Who fired that shot?

● An 80-year-old man was having his annual checkup, and the doctor asked him how he was feeling.

"I've never been better!" he boasted. "I've got an 18 year-old bride who's pregnant and having my child! What do you think about that?"

The doctor considered this for a moment, then said, "Let me tell you a story."

"I knew a guy who was an avid hunter. But one day he went out in a hurry and he accidentally grabbed his umbrella instead of his gun. So he was in the woods and suddenly a grizzly bear appeared in front of him! He raised up his umbrella, pointed it at the bear and squeezed the handle. And do you know what happened?" the doctor asked.

Dumbfounded, the old man replied "No."

The doctor continued, "The bear dropped dead in front of him!"

"That's impossible!" exclaimed the old man. "Someone else must have shot that bear."

"That's kind of what I'm getting at..." replied the doctor.

● A woman accompanied her husband to the doctor's office. After his checkup, the doctor called the wife into his office. He said, "Your husband is suffering from a very severe disease, combined with horrible stress. If you don't do the following, your husband will surely die."

"Make his every meal. Don't burden him with chores, as he probably has a hard day. Don't discuss your problems with him, it will only make his stress worse. And most importantly, make love several times a week and satisfy his every whim. If you can do this for a year, I think your husband will regain his health completely."

On the way home, the husband asked his wife, "What did the doctor say?"

"He said you're going to die," she replied.

Dentistry students help kids to learn proper dental care

By Jill Gorn
STAFF WRITER

"I don't know, but I've been told: brushing teeth is good as gold. I don't know, but I can see; flossing and swishing are good for me."

This jingle can be heard by first-graders at the Lexington Children's Museum this week as they celebrate National Children's Dental Health Month. The project was developed by the Bluegrass Dental Society and Procter and Gamble. Students from UK's College of Dentistry volunteered their time to help with the project and several other dental professionals and faculty are helping with the event.

Children are experiencing many fun activities, which teach them about their teeth. These activities include a nutrition demonstration, toothpaste laboratory, oral hygiene presentation, giant teeth and a free dental screening.

"The students are really getting hands-on experience rather than reading," said Becky Wiedemann, first-year dentistry student. "We've been using puppets to illustrate, and the kids really get into it."

One of the more attractive sights at the museum is a white, tooth-shaped pillow named Tyrone, developed by the Lexington-Fayette County Health Department. Tyrone explains to the children the importance of their teeth and how to care for them.

"It's good because all of the information is given to the children on their level," Wiedemann said, "so it's fun for them."

Children actually get to participate by becoming human teeth while someone flosses in between them with giant floss, otherwise known as a jump rope.

In the toothpaste laboratory, two first-year College of Dentistry students, Sam Black and Thomas Shipley, made different kinds of toothpaste and let the kids taste each kind.

"We tell them when and how often to brush their teeth," said Black, as the children gaze at a life-size tube of toothpaste and a toothbrush.

Dental screenings were given to every child whose parents signed a permission form. The children received printed dental reports of any cavities or abnormalities seen by the screenings.

"The screenings are something new we are doing," Lois Brown said. "It's really worth while to come and see it done."

As the children wait for their dental screening, they can sit in a dental chair and play with the different dental instruments a dentist might use. "I don't ever get scared at the dentist because I've been before," said Marie Blake, Johnson Elementary first-grader, "and it didn't hurt."

The giant teeth display was also a favorite among the children. "I want to touch the gums!" said Anton Brown, a Johnson Elementary first-grader.

Teachers and the dental community find the activities helpful to young students. "We brought 110 students from kindergarten and first-grade," said Margaret Cagle, Johnson Elementary teacher. "The kids are very excited about it." Other students were not sure what to expect.

"They're not gonna pull my teeth out!" said Daniel Warren, Johnson Elementary kindergarten student.

The event continues all this week. The museum has had two or three schools visit per day. More than 400 have attended since Monday.

"We could not have done this without the facility from the Lexington Children's museum, so we do want to thank them," said David Gardner, of Procter and Gamble-Crest.

ACADEMICS

Research gains stature

Recent medical discoveries has UK rising on list of top research universities

By Manish Bhatia
STAFF WRITER

Thanks to the dedicated scientists at UK, the solution to one of nature's biggest ailments is only a sniff away.

