion of the polls is over, the former Wildcat players get down to the business of storytelling.

"Some have gotten a little bigger and

Bob Gain
Tackle 1949-50

some are way out of proportion," said Gain. "The only reason we show up is to protect ourselves."

Gain laughed when reminded of the story about him told by his former UK coach. Bryant said he had to call Gain off star quarterback Vito 'Babe' Parilli, during practices leading up to the Oklahoma game.

"I think everybody wanted to touch Parilli at one time or another. He was a big star. I think that sort of made fun out of practice."

On a more serious note Gain said, "Well, I didn't really want to hurt Babe you know. Sometimes tempers get a little short out on the practice field. You're working like the dickens to get to the quarterback. You've got an offensive man or two hanging on you and you sort of forget on your charge that he's on your side. I've never tried to put a quarterback out of the ballgame, or to hurt him physically. But I used to like to ring his bell and at least let him know that I was there."

While Blanda's enshrinement will give Kentucky back-to-back hall of famers, placed on medical scholarship and as a result, Kentucky must find someone else to backup Steve Hricenak at center. One freshman expected to see action in the offensive line is Doug Williams, a 6-6 265 lb. former high school All-American.

Jim Campbell, who set a UK record for the number of passes caught in a single game, returns at tight end. Campbell grabbed 11 passes last year against Bowling Green, breaking the old mark of 10 set by Calvin Bird vs. Ole Miss in 1958 and Steve Parrish vs. Vanderbilt in 1969. Robb Mangas will help out at tight end.

Wide receiver Greg Wimberly, considered one of Kentucky's top returnees from last year's team, became academically ineligible during the spring and will be sorely missed. Allan Watson will regain starting status and should receive help from Kerry Baird, Rick Massie, and Eddie Simmons.

"We're concerned about the defense," said Curci. "We'll have an awful lot of young players and we'll be thin. We've always been thin there."

The linebacker corps will rely on talented, but inexperienced players until Schroeder recovers from his knee injury. Kevin McClelland, who saw reserve duty last year, will return for his sophomore season. Incoming freshmen Tony Czak, Frank Hare, Ken Pietrowiak, and Phillip Laws will be counted on early.

Returning at defensive end are Don Fielder, Dave Lyons and Don Roe, while Effley Brooks will man the nose guard position. Keith Martin saw spot duty as defensive tackle, but help must come from freshmen John McVeigh, Dan McMillan, Stacy Burrell, Tom Richey, and Tim McDonald.

Greg Long returns in the defensive backfield along with Venus Meaux and Andy Molls. Freshman Paul Calhoun will also lend help.

The kicking game returns intact. Punters are Randy Jenkins (45 for 1,783 yards - 39.6 average) and Chris Poulton (14 for 511 - 36.5). Tom Griggs returns as the place-kicker. Griggs will attempt to improve on his school record 22 consecutive PATs (Point After Touchdown). Rick Strein will provide depth as a kicker.

"I see where our schedule has been ranked the sixth toughest in the country," said Curci. "This year there are no breaks in there. Take North Texas State for example. They looked like a good opener 10 years ago. Then a few years later, they became a real power. You never know what can happen."

But we all know what will happen if the Cats do not mature in a hurry. After all, North Texas State is only the tip of the iceberg. The real tests will come against the likes of Alabama, Clemson, LSU, Georgia, and Florida.

BACARDI, rum. The mixable one.

SUPPORTS THE WILDCATS!!

Bell always goes for gusto

By Walter Page

Tommy Bell likes being in the middle of things, like football fields, television screens and legal arenas - "That is where the challenge is, of course," Bell said grinning.

And he should know. The pursuit of challenge led him to a weekend career as referee in the National Football League and stints in a series of television commercials, in addition to a fulltime career as a trial lawyer.

Black and white became Bell. In the NFL, by consensus, he was regarded as one of the most talented officials, and surely one of the most respected and well liked.

The admiration was mutual. Bell said he misses the NFL for three main reasons.

"First, I miss the challenge of working with 22 excellent athletes and the intricate arrangements necessary for an officiating team to keep ahead of the game.

"Second, I miss the people and the kinship I had with them. I met so many good friends while in the NFL as well as in the NCAA and while on the public speaking circuit. This was a direct result from my work as an official in the NFL," Bell said.

