Comedy Is Final Play of Little Theater's Fourth Season

By MARY ALICE SALVERS

Brilliant acting and skillful technique characterized the opening performance of "Rebound," Donald Oden Stewart's clever comedy as presented last night at the Guignol theater.

"Rebound" is a highly sophisticated presentation of married life in a modern setting.

The play moves with a swiftness and sureness that gives it a professional atmosphere.

Worthy of special mention are the excellent supporting cast.

The smaller parts in the production were so well taken to stand out in an unusual way.

STUDENT COUNCIL ELECTIONS

To this vanishing semester there remain but thirteen school days. With the balloting for class officers long since past, with the balloting for the junior prom and the May queen election becoming an unheeded echo, and with students busying themselves in preparation for final examinations, campus politics is forgotten or disregarded. The ultimate cessation of student elective activities is being determined, however, by the fact that it has been brought about. Nevertheless, sometime during these remaining thirteen days, during this interim of political lassitude and disinterest, there is to be held an election whose outcome will have a greater influence upon the interests of the student body than that of any other election held during the semester. At this time the membership of the Men's Student Council for the next school year is to be determined. The importance of this election should be, but undoubtedly is not, self-evident to students of the university.

The power given to this group of men comprising the council is more than that given to any other student body. Their scope of activity, whether it be for the good of the student body or for the gain of a few, is campus wide. The officers of the council, the president, the vice-president, and the secretary, are ex-officio members of the board of student publications. This board governs the elections of the business managers and the editors of The Kentuckian and The Kernel. The council members officiate at all student elections. Class elections, prom queen elections, May queen elections—all are controlled by this group of students. Again, the council acts as a mediator between students and the university authorities in matters of policy and minor punishments. The council, in fact, is the governing body of students of the University of Kentucky.

In view of the importance of this election to all students, the disinterest it is accorded by most is unaccountable. There are seldom more than 40 ballots cast for any post on the council and, at times, there have been none. If the majority of students continue to feel that the election is of such mediocre importance that they need not attend the polls, the council will continue to be representative of the interests of that coterie of students who, realizing its importance, take advantage of their vote.

ATHLETIC TAX BILL ELIMINATED

Congress has decided against imposing any further burden upon colleges and universities, at least, so far as intercollegiate athletics are concerned. A copy of a telegram, to C. P. Miles, president of the Southern conference, received Monday by Prof. Enoch Grehan, chairman of the athletic council, assures the university council that the Senate finance committee has eliminated the section of the bill proposing the levying of a ten per cent tax on the admission fees of all intercollegiate athletes.

Such a tax would have been most detrimental to the welfare of college athletics. The bill, if passed, not only would have placed an almost unbearable burden upon the affected educational institutions by decreasing the revenue of their athletic departments—in many cases the only departments already not showing a loss—but also would have eliminated in a short time the revenue accruing from student subscriptions to athletic funds.

College athletic officials throughout the country protested Congress' proposed action. University authorities protested. Newspapers protested. And now that congress has seen fit to eliminate from its budget bill the undesirable tax, we offer all interested parties, and especially the athletic council, our sincerest congratulations.

IT'S OVER

Yesterday the world was gay,
And life was wonderful—
That was before I heard you say:
"We must part now; it's over."

But though the world may still be bright,
And life may still be joy,
Whenever daylight fades to night
It seems to say, "It's lover."

He jumps, he falls; he yells and bawls;
And he acts just like he's nutty,
He tears his hair, and paws the air,
And stomps the ground to patty.

But if you see him, fear him not;
He's harmless, gentle reader.
Because, you see, it happens here
Is only a cheer leader.

FORFEITS

Dear, you went away
And left me here alone.
You were not just
In leaving me as you found me.
Instead you took all the best
Of me and the finest.
You took nearly all my heart,
Leaving only a little to tease me.
You took my soul
And left me bewildered.
In fact, you have my life
Curled in your left palm
But I do not really want it back.

DOTES AND ANTI-DOTES

By CRAIG VAN DRUTEN

With all apologies to Miss Wehle, the horse and rider leading the May day procession created as much attention as the queen. The girl in the parade merely as a courtesy to the Altgamm lady.

Rebel, Dean Boyd's dog, drew his share of the attention. Ambling on and off the field of ceremonies and looking somewhat like a neglected hackney, Rebel displayed his exhibitionistic tendencies to the utmost.

Last year, an attendant, Queen Wehle wore a gown of yellow. Saturday, none of the attendants were dressed in the sunny color. Make of that what you will.

The Queen's crown was an innovation. It was of pearls, not quite real, and according to a whispering Altagamm, cost five bucks. The chapter is to donate it to Suiky circle for the queens of posterity. Considering that Altagamm have walked off with more of the May royalty than any other sorority, it may have not been such a bad move.

The pages this year were Willa Belle Smith and Elizabeth Hardin.

Deltau C. D. Blair is smoking Russian cigarettes. Questioned about his foreign brand, the ed mumbled they were cigarettes left over from rush week.

Yes, Geraldine, politics is politics.

Kentuckian elections were funny as usual. Rumors of a secret election flooded the campus. The Kernel received the election announcement after prom time. A boy independently telephoned the information to his favorite fraternity, and early the next morning posters, announcing the election were scattered throughout the campus.

The Kernel was not distributed late Friday morning, as Lady Insinuation would have it, because of political pressure, but because the sheet carried the announcement of the Sullivan Medallion winners. The paper was merely respecting the confidence of President McVey who requested this information not be released until convocation time.