From the critically acclaimed nasal version of Viagra to the development of carbon nanotubes, UK is quickly emerging as one of the pioneer research institutions in the nation.

"UK is endeavoring to become a great national research center. It has reduced academic and scholarly results to economic reality," said Dr. Fitzgerald Bramwell, vice president for research and graduate studies.

"The Research Challenge Trust Fund has helped strengthen our ability to recruit and retain the finest students and faculty," he said.

The University has been in the forefront of several leading medical breakthroughs, ranging from the nicotine patch to treatments for breast cancer and Alzheimer's disease. The Gluck Equine Research Center, a pioneer institution in equine research, is the only one of its kind in the country.

According to a research update by UK, research contracts and awards to the University from out-of-state sources resulted in a $232.6 million contribution to Kentucky's economy in 1997. In addition, UK received $72.8 million in federal funding for research in the 1998 fiscal year.

Nasal Viagra is the newest member of UK's growing list of research accomplishments. Developed by two pharmacy professors, the faster version of Pfizer's Viagra was recently featured on "NBC Nightly News" and several national and international publications.

"We already have a product named Stadol in the market for 'migraine headaches,'" said Dr. Anwar Hussain, one of the inventors of Nasal Viagra, a drug that begins to work about 10 minutes after intake.

"Nasal Viagra is based on the same principle as Sta-dol and gets into the blood stream quicker than the tablet version, thus removing some of the anxiety and embarrassment involved with it's intake," he said.

The faster reaction time could stop the patient from consuming additional tablets resulting in unwanted side effects, as well.

Along with Dr. Lewis Ditter, Hussain has filed for a patent for the drug in UK's name. If marketed, the new drug could result in tremendous revenues for the University. UK already receives about $2 million annually from its Stadol patent.

Some other researches at UK include the use of soy protein to reduce cholesterol and the use of tiny carbon nanotubes in the manufacture of computer chips and aircraft. The Center on Aging also helped develop the first comprehensive theory to explain brain cell death in Alzheimer's disease.

"The University engaged in a two-year process of self examination to achieve national and international prominence in research and graduate studies," said Bramwell. "We are now executing the plan."

ATHLETICS

Idea of busing fans being tossed around

By Holly Young
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Community leaders will meet on Feb. 19 to discuss a plan that would encourage UK football fans to park downtown and travel to home games by bus.

Former UK student Kevin Weaver, a member of the Marketing Committee for the Downtown Lexington Corporation, formed the group meeting.

The shuttle idea originated as a way to attract people to the downtown area and alleviate the parking problems at the home UK football games, Weaver said.

One Lexington resident involved with the plan is trying to find alternate places for people to park. "This will help keep traffic out of neighborhoods and yards," said Lisa Johnson, president of the Transylvania Park Association. "It's a great idea."

Parking problems have increased in recent years and are likely to worsen, said Rodney Stiles, director of Administrative Services for Athletics. Only about 7,000 parking passes are issued for football games. "Season ticket holders have the first shot at renewing their parking passes, then we go by a waiting list," Stiles said. This and the addition of new facilities in the last six years, such as Nutter Field House and the softball field, have resulted in fewer places to park.

"Parking has always been full," Stiles said. "The land is limited." One UK student said he has frequently experienced the hassle of finding a parking space before home football games.

"A lot of times I have had to park far away," said Jason Handy, a finance junior. "It is a great idea for people who don't have parking permits (to ride a shuttle to and from the games)."

With approximately 10,000 seats being added to the stadium, parking will continue to be a problem. Since LexTran, the public transportation service for Lexington/Fayette County, is funded by the city, it is the likely candidate to provide transportation for people to and from the games, Johnson said. "This is a good way to get the community working together."

By requiring fans to park and gather down town before home football games, Johnson said the program would serve as a boost for downtown businesses.

Gwyneth Paltrow and Joseph Fiennes are now dancing to the tune of 13 nominations.

INTRAMURALS

Games offer competition

Intramural basketball is now in full force, giving students and faculty needed outlet

By Jim Cook
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

One second remains as the ball leaves the shooter's hand. Everyone is silent as it rotates through the air, traveling for what seems like an eternity.

After moments of anticipation, the ball crashes back to earth swishing through the net as the final horn sounds. This heroic last second shot has given the home team a one-point victory and whips their fans into a frenzy.