"Third, I miss the mini-vacation it provided for me," he said, the characteristic smile crossing his face. "Officiating, you see, requires a tremendous amount of concentration, so I had to forget all my legal problems to concentrate on my other weekend problems."

But the excitement and challenge involved in refereeing and being a trial lawyer are not that different, Bell said, settling back in his chair to tell a story to illustrate his point.

After officiating for seven years in the Southeastern Conference, Bell said he received a phone call from Dan Tehen, whom Bell described as one of the all-time great NFL and college officials.

"Dan called and said, 'Tommy, I'm gonna tell you one thing. Refin' in the SEC is like practicing law in District Court. Refin' in the NFL is like practicing in the Supreme Court.'

"And he hung up. That's all he said. Soon, I was reffin' in the NFL and he was right. It was a truly exciting challenge," Bell said. "I haven't tried a case in the Supreme Court yet, so I can't say for sure is the challenge is as great."

The challenge also led Bell to a short, but lucrative, television career as a referee in a series of Schlitz beer commercials filmed live and shown last year during the play-offs and once during the Super Bowl.

Bell said he liked the challenge of doing the commercials live with millions of people watching. "The money didn't hurt, either," he said, smiling.

Bell began sports officiating while at UK as a law student. Following the advice of then-UK Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant (under whom he was on scholarship as a halfback), Bell began reffing high school football games, then UK scrimmage games.

After a stint in the Air Force in World War II, where Bell flew on 10 missions (including one where he was forced to bail out), he returned to UK, finishing his law degree in 1951 while he continued to ref football and basketball.

During his 29-year career as a referee, Bell officiated two National Collegiate Athletic Association Basketball championships, 12 NFL play-off games and Super Bowls III and VII. Bell officiated high school football games for three years, SEC football games for seven years, and NFL games for 15 years in addition to practicing law six days a week.

He retired from refereeing in 1977. Joking, he said his wife of 30-odd years, Leslie, was threatening him with a divorce unless he spent more time with her and the rest of his family. "And I didn't have the money to pay for a good lawyer," he said.

Bell's retirement also allowed him to spend more time with his son Bruce, a senior on the Duke University basketball team.

"Bruce was the only senior on the team that had played against UK for the NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association) championship the year before. He didn't start, but played well enough to win the equivalent of the Duke MVP (Most Valuable Player) award that year, and I saw all but three or four of his games," Bell said, glancing at the picture of his son in a corner of his office.

Various plaques, certificates and pictures dot the walls of his office. On one wall there is a 4 by 5 foot enlargement of Bell officiating the 1959 NCAA basketball championship. On the wall behind his desk is a painting of his wife. "Yup, she's always there," Bell said.

"Like I always say," he said smiling, unable to conceal the upcoming joke, "behind every good man, there's a good woman, and behind every good woman, there's a good behind."

"It's nice to be home on weekends, for sure," Bell said after a pause for laughter well-practiced from his years of experience as a public speaker. "I get to be with my family and friends, I get to concentrate on my law practice and to attend the UK ball games."

Looking at his date book, Bell said, "And I've got Sept. 5 open right now," - the date of UK's home opener with North Texas State. "I'll probably have to work some in the morning, but I'll be there for kick-off. And look at what's coming up next. After a week's rest - I bet Fran fixed his schedule with this in mind - big Alabama is coming to town."

Although Bell will be in the stands, instead of on the field for the UK games, perhaps his officiating skills could have been used recently during the John Y. Brown-Otis Singletary-George Allen-Fran Curci situation, where Governor Brown attempted to replace UK's Coach Curci with Coach Allen, late of the Los Angeles Rams of the NFL.

"The timing was really bad," Bell said. "I think Governor Brown has done an excellent job but I disagree with his actions. In this case he overstepped himself."

"I believe that Governor Brown thought that if he could convince as excellent a coach as George Allen to come to UK, we would all just throw up our arms and welcome the change of coaches."

"Well, it didn't work out that way," Bell said, this time with only a faint smile.

"But I'm a great optimist," he said, "and I have a feeling that this recent adversity will lead Curci, his team and staff to work harder, to prove the others wrong and to prove to themselves that they are a good football team."

