communication respecting her portrait, and hoped she would procure me a good inspection of the Engraving, if satisfactorily executed, that it might appear amongst the numerous portraits of persons eminent for their religious & moral qualities and literary attainments, that adorned the sides of my counting house.

Dear Sir

In the course of a week you will have the goodness to pay the Account for Judgment to Messrs. Koenig and Barnett to be sent by them to Peter Park in Bristol on my Account.

I will be obliged to you to send Copies of the Christian motto and the Friend Lemon neatly bound to Mr. Pakenhale Loho Square, from the Author. My kind Friend Sir Tho: Adair has sent his dear love to print my Portrait. Notwithstanding the unfavourableness of the Subject he is unwearily said to have succeeded not happily; It will be in the Exhibition and then is to be a Pint. I long visited the whole, but my partial friends wished to see some remembrance of me when I was no more. The portrait is for Sir Thomas, I see so much company, and amongst them foreigners, that I have given away all my own writings. Be so good as send me by the Bearer * 2 Copies Christian moral, * one of Poets.

- + one Practical Piety
- + 2 Moral Sketches
- + 1 Spiritures
- + 1 said Tracts
- + 2 Hints to a Purse
- + 1 set of Tales both volumes
- + 2 St Paul

In the last parcel I had, there was enclosed, only the first vol of Poets, and only the 2^d of Practical Piety, if these could be completed without much trouble I should be glad.

At Christmas please to give your two head Clarks a guinea each for me I know not what I shall do for one hour later to send in letters for my numerous Subscribers. I shall be it a little.

Happy you and your family enjoy your health I remain dear Sir

Sincerely yours
H. Moe

I have made at the same time informing her that the payment should be made as directed in the course of the next, and that her instructions respecting Mr. Moulton & Mr. Buckman should be attended to, and that they begged to return their best thanks for her obliging remembrance of them. — Enjoyed myself much gratified at her