While you may think Rupp Arena is the only place at UK where one can experience this type of excitement, UK intramural basketball offers students, faculty and staff a chance to be that hero making that last second shot.

There are 170 teams competing at UK's Seaton Center four nights a week. From fraternity teams to co-recreational teams, "anyone who wants to play and have fun can," explains Intramural Director Mike Taggart. "We currently have over 2000 students participating in our basketball league."

League games are currently being played from 5 to 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Following the end of league play, tournaments will begin the week of March 1 to determine division winners.

Teams are divided into one of three leagues: all male, all female and co-recreational. Each league is then split into divisions of fraternity/sorority, residence hall and independent. These divisions are split into A and B subdivisions so that athletes can compete against someone with similar experience.

Each game consists of two 20-minute halves with a three-minute break for half-time. The clock runs continuously except for the last two minutes of each half, during which the clock stops as in a regular college basketball game.

Undergraduate Assistant Jason Rader said the games aren't very long.

"Most games take a little less than an hour to play, so we can play five games a night," Rader said.

Starting next week, a ranking system displaying the top 20 teams can be seen every week in the Kernel until the season's end. This system will allow teams from different divisions to compare themselves against one another.

The computer ranking system distributes points for a win and points scored, and a bonus is given if a team wins by more than 25 points. Points are also given for a loss, though the amount is considerably less than those given for a win. Finally, teams have points taken away for each point the opponent scores in the game. Total point values vary depending upon which division and subdivision a team is in.

"I think it's great," said Jason Collins a finance senior. "I am looking forward to seeing how my team ranks among the school's best."

Admission is free with a valid student ID, but space is limited, so hurry out to see if one of your classmates can sink a game winning, last second jump shot and feel like Michael Jordan, if only for a moment.

COLLEGE NOTES

Cardinal sin should go punished

Matt May
KERNEL COLUMNIST

Notes from the apocalypse (a.k.a. a two o' straight UK losses):

How ridiculous is it that the Louisville men's basketball program was reinstated for postseason play last week, after the NCAA decided that, thanks to a technicality, the Cardinals can again entertain 'Big Dance' dreams?

In its original case against Louisville, the NCAA deemed the Cardinals' infractions "major violations," making them eligible of the penalty they were handed (three years probation and a one-year postseason ban).

The cause for the ban? Former U of L assistant coach Scooter McCray, who has since been moved into an administrative role with the school, first secured a discounted hotel room for the father of Cardinal star Nate Johnson. Then, when the bill for the room became delinquent, McCray paid the debt with his personal credit card to avoid eviction.

The Johnson scenario came on the heels of a two-year probation the Cardinals received for former U of L standout Samaki Walker's use of two cars during the summer of 1995. In its reversal, the NCAA said they did not give Louisville enough time to adequately respond to the "major violation" label, so they were reversing the original ban.

Louisville Head Coach Denny Crum said after the NCAA announced the reversal that "This has been something held over our heads. We are happy it's behind us."

Of course he's happy. Wouldn't you be if you were just let out of jail for free, because the prosecutor forgot to tell you in time that you were being charged with a felony?

The point being overlooked here by the Cardinal family is they still committed the crime. McCray still cheated by paying for the hotel bill, and it wasn't the first time the Cards had been in trouble. There was the Walker case, not to mention the women's volleyball program, which was basically given the death penalty for numerous violations.

Numerous violations equal repeat offender. This should not be forgotten in Louisville's case. Life isn't always fair, and for those Cardinal players that would have had to watch the Conference USA and NCAA tournaments from their couch, I truly would have felt for them. But what type of example does it set, when you can repeatedly screw up and break the rules, only to be let off the hook later on?

One can only hope U of L learned from this fiasco, and hopefully the people in charge of the Cardinal athletic department and men's basketball program can begin to get their house in order and teach their student athletes a serious lesson: don't cheat.

Thanks to all the upsets in college basketball. Trying to pick a top 25 is not the easiest thing to accomplish. UK loses two games, but nearly everyone else in the Top 10 underneath them loses also, so where do you drop them? And what about that second tier of teams (No. 15-30)?

I'll tell you one thing, there are a lot of teams the coaches of the top teams don't want any part of. Like Miami, Fla. or Utah or Ohio State or College of Charleston or Kansas. The list could go on and on, but you can be sure the UKs, UConn and Dukes of the world don't relish the possibility of hooking up with one of those squads come March.