"When I was reffin', I talked to some players and refs who said they could not hear the boos of the fans. That's crazy. You hear the boos and if you have half a brain, you react; you take up a notch in your belt and move your hind end around that field all the much harder."

"That's what Curci and his football team will do this season. If the fans get behind them, if they win the opener and play a respectable game against Alabama, the future looks bright," Bell said.

Bell was born and raised in Lexington, went to school at UK and lives in Lexington now. He is an active alumnus: state chairman of the March of Dimes for the second year, past member of the UK Board of Trustees, a member of the UK Athletic Association Board of Directors for the past 10 years, and chairman of the UK Annual-Giving Fund.

The Annual Giving Fund last year broke all records for contributions, he said.

As a member of the Athletic Board, Bell has a say in setting the athletic budget, among other duties.

"UK has one of the best athletic programs in the nation. Many other colleges have called or written requesting intricate details and information on our program

Bell said that he served on the subcommittee dealing with Title IX, but quickly gave all the credit to UK President Otis Singletary, whom Bell said hasn't been given enough credit in the past.

here, especially in relation to Title IX" - the government requirement that women athletes be represented fairly in relation to male athletes.

"I suppose my practice is my main challenge now and in the future - that and getting back in shape. I can't run quite as far as I used to. Yup, I've gotta remember to work on that."

Lately, his law practice has been taking up much of his time.

"Most of my practice is in trial work, where I find a particular challenge. I find that in this, as well as in many other aspects of my life, I draw quite a bit from my days as a football referee. And vice-versa, my law practice helped me as a referee."

Bryant recalls '51 Sugar Bowl game who should have let the ball roll, tried to pick it up. He fumbled and Kentucky recovered. That ended any chance we might have had."

Wilkinson called that fumble the turning point in the game but he added, "We'd have been awfully lucky to have scored anyway. We weren't moving the ball very well. We fumbled the ball more than you can fumble it and still expect to win."

"They were comfortably in control of the game by halftime, and I don't think that they were quite as open in the second half as they normally would have been. They were very confident about their defense and they were justified in being so."

Meanwhile Bryant, never one to point the finger at anyone but himself, said he was responsible for Kentucky's offensive letdown after intermission.

"The bad thing was that in the second half I was gutless and not very bright either. I told Parilli not to throw the ball. And after Oklahoma scored and it was 13-7, I was praying and I knew I was going to get killed.

"The further along we got I didn't want to throw the ball because I was afraid we'd get one intercepted . . . and that clock wouldn't run."

When the clock finally ran out on Oklahoma, Bryant said he was "the happiest old man, the luckiest in the world."

Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson informed Bryant that luck had nothing to do with it.

"After the game, later on, Bud and some of his assistants told me that they hadn't played against any folks like we had at Kentucky," said Bryant. "We had some real studs on that team."

The list of Wildcats from that game who went on to play professional football proves Bryant correct. Following are the names of those players and their positions while at UK, as well as where they first played professionally:

Al Bruno, end, the Canadian Football League; Gene Donaldson, guard, Cleveland; Bob Fry, end, Los Angeles; Dom Fucci, end, Detroit; Frank Fuller, center, Los Angeles; Bob Gain, tackle, Cleveland; Vito 'Babe' Parilli, quarterback, Green Bay.

"They were a great bunch of guys, and they won in spite of me," said Bryant, referring to the team that played the greatest game in Wildcat football history.

'Bear' Bryant remembers greatest UK game

By MIKE KENNY

To sports writers across the country it was the upset of the decade. To the legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant, then coach of the Wildcats, it was "one of the greatest games I ever was involved in." To Kentuckians the 1951 Sugar Bowl became the finest moment in Wildcat football history.

But that game, where the Wildcats knocked off No. 1 Oklahoma 13-7, almost did not happen.

After breezing through the first 10 games of the 1950 regular season without a loss, Kentucky seemed a sure bet to be offered a New Year's Day trip to New Orleans to face the powerful Sooners. Invincible was the word used most frequently to describe the Oklahoma football team, which had built a 31-game winning streak in nearly three seasons of play.

But the final UK game of the season, a 7-0 whitewash at the hands of Tennessee in Knoxville, almost gave Coach Bryant and the Wildcats a reason to hibernate.

