

Dear Sir,

Park Place Friday, 23rd March
1821

I have been confined for many weeks, & am still quite lame; otherwise I should have called on you I wish much for a little conversation with you; & if you could take your leaving the way of the new-Town, would be glad to see you at the Tax Office (being the nearest place) at any hour you would appear tomorrow or Monday. If you are still not strong enough for that, let me know, & I will call here tomorrow at any time most convenient. I never heard of you unless till I called at your shop on Wednesday or last Friday.

Yours truly
H. Mackenzie

I will send for the Annals in the afternoon.

Author of the Annals of Scotland