

Mary Lamb sends her love to Miss Kelly, and she and her whole little household will be most glad to see her at Inghild, and still more if she will prevail upon Mrs. Boyan to accompany her; she has beds at their service and she hopes they will make what stay they can with her. A coach will bring them from the Bell, corner of Leather Lane, Holborn, we believe at nine in the morning, and set them down at the stage, on the Rhoad, next door to Mr. Westward's, Insurance office.

Emma joins us in kindest thanks to Mrs. Boyan for the trouble she took so kindly for her young friend, and we all wait in a pleasant expectation of it on day.

The morning coach, we find <sup>was</sup> got at 1/2 past 8, and the afternoon at 1/2 past 3 and 1/2 past 4, whichever may best suit the Ladies.

Pray come it is more than convenient I assure you in my own hand.
Ever yours affectionately
M<sup>r</sup> Lamb