"Everybody thought we had a bowl game," said Bryant in a recent telephone interview from his Tuscaloosa office. "Then we got beat by Tennessee and we didn't have one."

Bryant sent the Wildcats home to Lexington after the loss to the Volunteers, while he attempted to salvage the bowl invitation. With him were three men who offered valuable assistance; Sugar Bowl President Charles C. Zatarain, Southeastern Conference Commissioner Bernie H. Moore and UK Director of Athletics Bernie A. Shively.

"We went up to the room there and they had a conference call," said Bryant. "They called all the other Sugar Bowl people and they were going to invite Wyoming. Then Charlie Zatarain really went to bat for us."

A statement from Bryant, however, clinched the invitation.

"I told them I'd guarantee that if we were invited we'd beat Oklahoma. I was afraid I was going to get mobbed, because I had already turned down the Orange and Cotton bowls since the Sugar was the big thing. I knew if we hadn't gotten the Sugar Bowl bid we were going to stay home, and I probably was going to get run out of town."

With the invitation in one hand and a game plan in the other, Bryant gathered his Wildcats and headed south to Alabama.

"We practiced in Mobile first, and the players were about to kill one another. I thought about the year before (UK's 21-13 Orange Bowl loss to Santa Clara) when I'd beaten them by working them too much."

From there the Kentucky contingent went to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, for the final series of workouts leading up to the big game. According to then Lexington Herald sports editor Ed Ashford, the Louisiana State campus was the perfect place to finish preparations for the Sooners. In his column dated Dec. 31 from New Orleans, Ashford wrote:

"It's no secret that LSU is still very unhappy over the lamented 35-0 fiasco with the Sooners a year ago and Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson's recent rubbing of fresh salt in those old Tiger wounds certainly hasn't soothed the LSU state of mind. Wilkinson told reporters that he didn't want his team to play LSU last year and accused the Baton Rouge school of unethical tactics.

"So anything the Tigers can do for a Southeastern Conference fellow-member, even though this bunch of Wildcats hung it on the Bengals the past two seasons, they are ready to give it, all in an ethical manner, of course."

The LSU people may have been downright friendly, but the Kentucky players grew meaner by the minute caged on the Tiger campus.

"They were pulling at the bit," said Bryant. "One day we had them rushing the passer and Bob Gain was trying to kill Parilli. (UK's Gain and Vito 'Babe' Parilli were two-time All-Americans, at tackle and quarterback respectively).

By game time some 83,000 spectators in Tulane Sugar Bowl stadium and hundreds of thousands more listening to the game on radio were aware the Wildcats were more than ready to play football.

"The first half our team looked real terrific," said Bryant. "I think the first time we had the ball (end Ben) Zaranka caught a pass in the corner that I thought was a touchdown. Of course it wasn't."

For Oklahoma, the scare was an omen of things to come. On the Sooners' first offensive play from scrimmage, Gain crashed through the line and caused a fumble that Wildcat teammate Walt Yowarsky (the game's most valuable player) recovered at the Oklahoma 22 yard line. Then came what Bryant said was "the thing I remember most about the game."

Kentucky halfback Wilber "Shorty" Jamerson made an acrobatic reception of a Parilli pass in the end zone to give the Cats their first score only three minutes into the game. Gain kicked the extra point to make it 7-0.

"I'd seen him make the same kind in practice a lot of times because he worked at making those type catches," said Bryant. "Everybody thought it was unbelievable, but heck, it was routine for Shorty."

Early in the second quarter, Jamerson got the call again on a running play from the Oklahoma one yard line. When the point after was missed, Kentucky led 13-0. The drive covered 81 yards in six plays, including a 46-yard toss from Parilli to end Al Bruno.

The defense held the key to victory for Kentucky in the second half, after the Sooners closed the door on Parilli and company. The Wildcats had a goal-line stand early in the third quarter, but Oklahoma scored midway through fourth to close the gap to 13-7 and it appeared a comeback was in the making.

"I thought we might get lucky," said former Oklahoma head coach Bud Wilkinson in a recent telephone interview. "We stopped Kentucky with about two or three minutes left to play. They punted and it was not a great kick. One of our halfbacks,
