Dear Page

The accompanying is not the sort of autograph I should like to have sent thee, as it was not the name of the writer, but I can vouch for its being the handwriting of my late & valued friend, Allan Cunningham, a Poet, Critic, Biographer, of no mean standing. I received it only the day before his death, and it enclosed the last letter he wrote, and as we may conclude the envelope was written after the letter, thou wilt have the last bit of Paper my poor friend put his hand to.

Thine affly
Bernard Boston.
