

C ?

To the Editor of the Literary Chronicle

Respc. Friend

A Recluse like myself, with leisure very inadequate even to my own little authorship, and so out of the way, of periodicals of all sorts, that I am principally indebted for the knowledge of what may be said of my trifles to report, might be supposed comparatively indifferent to praise or blame of which I am very likely to remain ignorant - But where I have more than once received what has appeared cordial approbation, I cannot but deprecate its reverse.

The Editor of Time's Telescope informed me some time ago that in the Chronicle's notice of that Volume for the present year I was represented as obtusely thrusting myself on the public notice. Perhaps the accompanying Vol. may confirm that impression - Allow me, however, to assure thee that as regards T. T. that I tried very hard to avoid doing anything in it myself, and of what was said of, or quoted from me, was perfectly ignorant till I saw it in print - As for the Volume now sent, without wishing to intrude myself on the Public, I should be sorry, by my silence, to seem ungrateful for its past encouragement - and should with equal regret incur the charge of presumptuous encroachment on a journal which like thy own has in repeated instances spoken favorably of me - Having said thus much I rely on thy Candour & Liberality and am thy respectful obliged friend

B. Barton

1824.

13517 (2)

To the Editor of The Literary Chronicle

To the Editor of the Literary Chronicle
no date.

Respected Friend

I dedicate to you a volume like myself, with leisure very inadequate even to my own little authorship & so out of the way of Periodicals of all sorts that I am principally indebted for the knowledge of what may be said of my trifles to reports, which I suppose comparatively indifferent to praise or blame of which I am ~~only~~ very desirous to remain ignorant. But where I have more than once received what has appeared and of the Chronicle I cannot but deplore its reverse.

The Editor of Time's Telescope informed me some time ago that in the Chronicle's notice of that volume for the present year I was represented as obtusely thrusting myself on the public notice. Perhaps the accompanying vol. may confirm that impression - allow me, however to assure ~~you~~ them that as regards T.T. that I tried very hard to avoid doing anything in it myself, & of what was said of or quoted from me, was perfectly ignorant till I saw it in print - and as the volume now sits, without wishing to obtrude myself on the public, I should be sorry by my silence to seem ungrateful for its past encouragement & should with equal regret view the charge of presumptuous encroachment on a journal which like thy own has in repeated instances, spoken favourably of me. Having said thus much, I rely on thy candour & liberality and am thy respectful & obliged friend

B. Barton