ROAMIN' THE RIALTO

When a Feller presents a Friend As its feature presentation, opening Wednesday, the Strange has booked Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production, "When a Feller Needs a Friend" which co-stars the inimitable Jackie Cooper and the equally famous Chic Sale. Anyone to whom childhood is more than a dim recollection must revel in Jackie Cooper's performance as the crippled hero of this picturization of William Johnston's novel, "Limp". Chic Sale renders a fine interpretation of the lame boy's friend and confidant, Uncle Jonas.

The story details the efforts of Uncle Jonas to instill in this crippled child the elements of character which will enable him to overcome his terrific handicap. This strange comradery of "Limp" and "Uncle Jonas" is so depicted in the picture as to be one of the most poignant and stirring characterizations ever presented on the screen.

This picture comes to Lexington with the hearty recommendation of newspaper critics, boards of review, and theater-goers of the towns in which it has been shown; everyone appreciative of natural performances should be certain to see this latest effort of Jackie Cooper. It has all the elements of fine entertainment.

Night Court
The picture booked for presentation at the Ben Ali from Thursday to Saturday is "Night Court," a new offering in the innumerable stream of pictures professing to present the truth about the inner meditations of dishonest politics in our larger cities.

Fortunately the picture offers a strong cast, headed by Phillip Holmes, Walter Huston, and Anita Page. The story concerns itself with the conviction of an innocent girl on a vice charge, she being the unfortunate possessor of information detrimental to the continued operation of a dishonest night court judge, and the efforts of her chauffeur husband to obtain her vindication. The plot is an old one, but its reappearance in this picture is so concealed by the sterling performance of a capable cast, that its value as a worthwhile entertainment is enhanced rather than spoiled.

The picture is directed by W. S. Van Dyke, to whose genius the theater world owes "Trader Horn," "Tarzan," and "White Shadows of the South Seas." Although his medium is vastly different from those of the pictures named, Van Dyke acquires himself ably.

Of interest to those who read the smarter smooth paper magazines, especially those of the Conde Nast group, might be the knowledge that the story for this production was furnished by Mark Hellinger, rival columnist of the famous radio-caster, Winchell.

Did You Know That
Johnny Weissmuller, star of "Tarzan," is still two seconds faster than one hundred yards free style than any athlete who ever lived?

Anita Page was brought to the film colony by, and obtained her first movie role through, the efforts of Harry K. Thaw, famous—or if you prefer—inamous as the killer man rider, whose name is Roberts, is a Lexington horseman, and not, as some muggs have suggested, a circus performer. He rode in the parade merely as a courtesy to the Altgamm lady.

Mary Nolan is in reality Imogene Wilson, the stage dancer whose sole claim to fame is that she was rather vigorously kicked by Frank Tinney some few years back?

Warner Baxter is a native of Columbus, Ohio, and in the earlier portion of his career was considered a bust in stock?

Victor McLaglan once was a professional boxer and has to his credit a four round draw with Jim Jeffries, then champion.

In Spite of Lack Of P. A. Reptiles Show Plenty S. A.

By TUBBY ENGEL

The unique structure, the snake shed behind Memorial hall and near the Animal house, is one of the few such buildings in existence and its interest will be increased in the near future with the addition of the reptiles, which have been conspicuous by their absence.

The structure, designed by Dr. Alfred Brauer of the zoology department, has been built under his personal supervision. It is made of wire screen surrounded by a fence and has all the features contained in it to make a reptilian atmosphere. It has a small water pool, rocks, grass, sand, and a steel covered concrete vault, which will be the abode of the serpents when the weather is too severe for them outside. The pit was built to accommodate five hundred small snakes. The first one of the serpents was placed in the pit last Tuesday and an addition of several dozens will be made in the near future.

Work concerning the sex biology of snakes is being carried on by A. P. Taylor who will endeavor to discern the effect of castration on the animals. Later an attempt to cross the species will be made. One of the deepest problems confronting the zoologists is to distinguish the sex from the general appearance of the animal, which, up to this time, has given no definite clue.

As little work has been done on these animals, there are great possibilities in Mr. Taylor's research. The animals are rather easy to take care of, but the sliminess and the unpleasant nature of the creatures have held back the research in this field and thus the work in sex biology of snakes has been kept in its youth.

Mr. Forrest Mercer, head of the biology department at the Anchorage High school, also is doing some work on the subject. He is attempting to discern the effect of seasonal changes on the separate sexes of the animals.

For the present time, none of the larger and more dangerous species of snakes will be placed in the pit, because if they were allowed as much freedom as this structure will permit they soon would become too wild for handling and thus of little use to the experimenters.

It has been several years since an interest has been taken in snakes at the university, and now that this structure is completed, and the research is in full operation, the student body has at its disposal an opportunity to gain some knowledge of this interesting phase of zoology.

A total of 1,150 students at Columbia University participated in one or more sports during the fall intra-mural athletic program. The number is the largest in the history of the school.

A famous traveled writer says that the hardest thing to find on some South Sea islands is a South Sea Islander. We wonder if he has ever tried to find an athlete around an athletic club.

DO YOU INHALE?

Why are other cigarettes silent on this vital question?

Do you inhale? Seven out of ten people know they do. The other three inhale without realizing it. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question . . . because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? Remember—more than 20,000 physicians, after Luckies had been furnished them for tests, basing their opinions on their smoking experience, stated that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.

Do you inhale? Of course you do! So be careful. Safeguard your delicate membranes!
