Lorne House

Pointe-au-Pic, Que. Aug 16-17, 1912

Dear Mr B,

Thanks for your warning. I'm not aiming at " terseness", but clarity and now that I see it in type I have I believe made it crystal clear & logical. It seems to me to make more than one novel point & to be free from offensiveness.

Don't send me a proof before casting, but have it read carefully by this copy.

I like my title better than yours. I am not discussing Politics primarily but Emotionalism

And the title it seems to me ought to emphasize that, as mine does.

All right about Wilson & Roosevelt. We must get on without them. In putting in a substitute the look over the list & see whether we need to appeal more to men or women — I think perhaps the latter.

I am eager to see your Tammany editorial. Let's print all four & be in the political swim.

Too bad about Morley. He replies to my first proposition in "The Outlook for England" & not to the second for a elaboration of his Wimbledon address.

It is midnight after a most entertaining Café Chantant performance in which Jas. B. Townsend's talented children made high lights of success.

Ever of thee

R. J.
