Cincinnati Ohio June 9th. 1880.

Mr. James R. Osgood,

Dear Sir:—

I forwarded you my manuscript for inspection, by express ten days ago; which I trust you have received and perused long ere this. I sincerely hope you will pardon my intense anxiety—bearing in mind it is my first little work, and you are the first publisher who has seen the manuscript, and the first consulted. I had hoped to receive a reply from you for the last three days. I trust the manuscript will please you. Please do not think me precipitate in urging very earnestly, an immediate reply at your very earliest convenience. I had so hoped all might have been settled satisfactorily by this time.

yet, I will probably receive a reply from you before this reaches you.

Knowing you have recently moved, I am wondering if the express company have delivered you the mss., or, if it has been delivered to the old firm.

Awaiting in the utmost anxiety
I remain, Yours Most Respectfully,

Laura J. Libbey
